Players and Fans Meet Tonight

Quintes' Captain and Colleague Hope to Keep Team Alive

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Reporter

Senator "A" hockey in the city of Belleville appeared to have died yesterday with the announcement by owner Ken Murphy that he planned to fold the Quintes.

At least two people however refuse to believe that senior hockey cannot be supported in this city. Team captain Ralph Fiato and defenceman Lionel Conacher both insist citizens of Belleville senior hockey veterans, believe that there is still a possibility that the team can be operated successfully.

They are hoping that a new sponsor may come forward, but both agree that at the present time it is nothing more than that . . . hope.

For the present time, at least, the most likely source for a Senior A reservation appears to lie with the players themselves. "I've never heard of a situation where the players have taken over after a club has folded and made a success of it, but then I've never heard of a situation where a team was three places out of the basement and with a clear financial slate when the players took over. We could be the first team to try it," explained Fiato.

With this plan in mind they have called a meeting tonight of the Quintes' players and anyone else interested in maintaining senior hockey in Belleville. It is to be held in the Prince Edward suite of the Quinte Hotel and will commence at 8.30 p.m.

"I feel the players are willing that could happen to convince the other players that we can make a go of it is if we could have so many people show up tonight that we couldn't get them all into the room," said Fiato of the veterans.

The reaction of the players themselves to taking team control and operating on a share-the-wealth basis is somewhat mixed with all being determined, if today's meeting is any indication, to make a go of it. Ralph and I are all right for Ralph and I to operate on that plan," explained the veteran defenceman "But it's a different story for the guys from Peterborough. They have to travel back and forth for a game and practice every week, attend the out-of-town games and then maybe not get a penny at all at the end of the season."

Both the players have been told that if they operate on the share-the-wealth basis they will be responsible for all the debts incurred by the club during the season.

"He said that the players would have to pay the bills at the end of the season," explained Fiato of the former owner's actions.

Players will be frozen on the Belleville team until the outcome of the franchise is determined and may not be placed on the list of the Quintes or others in the league at this time.

Tonight's attempt by Fiato and Reilly is the first senior hockey meeting held to discuss the future future in Belleville; the response of fans and players to the meeting will show what up with five or ashes.

Arms Trade Parity Agreed

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and the United States agreed in 1961 to maintain a balance in weapons trade, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said Tuesday.

Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin added that a big surplus in Canada's favor has been generated by special circumstances—the U.S. demand for material in the Vietnam war.

The trade pact, known as the defence production sharing agreement, now is the subject of what Mr. Drury described in the Commons as delicate negotiations between Ottawa and Washington.

The agreement is one of the points of dispute in U.S.-Canada trade and economic matters raised by Washington. The original agreement was signed in 1959 by the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker and the trade balance arrangement was added in 1963.

Canada has run up a surplus of more than $500 million on two-way trade during the life of the agreement.

Mr. Pepin told the House the 1963 adjustment had to be interpreted in light of increasing U.S. military spending linked to the Vietnam war, and decreased military purchases by Canada.

Mr. Drury said outside the House the 1963 agreement was contained in a memorandum signed after talks between Ministers—and U.S. Defence Secretary Robert MacNamara.

He told the House in 1963 the pact called for "the maintenance of a general balance in our reciprocal cross-border procurement of equipment. . . .

American Position Now Less Inflexible

ROME (CP) — Finance ministers from 10 of the major non-Communist financial powers seem to have called a truce in their earlier war of words and shifted to a concerted, behind-the-scene struggle to eliminate severe international economic problems.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada said at the close of Tuesday's four-hour session the problems created by the U.S. decision Aug. 15 to impose a 10-per-cent import surcharge and suspend the dollar's convertibility into gold had not been settled.

Asked whether any progress had been made, Benson replied: "What's progress! We're still talking."

But U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Economics Minister Karl Schiller insisted some progress had been achieved.

Schiller said a "breakthrough" had been achieved Tuesday night and "we must now prepare our fields and bring in the harvest."

Giscard d'Estaing said the U.S. position now seems "rather less inflexible."

Italian sources said Connally had agreed for the first time in discussion of a hypothetical question what the Europeans would want if the United States rescinded a dollar devaluation in the exchange. This appeared to be the basis for the French minister's remark.

American sources confirmed that the discussions today included a number of hypothetical packages, but they would not say whether devaluation of the dollar was mentioned in this context.

Anthony Barber, British chancellor of the exchequer, was reliably reported to have told aides he now sees a 50-50 chance of a settlement.

Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta of Japan also told reporters that a breakthrough had been achieved Tuesday night in the sense that specific figures were being seriously negotiated for the first time.

Connally, this year's chairman of the group, told a news conference: "We had frank and candid discussions in depth and for the first time discussed details, the nuts and bolts in this complex issue."

The U.S. is insisting on a major upward revaluation of most major currencies, lowering of trade barriers against U.S. exports and greater sharing of Western defence costs in Europe for elimination of the surcharge.

Because has said the progress for revaluation does not apply to the Canadian dollar, now floating near par with that of the U.S., but Connally so far has not indicated any exceptions to his demands.

The European countries represented here, and Japan, are aware of the limited ability of the U.S. dollar in relation to gold as result of any general realignment.

Treasury Minister Mario Ferrari-Aggradi of Italy said any moves to improve the chronic U.S. balance-of-payments deficit must reach reason the American measures were introduced should apply only to the American current account and not the capital account.

The Italian minister said any future settlement should not be expected to permit unlimited U.S. investment abroad nor to prevent other countries raising certain barriers against such investment.

Canadian delegates, following a custom of Group of Ten meetings, declined comment on the Italian statement.

Canada Said Ready to Alter Auto Accord

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes External Affairs Minister Sharp as indicating in an interview that Canada is prepared to suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-United States auto pact.

"It is believed the suspension might last two years," The Star says.

The story quotes Mr. Sharp as saying Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help the U.S. ease its economic problems so that Washington can abolish its 10 per-cent extra duty on imports.

"The Star says Mr. Sharp "indicated the Canadian contributions would include" suspensions of the safeguards, agreement to increase the duty-free allowance on goods bought by Canadian visitors to the U.S. — now $25 every three months — and agreement to purchase more arms from the U.S. under the defence sharing agreement.

Irish Border Battle Fought Near Belfast

BELFAST (Reuter) — British troops and gunmen firing from across the border in the Irish Republic were involved in a major clash Tuesday night in which more than 400 rounds of ammunition were exchanged, an army spokesman said today.

The spokesman said about four gunmen opened fire on the troops with automatic weapons near the town of Castleberg, west of Belfast, while the soldiers were trying to recover a burned-out post office truck, which had been hijacked earlier.

With the soldiers pinned down, two scout cars were called in to give covering fire.

Although more than 400 bullets were fired by both sides, no one was reported injured.

It was the only major incident in a night which was relatively free of violence. Earlier Tuesday, a bomb badly damaged an electrical shop in Belfast, but no one was injured.

Prime Minister Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland said Tuesday night that the Irish Republican Army might try to step up its campaign of violence. But he said it is only a matter of time before the IRA is defeated.

He said that last Saturday's wave of violence in which three persons were killed and scores of explosions recorded, was only a temporary rallying of the IRA.

Addressing a meeting of his Unionist party, Faulkner said improved intelligence enabled Northern Ireland's security forces to move in daily on precise targets.

Hussein Declares Force Only Way to Settlement

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan called on Arab states today to mobilize their armies for a showdown with Israel "because force is the only means that can resolve the Middle East conflict."

The militant tone of the king's policy speech indicated he is moving closer to the thinking of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who said his country has decided to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict by armed combat rather than peace negotiations.

In a speech from the throne opening the Jordanian parliament, the 36-year-old monarch said that Israel "believes only in force, so force must be our way to peace."

Heavy security precautions were evident inside and outside the parliament building.

The king's speech came three days after the assassination of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Tell in Cairo.

Hussein insisted on Israel's withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and again promised Palestinian Arabs in the Israeli-occupied West Bank they would have the right to decide their future only after these territories are liberated.

Flowers Would Form $75,000 Screen

OTTAWA (CP) — Snow swirled and the wind howled around the Parliament buildings Tuesday, but inside the talk was of flowers and tropical plants.

At issue was the leafy decor of the finance department's swank new skyscraper in mid-town Ottawa, and the bill for same—$75,000.

"Extravagance of the worst order," said Alfred Hales (PC —Wellington) in the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

Mr. Hales, chairman of the Commons public accounts committee, a watchdog on the public purse, renewed his attack, last in the House of Commons.

"An extravagant waste of the taxpayers's money," he continued.

"Flower power," shouted another Conservative.

The committee debate began when Robert Bonnar, a finance department executive, said the $75,000 worth of imported plants was to blep guard what he called the "visual privacy" of personnel working in the open-floor quarters.

Mr. Hales was not mollified by Mr. Bonnar's assurance that the system of plants and screens will cost no more than walls would.

In the Commons, Mr. Hales said artificial flowers would be cheaper.

Pupils Find Moonvigil 'Game' Study in Institutional Living

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

How society organizes themselves and why their institutions take the form they do used to be a difficult concept to teach.

Until the Ontario Educational Communications Authority came up with a game designed to put the ideas across clearly.

The experimental program is now being tried in schools throughout Ontario, including one classroom at Queen Victoria School in Belleville.

The scene in the Grade 4 class for 40 minutes a day is chaos, and not even organized chaos. But that's the idea of the exercise — to put pupils in a setting that will allow them to build institutions of their own, see how they work and how people relate to them.

The gimmick is a game of let's pretend, now termed a "simulation game". The pupils put themselves in the role of the crew of a lunar research vehicle about to leave the moon due to a malfunction. Before anything can occur, they must provide for basic survival.

To help the teacher, who might have some ideas of his own on organization, out of the act, the pupils receive their instruction at the beginning of the class from television broadcast. The broadcasters are mission control, who radios the crew their specific position and assign it tasks to perform each day.

To get the point across that man must eat, and must organize to get his food, one group of pupils is responsible for food distribution to the crew. They hand out meal and chocolate bars, too, on instructions from the mission control television broadcast. Another group seeds and receives coded messages and a third group is responsible for health and morale.

"They're learning that if man is going to have his own needs met, he has to organize to do it," said teacher Martin Bond, standing in the middle of the room as bedlam surrounds him.

Teachers have been instructed to intervene only if mayhem threatens.

There's some cheating and pushing and bickering, but mankind has always had wars, says Mr. Bond philosophically.

As the class goes into its assigned tasks each day, the serious pupils go into huddles to plan their approach, the class clowns try to distract and the natural leaders emerge.

"What they are doing now is not valuable in itself, but discussing it later will be," says Mr. Bond. "For instance, those who give out the food discovered they had power over the others and the others found they had to do what those with power said."

To keep the simulation game going the discussions that follow the seven-day moon vigil classes are called debriefing sessions.

The sessions are intended to use the pupil's Moonvigil experiences to help them discover the processes by which institutions come into being, how they control individuals and how individuals can mold their institutions.

Finally, the pupils will put into the community on field trips to study the institutions familiar to them — St. John Ambulance, local government, even their own school.

All Systems Go

Operation Moonvigil, an experimental program to teach Grade 4 pupils how institutions serve society has involved Queen Victoria pupils in unique educational experiences. For the past week, Playing the role of survivors of a lunar vehicle crash, the team in charge of health and morale try to establish rest on one another.

Hotels Issue Warning To Under-18 Drinker

Things might be tough all over, but they are going to get tougher for minors looking into local bars in the future say members of the Belleville and District Hotel Owners Association.

Ken Murphy, owner of the Hotel Quinte, and a spokesman for the association said: "We don't want these young people. There is no way that a 16 or 17 year - old is ready to come into a bar."

Another spokesman for an out - of - town hotel said "These minors are just overgrown babies. They are bad for business and none of us (hotel owners) want anything to do with them."

At a joint meeting between hotel proprietors and the Belleville Police Department, representatives from most surrounding communities including Picton, Tweed and Napanee, urged that the police step up their checks on the rooms and give the owners more power in keeping someone from entering their rooms.

"As it stands," said Douglas Crosbie, chief of city police, the onus of the offence is placed right on the shoulders of the owner."

Under the Liquor Licence Act, the penalty for serving minors is not more that $1,000 and not more than three months detention or both.

"There is a genuine concern with this under age problem and the owners intend to do something about it before it gets out of hand," said the chief. "It's their livelihood at stake."

"We are not fortune tellers when it comes to figuring out how old someone is," said Mr. Murphy. "We can ask for an identification card and that's about all."

Mr. Murphy claims any penalty resulting from an offence of the Liquor Licence Act should be split between the hotel owner and the minor if the minor was not asked for identification. If the minor had false identification, he should get the entire fine.

Because of the concern expressed by the hotel association, Chief Crosbie said, "we can use a sort of preventive medicine for the problem."

The chief suggested that each hotel step up its checks at the door and likewise the police will visit the hotels more often.

Mr. Murphy claims "if I find any minors in my lounge or club, I'll charge them under the petty trespass act."

Under this act, an unwanted guest can be fined no less than $10 and no more than $100. He can be arrested and brought to court.

"Our liquor laws are not strong enough to deter minors from coming in," said Mr. Murphy, "We should make the fine big enough that no one would take the chance."

"We're putting a warning out," said a Belleville hotel owner; "We don't want the under-18 crowd."

Area Community Programs Offered Aid by Loyalist

STIRLING (Special) — The Stirling Community School Association was offered the assistance of Loyalist College at a meeting held last week. L. H. Cameron, field representative in the extension division of the college was present at the regular monthly meeting of the association to discuss the programs which could be offered by the college.

He said Loyalist was prepared to initiate night school programs and community school projects in the surrounding municipalities. The cost for the program and instructor would be recovered from enrollment fees as is done for programs already in operation in Belleville.

Four programmes were of immediate interest to association members Lois Benson, chairman; George Patton, principal of the Stirling schools and leaders of the already existing programs. Snowmobiling, photography, floral arrangements, and a program in human relations and leadership development were discussed by the group.

The four programs could be taught by instructors from the college with one session a week. The lessons would last through a 20-hour program. The fee would re approximately 50 cents an hour.

Three sessions decided to wait for material to come from the college and to make plans to advertise the programs they finally select.

Registration will be from the 11 community school programs which have been operating since September. The only problem with the adult sports night held Wednesday evenings in the senior public school, Because attendance has been so low since the start leader Steven Patrick cancelled the program until more interest was shown.

The new club will be starting this Wednesday in the senior public school's shop, The Stirling Snowdrifters, a snowmobile group, will be holding every month in the school at 7:30 p.m.

The organization of a snowgrader club was discussed at the meeting. The group, which is hoped to be formed by the end of December, has to make the decision as to, whether it wants help from the Loyalist College program or if it wants to work on its own. Also brought up for discussion was the installation of an ice surface and lights at the public school. It was decided Mr. Patton, principal of the school, would arrange to have the side of the school flooded and lights installed.

Youth Gets Injury Award

STIRLING — An 18-year-old Stirling youth has been awarded $8,034 for shotgun injuries he sustained two years a go which resulted in him losing his lower left leg.

The Ontario Law Enforcement Compensation Board has awarded the youth, Steven Hoyt, $7,500 in a lump sum for the pain and suffering and $534 for legal and travelling expenses.

On Dec. 30, 1969, he was hunting rabbits on a farm two friends when a shotgun carried by Michael Coughlin, then 15, discharged as both climbed a snow-covered hill.

The shot hit Hoyt in the left thigh and damaged the leg so severely that gangrene set in and the leg was amputated below the knee.

They noted Hoyt was in Grade 10 and lost two years of school plus the suffering of the loss of the leg, skin grafts, and pain from an artificial limb.

In Search of History

Researchers Mrs. Ruth Howard, right, and photographer Mrs. Mary Jane Hale, will visit several hundred Belleville homes in search of building styles and methods used before 1950.

Fire Protection Survey Being Undertaken Here

Acting on a letter from city clerk Adam Stalker, the Ontario fire marshal's office in Toronto, is conducting a fire protection services survey in Belleville.

In September, council requested that the provincial fire investigation office examine present standards of fire prevention for the city.

Fire services adviser Clyde H. Pope begins his study today, and expects to submit his statistics sometime after Christmas. He said the confidential report will deal with such fire-oriented facilities as water works, fire stations, traffic control, manpower and manpower training methods, communications and fire prevention related bylaws now in effect.

He explained his department has conducted some 500 surveys throughout the province . . . at no expense to the requesting municipality.

Over the past several weeks, Mr. Pope has surveyed several communities in Prince Edward County. He will be in Belleville from Dec. 1 to Dec. 22.

Researchers Catalogue Old Homes in Belleville

Some foundations and gothic arches; clapboard frame and early brick; general stores and Grandma's log cabin.

Canada's early homes are a mixture of styles as varied as the ethnic origins of the people who settled the land.

Books and pamphlets have been compiled over the years showing boomerous styles or building fronts.

The federal government, under the department of Indian affairs and northern development in 1970 decided to complete a detailed survey of early homes and buildings. A team of researchers was organized to begin what is now known as the Canadian Inventory of Historic Buildings.

Mathilde Brosseau, local field supervisor from Ottawa, has been organizing teams in field supervisor from Ottawa Valley regions.

This week marks the start of at least a month survey of Belleville's old abodes. Her assistants, who will take over the research program within the next week or two, are Mrs. Ruth Howard, researcher, and Mrs. Mary Jane Hale, photographer.

"From the rustic to the quaint, the team will be examining several hundred homes in Belleville. Roof and building shapes, window styles, construction materials and dressings of each home will be recorded.

"Eventually, these reports will serve people such as urban planners. Old sections of cities and towns can be interested with what they want to do now," Miss Brosseau explained.

A master computer in Ottawa will contain all information gathered by the numerous teams across the country. Based on architectural, geographic and historic importance, a second and more detailed study will begin in 1973.

Of the 100,000 dwellings involved in the first phase, only 10 per cent will be re-examined for further detail.

Contrary to present misconceptions, the federal government is not interested in either restoration, or provision of funds for upkeep.

With $2,000 reports now compiled, the job is half done. Books and catalogues of certain areas, complete with photographs and descriptions, will be published and made available for town planners and other related organizations.

Most of the research teams consist of students working summer shifts. During the winter, Canada Manpower gathers researchers. Local archives, historical societies, early municipal maps and planning boards are consulted for early records. In Ontario, buildings constructed before 1880 are the prime target. In western provinces, because of later settlements, the area of concern stretches to the pre-1914 era.

Miss Brosseau reports extremely favorable reception by both homeowners and historical organizations.

"Sometimes people are more co-operative than we need," she chuckled. "But they've all been most helpful."

However, one particular home on the border province comes to mind. Before proceeding with their survey, a team was confronted by a shotgun - waving resident. Before threats of pruning land expropriations, he wasn't having anything to do with anybody from the federal government.

Still in the planning stages is a third phase of research. When the 10,000 homes inventoried in the second survey are researched, a systematic and more detailed report on 1,000 homes, will be made. This latter program will include architectural drawings and expert information.

At present, the government is hiring only amateur workers to man their teams. For the second and third phases, Miss Brosseau predicts professional researchers will provide supplementary data.

Make Work Projects Start to Come In

PICTON (Staff) — Unemployment, "that painful disease in our society", now is being combatted by the federal government through two special employment programs, the local initiatives program and the Canada Manpower training - on - the - job program.

Clifford McCalpin, representative for the Canada Manpower Centre in Picton, yesterday told Picton Rotarians that already several hundred applications have been received and the first approvals made.

"It is possible to process these quickly because the department assembled a group of highly experienced people from its many local offices into one centre.

"What we are doing, of course, is responding to a very obvious need of thousands of Canadians, and that need is a job," he observed.

Mr. McCalpin noted that the imagination of Canadians has been harnessed for generating useful employment for the large number of persons who might otherwise be unemployed this winter.

He suggested the local initiatives program should not only provide income and satisfaction for those employed but also add to the quality of the communities where the projects are implemented.

The training - on - the - job program is designed to help and encourage employers to prepare for future expansion by hiring unemployed persons to learn skills, transferable between employers, under actual work conditions.

Mr. McCalpin said many of the applications received to date involve the renovation of and day care centres.

Road Hazards

Ideally, when bad weather strikes, motorists adjust their driving method to the conditions. From our own observations at least many do not bother. Those with big heavy vehicles seem to consider this very girth and weight as immunity from hard snow and treacherous ice, to the detriment of their own safety and that of other road users.

Sometimes, even due caution is insufficient, as a number of fatal accidents across Ontario in recent days testify. There can be other reasons too for loss of life, as witness an accident in our own area at the weekend. Equally, this is a matter for regret.

Generally speaking we believe there is a lot of gross carelessness on the roads. We have been witness to speeding and other hazardous manoeuvers which would certainly merit drivers being 'stopped and charged.

One potentially dangerous spot is the intersection of highway 14 and the Old Picton Road at Rossmore. Drivers coming off the Bay Bridge have a tendency to tailgate anyone slowing down to make a turn there. The OPP might well pay more attention to this particular stretch of highway and intersection.

As for those winter mornings the sand trucks should waste no time getting out to work. The overpass across the tracks near the Four Seasons for example was slippy around 9 a.m. Tuesday morning and one car skidded, fortunately without serious mishap. Overall there should be better behavior on the part of drivers, allied to strict vigilance by the police and quick attention to icy surfaces by road crews.

A Man's Man

Who is this man George Plimpton anyway — this intellectual well-bred type with the curious hybrid accent, a blend of cockney and New Zealand and New England? Hadn't we seen references to him before: an article about him as a bad guy in a Western, and then we had seen him in a trapeze act on the program TV. For the Truth, yet we were still familiar only with the name rather than the legend.

Then things began to fall into place the other night in "The Great Quarterback Sneak" on TV. For there was Plimpton, months of training behind him, hoping he would not get murdered but game to the end ("I'm not equipped for it either mentally or physically . . . but I'm trying") calling the plays as quarterback for the Baltimore Colts against the Detroit Lions at Ann Arbor.

A heroic figure . . . Walter Mitty . . . Everyman . . . an amateur among the professionals . . . pitting himself against the fierce fav of us care to look . . . a Francis Chichester of football and other disciplines discovering the "humiliation and the success; the violence and camaraderie, the skill and error; the confusion and lostwork;" and in the process discovering himself.

Through Plimpton talking with the men he would be playing with and against we learned that amid the game's violence, the body contact and the mental strain, the players are as one with themselves and the universe. They are doing their thing, they enjoy the hurt of it all, and at the most primitive level it is a safety valve. Tough men with a need to express themselves violently and this is the relatively harmless way in which they do it. Well maybe not so harmless: we saw recently where U.S. doctors have been monitoring the heartbeats of footballers as they played and the belief is that over a long period they could suffer heart or other damage. One player's heart stopped for two seconds after a body check; others show no signs of injury, although have we not indeed heard of players suffering heart attacks?

We still do not know all that much about Plimpton the man, the origin of that accent for example, but we do know (from a post-script to his football film) that for his next escapade he will be on camera safari in Kenya. What a man. . !

In the Same Mold

As a postscript to our piece about hijackers it could be said that the highwayman of an earlier era was one forerunner of this latter-day pest of the air routes. Of the highwayman however it may be said he was no more than a common thief and mischief-maker, with, perhaps a touch of adventure to him — a more clear-cut individual, that is, than the complex, near-psychopath type who diverts airliners to Havana and elsewhere.

Ottawa Concerned About Uranium in U.S.

By FARMER TURNINGTON

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said recently that one of the things Canada would like to discuss with the United States during the current heated over our trade and economic problems with that country, is the question of Canadian uranium exports.

The subject has not received very much attention there recently, although it was raised in the Commons by Dr. Maurice Foster, the member of Parliament for Algoma. Dr. Foster is particularly concerned about the uranium industry which has been hedged about with restrictions by the American Mining Congress by Wilfred E. Johnson, a member of the United States Atomic Energy Commission. Dr. Foster regards this speech as being potentially inaction the Canadian

Picton Cemetery Faces Acute Fund Shortage

PICTON (Staff) — Plot holders of Glenwood Cemetery, Picton, recently have been advised through circulation of a pamphlet that increased costs and income have made it impossible to meet annual expenses to maintain the cemetery in its present state. The deficit of the financial year ended June 30, 1971, is disclosed as an amount exceeding $2,000.

A special appeal for "a generous donation", to the Glenwood Cemetery Company's funds has been urged to permit needed improvements including road construction, renovation of walks and steps, restoration of the memorial pool, weed irradication and fencing against vandalism.

Glenwood Cemetery Company, incorporated by an act of Ontario legislature in February 1871 is celebrating its centennial year. Prior to incorporation Picton mayor Walter Ross called a meeting on July 11, 1870 and three years later, on Nov. 11, 1873, 150 acres of land were consecrated by the Right Reverend J. T. Lewis, Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario.

At an annual meeting of the Glenwood Cemetery Co. Ltd. held in August of this year shareholders learned that income for the financial year ended June 30, 1971, was $7,791.19, available to apply against cost of operation. Receipts included income from the sale of plots, opening graves, use of the cemetery vault and interest on the perpetual care fund totalling $3,731.

This trust fund of approximately $80,000, is administered by a Toronto trust corporation and Glenwood directors must preserve this endowment fund intact. Their authority is advisory only related to possible re-investment of trust funds in securities bearing a higher interest rate.

An auditor's report revealed the real cost of the year's operation was $9,825, which includes $7,640, for wages, $850, for repairs, grounds maintenance and maintenance of equipment and buildings. Seven other items of operational cost were covered by disbursements of $1,235.

The recurring annual deficit of more than $2,000, coupled with a demand loan note for working capital at the cemetery company's bank, prompted directors to meet this fall with William Aseline, inspector for the cemeteries branch of the department of financial and commercial affairs and Thomas Purdy, superintendent of Belleville cemetery and area representative for cemetery boards.

A proposed new tariffs schedule now is reported "in the hand of the designated provincial authority" for approval.

The pamphlet outlining the cemetery's plight stated: "Confirmation of a new tariff scale will not automatically, or in the near future, eliminate a demand note held by Glenwood's bankers; nor, will it immediately result in greater income than the weekly necessity of disbursements for wages and operating costs. Time will be required to build an excess of income over out-go."

Plot holders were urged to make donations toward overcoming the present deficit.

The pamphlet picturing toppled tombstones, a rotted wood en step and a debris filled pond stated that "beautiful Glenwood isn't beautiful anymore."

It was noted that funds are needed "to renovate and restore it to the beauty and dignity that it deserves."

The Special Employment Plan: Canada works

when we work together.

There's work to be done and the Federal Government's Special Employment Plan is putting $498 million to work to help create more jobs for Canadians.

Your community can benefit by creating a project that will bring more employment and improve the community through the Local Initiatives Program.

Workers may improve their skills or learn new ones through the extended Canada Manpower Training Program.

People with little work experience can receive training because the government will assist employers financially through the Training-on-the-Job Program.

Young Couple Honored By Community

Minto community hall was filled on Saturday evening when relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Art Evans (nee Jane Clements) on their recent marriage.

Ivan Sarles filled the duties of chairman and conveyed good wishes to the bride and bridegroom. Mrs. Harold Hoffert led in community singing with Mrs. Joe Forestell at the piano. Mrs. Gordon Bennett reported that gifts for 109 children at the Davis Inlet Residential School have been purchased and shipped in time for Christmas.

IODE members brought articles to the meeting for Layette which will be forwarded to the Northwest Territories in response to an appeal.

Acting on a suggestion by Mrs. Grenville Markle, preliminary plans were made for monthly visits by IODE members to the Deloro Nursing Home next year.

Union Report Film Shown

Several St. Paul's Anglican Church women were guests at the November meeting of St. Andrew's United Church Women.

Mrs. D. Vilneff opened the meeting with words of welcome to guests, visitors and members.

Mrs. J. Cook outlined the program for the evening and introduced special guests.

A filmstrip entitled Church Union Report was shown, giving the progress of plans for union of the two churches to this date. This movement began many years ago but in recent years has progressed to something more than a mere idea.

Special guests were Rev. J. Lombard of St. Paul's and Rev. J. Peters of St. Andrew's who were most informative in answering the questions of members and guests concerning future developments of union between the two churches — what changes have taken place, what we might expect to happen next and when we might expect it.

Mrs. G. Meikle, also present, extended thanks to the guests and tea with cookies was served by the UCW hospitality group.

A brief business meeting was held with members following the social half hour.

Ann Landers

Jealousy Not the Reason

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 22-year-old boy who would like your views on jealousy. Let me explain. Dad I just happen to have a terrific head of hair. I say so myself. I wear my hair fairly long—not to the shoulders, but the ears are covered and it's full in the back. My hair is neat and clean and well barbered. It looks nifty and lots of people have said so.

The problem is that my dad hates my hair and has made some nasty remarks about it. How dig this. It came to me all of a sudden when I looked at him the other night. His bald dome was shining under the living room light and it dawned on me that he may be jealous of my hair because he doesn't have any. Is is possible? Could this be the reason for lots of fights all over the country? Have I hit on something?—Mop Top

Dear Mop: Yup. It's possible. And a lot of dads with great heads of hair feel as your dad does. And so do their wives. How would you explain that?

Dear Ann Landers: I traveled 5,000 miles to visit my mother whom I had not seen for many years. My husband had never met him.

When we arrived we received a pleasant welcome from my brother and a warm welcome from whom I thought must surely be his oldest daughter. It dawned on me that my brother and his wife were divorced two years ago and he had neglected to mention it to the family. The young woman was his mistress.

I was shocked and hurt to learn that my brother and this woman are living together as man and wife. I realize this is strictly these business but I do feel he should have told us in advance. I was uncomfortable sharing their home and we cut our visit short. On the way to the airport my brother told me he had written to you and you advised him that his living arrangement was nobody's business—that he did not owe his relatives an explanation, or an apology. Is this true? I can't believe it.—Let Down And Disappointed

Dear L.D. and D.: The answer does, indeed, sound like something I would have said. But I seriously suspect your brother omitted a few vital facts.

Had he asked me if he should inform his family of the divorce I would surely have said yes—and I unquestionably would have told him not to invite house guests without letting them know in advance of the live-in arrangement with his mistress. To have sprung her as a surprise was inexcusable. The fact that he has a mistress is, however, his own business, and he owes neither you nor me an explanation or an apology.

Dear Ann Landers: Today it would almost everyone in our social crowd is getting divorced and remarried. Most of the marriages involve children—his and hers.

Let's face it. It's difficult to know how far a step-parent should go in disciplining a child who is present weekends only—or for two weeks in the summer. Furthermore, if "his" has children and "he" has children there is bound to be fighting. Who will mind the stepmother or stepfather who hops in on the side of his own.

This is a second marriage for both of us and I am keeping my fingers crossed. The only thing we fight about is our children and the fights are getting more hurtful. How I wish we have resolved the question regarding the kids before we decided to marry. We would have saved ourselves a lot of grief. Please print this letter for divorced people with children who are considering remarriage. It could prevent a second divorce. —Too Late Smart

Dear Smart: Here it is—and good luck to you, dear.

Figures of Your Mind

by JOHN CONNELL

Does love of statistics boost the ego?

YES, many people do get a satisfaction from keeping or citing statistics that frequently does give them a lift in ego. Expert "figure filberts" seem to be affected in most cases. They seem to be able to prove precisely the point they are trying to make by heaking it up with their own method of interpreting compiled statistics; and they take great delight in thinking they are confounding everyone with their expert analysis.

Is it immature to swear unnecessarily?

OBVIOUSLY YES, but that is only part of the answer. The person who swears when less offensive words could express his thoughts more precisely is also ignorant, inarticulate and inconsiderate of others' feelings. That last item might indicate that the swearer is inconsiderate because he may feel rejected by others, and he swears and curses, to convince himself that he really doesn't care what anyone else thinks about him.

Can a meek man stay married to a 'pushy' wife?

YES; just as long as his wife uses her naturally agressive nature in a subtle manner. Indeed a meek man may have been attracted to the girl who became his wife because he had unconsciously felt that she would supply the extra push he always considered in others but couldn't cultivate in himself. Of course, it takes more than their opposite natures for a man and a woman to remain married. They first of all must love each other.

That Wonderful Age of Ninety

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: A poem in our paper concerned two senior citizens of 90 years of age. If you are not submerged with poetry the following may add a little tenderness to all those reaching such a wonderful age:

Like a while candle in a holy place
So is the beauty of an aged face;
Like the quiet radiance of the winter's sun
So is a woman with few travail done.
Her broad gaze from her and her thoughts as still
As the water under a ruined mill.—Anon.

Dear Anon: Thank you.

Dear Doris: Please send me any material you may have on the so-called Generation Gap. —Trying to Bridge It

Dear Trying: Perhaps I should write something called Building a Bridge in One Easy Lesson. What I do know is this: That counsellors spend half their time getting confused teenagers and equally bewildered parents together—really together; on the same side when it comes to settling day-to-day questions.

Some of my social work colleagues argue that there always was and always will be a gap between generations — and why not? Should a man of 70 think and act as he did in the way he does? And does his son really want him to be as clueless as he was at this boy's age?

People are human whatever they are and we keep right on learning things about people and situations all life long. If we can share what we learn, we've got the edge on the fellow who can't.

We don't open up the flood gates by passing judgments—either 45 or 80. Just because in 1971 we have superior knowledge in our teen-age years, we still do not have the superior experience that piles up in older years.

I have three leaflets to send you on the subject: (1) Are You on Talking Terms With Junior? (2)Can You Tun In On Your Teen? and (3) Youth Conference. Each is 20 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: Over the years I have collected quantities of information for four family books; but no room for me, as my husband's. Now I'm fleeing back to two on my mother's side of the family. Father's is endless, but oh so interesting.

Once I was amongst discouraged because of certain revelations that were disheartening. Now, with more wisdom and understanding, I contemplate and correspond with pride and gratitude those who have rendered high service to mankind, and note with sympathy and more understanding (now) those who for reasons perhaps no one knows, have failed to attain their highest potential. How many really do? — Descendant of Adam and Eve

Dear Descendant: You have tackled the whole thing immediately. I couldn't agree more that we should try to understand, rather than censure the deeds of our no-account ancestors.

How can we tell what tremendous obstacles daunted the people who made no name for themselves? And, as Henry Van Dyke says, "There are some kinds of failure that are better than success."

Women Given 'Equal Protection'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has given women a legal mortar to attack —and knock down—any law that draws an "arbitrary" line between the sexes.

A unanimous decision Monday written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger was the first by the court to grant women the "equal protection" the 14th Amendment of the U.S. constitution has afforded blacks.

Some proponents of women's rights wanted the court to go further—to declare any legal distinction between the sexes unconstitutional.

The court did not do that in invalidating an Idaho law that gave men preference over women in being named to administer estates.

But under the decision, if a state legislature decides to treat women differently from men it will have to come up with an "objective" reason. And that, qualified legal sources said, may be difficult to do to the satisfaction of the court.

The ruling came on an appeal by Sally Reed of Boise, backed by the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation. She and her estranged husband, Cecil Reed, had vied for the right to administer the $1,000 estate of their adopted son, Richard.

State courts, using Idaho law chose Reed without any showing that he would be better at the job than Mrs. Reed.

The 14th Amendment was ratified in 1868 as part of the legal process designed to ensure that the states did not override the rights of newly-freed Negroes. The court has used it frequently to strike at racial discrimination.

Ironically, shortly after the court announced its decision Monday, a proposed constitutional amendment to guarantee women equal rights was rejected by a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

In its place the subcommittee approved 6 to 4 a substitute that prohibits legal distinctions between men and women except on the basis of "physiological or functional differences."

The proposed amendment cleared the House of Representatives last month 365 to 87.

TV Allows Them to Read

EDMONTON (CP) — To 10 youngsters at Queen Mary Park school, television is something more than cartoons and horse operas—it allows them to read.

Of the 10, in Grades 4 to 7, all one is registered as blind although there is a variation in the degree of sight they possess.

With the seeing machine, as it's called, they now can read about animals or sports or whatever they fancy, just like other kids.

The machine is a simple arrangement of components: a camera with adjustable zoom lens hooked into a regular television screen. A book is placed under the lens and a 15-power magnification appears on the screen.

"It helps a whole bunch," said Rickie Kramer, 13, who has no sight in his right eye and poor central vision in the other. "Now I'm able to read smaller books because the picture on the screen makes the words big.

"You don't have to put your nose right up to the book anymore."

Corry Stuive, 12, whose vision is limited to "shadowy figures" without thick-lensed glasses, said:

"We're pretty lucky. It's a really big help for small print things. We can take all sorts of books out of the library now that we couldn't before."

She now can use regular text books instead of having to rely on large-print books which "are expensive, hard to get and very Americanized."

The idea of the machine came from a magazine article Miss Rumeniok read which descibed the prototype built by a man with a vision problem.

HARDER HERE

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP)— A social consultant with a Dutch family service agency said during a recent visit here that she would "go out of my mind" if she had to handle the heavy caseloads local counsellors carry. Elisabeth Kesteloo said the national average in the Netherlands is about one social worker for every 5,000 persons. Two family counsellors are responsible for needs of a population of about 90,000 in the Brantford area.

Women's Institutes

TWEED — CHAPMAN WI

TWEED — The recent meeting of the Tweed - Chapman Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. P. C. Barnett, in Tweed. Mrs. W. J. Woods, president, welcomed the members and guests, while Mrs. Wilbur Bateman was convener for the program.

Mrs. Doris Lawrenson gave an interesting reading on "The History of Sewing". This included the fascinating story of the invention and first uses of needles, thread, buttons, fasteners and fabrics. Mrs. M. L. Lambert told of the sad case of a young pupil losing an eye and the efforts of the people to help. This was followed by a discussion on school insurance. Mrs. W. Bateman read a poem.

Mrs. W. J. Woods and those who participated in the needlework course displayed their embroidered place mats, totebags, pictures. This course was given by Miss Eleanor Flint of the Home Economics Branch, Toronto. Miss Flint interspersed her capable and skilful teaching with anecdotes of time spent in the Far East.

Mrs. Vera Ingles demonstrated the making of flowers and the spray - painting of leaves, grain and weeds. This was a most interesting demonstration and all were delighted with the generosity of Mrs. Ingles in donating three of her beautiful flower creations for draws. The lucky winners were Mrs. Bernice Reid, Mrs. M. McNeil and Mrs. M. L. Lambert.

The next meeting will be the annual Christmas party, which will be held in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, Tweed, on December 6 at 8.30 p.m. All members and their families are cordially invited to attend a potluck dinner, with turkey provided.

Club Activities

MOIRA BELLE TOPS

The Moira Belle Tops Club met at the Recreation Centre recently with 28 present. The total weight loss was 19 pounds and there was a gain of seven.

Feathers were drawn and each was to help the other lose until the Christmas party. The leaders offered to purchase and prepare the turkey for this event. A prize will be offered for the one losing the most between Dec. 15 and the first meeting in January.

Following a short business period an auction sale was held.

KINETTE CLUB

TWEED — The November meeting of the Tweed Kinette Club was held at Hotel Tweedsmuir, Tweed, on Monday, November 15, President Carol Norris welcomed two new members, Mrs. Corley Hughes, wife of Kinsman Gerry Hughes, and Mrs. Liz Walker, wife of Kinsman Bruce Walker.

A report on the canvass for the Blind (CNIB) was given by Kinette Faye LeSage and to date it totals $644.00.

The Christmas basket draw was discussed and Kinette Carole Bleeker will be placing tickets for sale in the various stores. A letter was received from Kinette co-ordinator Dianne Boues, of Ottawa, saying she and her husband would be attending Tweed's joint meeting with the Kinsmen in January.

Kinettes Marilynne Lane and Carole Bleeker were appointed conveners to arrange for the induction ceremony to take place then.

It was decided to move the December meeting (regular) forward one week to December 13.

UCW MEETINGS

EASTMINSTER UCW

Approximately 125 members and guests enjoyed a Hi Neighbour party arranged by Eastminster UCW when all enjoyed a potluck dinner.

Following the meal a talk was given by Paul Bernard, a teacher of interior decorating at Loyalist College. Mr. Bernard spoke briefly on the history and background of design and decorating and gave many reasons for using the services of a professional decorator. He had on display carpets, draperies and wall coverings.

A question and answer period followed, during which time the speaker gave information on the quality of carpeting; how to choose the right carpet or draperies, and how to properly paper a wall.

During an intermission, guests and UCW members were reminded of this year's performance of the Christmas pageant, Star of the East, which will be jointly sponsored this year by the Belleville Choral Society and Eastminster Church. The event will be held at Centennial Secondary School on December 12 at 7 p.m.

Rednersville Women's Institute Bases Program on Historical Research

REDNERSVILLE WI

The Nov. 25 meeting of the Rednersville WI was held at the Albury Community Centre and had a good turn-out.

As the program was to be on historical research members were asked to bring a picture or clipping for the Tweedmuir history book for the roll call. The result was very interesting — quite a few pictures of old-time scenes and school pictures from years ago were displayed.

The new tailoring course was discussed and it was emphasized that those wishing to take the course should attend the pre-course meeting at Wellington Hall on January 5 for further information.

All were reminded of the Christmas party at the County Home on December 14. It is hoped members from all branches of the WI in the County will go. Gifts and a dish of food are to be taken. The party begins at 4.30 p.m.

A letter from the boy in Hong Kong, sponsored by the group revealed the fact that he is almost 18; also that he enjoys collecting stamps.

Several members said they planned on sending him some stamps.

It was suggested that Christmas cards be sent to all members 75 years and over.

The next meeting will be the Christmas party on December 16.

Mrs. H. Townsend led the program on historical research. She had asked Mrs. E. Young to read their interesting history of the Young family and of the farm that has been in the family a long time. She also showed the Crown deed for the farm and pictures taken years ago.

For a change, Mrs. D. Redner had been asked to give some current events. She had chosen items of quite varied interest — one in particular stating that smallpox vaccinations are often more dangerous now than the disease itself. She also read an article about Dromore, Ireland, which is a peaceful village just 11 miles from Belfast, where there is so much violence. The writer described Dromore as "a drop of sanity in a sea of madness". Mr. and Mrs. Redner had been in Dromore when they toured Ireland a few years ago.

Mrs. L. Bedford read an article about a farmer's club from a 1909 copy of the Picton Gazette. It was mentioned that it was from the Farmer's Club that the Women's Institute got its start. Also Mrs. R. Redner read an excerpt from a 1910 copy of the Picton Gazette describing a meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute.

Mrs. C. Vanclief thanked the people who provided the program and also the hostesses and lunch committee.

The lunch was delicious and all enjoyed the social time that followed.

Statistics Show Per Capita Income Up 10 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's per-capita national income has risen by 10 per cent this year, to $3,300 for every man, woman and child compared with $3,000 last year, figures released by Statistics Canada show.

The bureau Tuesday said the gross national product—the total value of all goods and services produced by Canada—rose to $83.7 billion for 1971, based on the country's performance in July, August and September. The comparable figure one year ago was $74.9 billion.

The biggest component of this is the net national income—wages, salaries, supplementary labor income, military pay and allowances, pre-tax corporation profits, farm income and small business income, after deducting dividends paid to non-residents.

The national income for the estimated population of 21.6 million at June 1 this year was running at an annual rate of $71.5 billion in the third quarter of 1971. This compared with $64.2 billion for 21.4 million inhabitants last year.

Statistics Canada said one of the most notable features of incomes recorded in the GNP accounts this year was a rapid growth in corporation profits, which were tightly squeezed during the anti-inflation price restraints that had their biggest bite in the final months of 1970.

Pre-tax corporation profits were running to $7.6 billion last year, and then sank to an annual rate of $6.7 billion in the final quarter of 1970. They bounced back, by mid-1971, and in the third quarter of this year were running to $9.6 billion.

The Economic Council of Canada, in a special report Monday, said business should be expected to restore its profit margins as quickly as market conditions would permit, and this pressure, might ring renewed inflation.

Statistics Canada said corporation profits were up 7.6 per cent in the first three months of 1971, rose 10.1 per cent in the second quarter, and up by 9.3 per cent in the third quarter.

Another important factor in higher national income was a revision the bureau made to its earlier-reported estimates of labor income.

Unusually large retroactive pay raises made by several governments contributed to the increase.

Wages, salaries, supplementary labor income, and military pay and allowance now are estimated to be running to $53.4 billion a year, compared with $48.1 billion in 1971, based on third-quarter performance.

After reporting those and other figures on growing incomes, however, Statistics Canada said there hasn't been nearly as great a growth in after-tax personal incomes.

So-called disposable personal incomes—that is, personal incomes left over after taxes—made impressive gains of three and 4.1 per cent in the first two quarters of this year, but slowed to a 1.4-per-cent gain in the third quarter.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: Where and what is Matheson Hammock in Florida? Also, where is the Parrot Jungle? Are these places accessible by car?

ANSWER: Both of these places are readily accessible by car from Miami. Matheson Hammock, virgin Florida forest and beach, is a beautiful county park on Old Cutler Road, (Coral Gables) south of Tahiti Beach. Along the trails west of the highway strangler figs, liguum vitae, gumbo limbo, mastless mahogany, cassant trees and unusual shrubs grow in abundance. Picnic grounds and beach are in the east section which extends to Biscayne Bay. There is no charge for this.

Parrot Jungle, 11 miles south on Red Road, exhibits a large collection of parrot-type birds in a natural tropical jungle of huge cypress and live oak trees. Colorful macaws, free to fly as they please, will often perch on a visitor's arms for pictures. Hourly, in the "Parrot Bowl, they perform such tricks as riding a bike and roller skating. A winding trail bordered by flora leads to the cactus ravine and Flamingo Lake. More than a hundred flamingoes roam two acres of gardens. Open daily 9:30 to 5 p.m. Admission is $2.75; children age 6 through 13 years, $1.50.

QUESTION: What is the best way of getting to Quebec's Eastern Townships, and what is available to interested skiers?

ANSWER: Take highways 401 and 40 into Montreal, then the Autoroute east to Magog-Mont Orford area. There are a number of excellent skiing locations within range. In addition to Mont Orford there are Bromont at exit 44 south on Autoroute, Mont Echo and Mont Sutton off Highway 13 south of Cowansville, Owl's Head near Mansonville, on Highway 20, and across the Vermont border, Jay Peak, south of North Troy Vermont. Good accommodations are available in the places mentioned.

QUESTION: Can you tell me where the Camelback Ski Area is in Pennsylvania and the best way of getting there? Also, are there good living accomodations and restaurants nearby?

ANSWER: Camelback Mountain and Ski Area is located in Big Pocono Skate Park west of Tannersville, Pa. The ski area includes 12 runs, five lifts including a double-chair and a triple chair, and a ski school.

From Belleville, take Highway 401 to Thousand Islands Bridge, Route 81 to Scranton, Pa., and Skate Route 307 and U.S. 611 south from there.

There are a number of good motels and lodges close by in Mount Pocono, Tannersville and Stroudsburg, most of them with restaurants. A popular restaurant is The Old Heidelberg on Route 611 at Swiftwater, Pa., between Mount Pocono and Tannersville.

QUESTION: I am planning on driving to Halifax. Does the car ferry operate in winter from Saint John, N.B., to Digby, N.S.? At what times does it leave Saint John?

ANSWER: CP Rail's Princess of Acadia makes two round-trip crossings per day from Saint John to Digby during the winter, Monday to Friday inclusive it sails from Saint John at 10:30 a.m. and 10:00 p.m., Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. and 9:00 p.m.; Sundays at 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. The vessel has a capacity of 650 passengers and 159 automobiles, provides a lounge, cafeteria and bar and has up-to-date hydraulically - operated bow and stern doors to lend speed and flexibility in handling of automobiles. Fares are passengers $3 one way, $5.25 return; automobiles, $10 one way.

Goods Recovered, Charges Laid

A routine check of an automobile Monday morning, has led to the arrest of two youths found in the possession of approximately $5,000 worth of goods reported stolen from Circle TV on Coleman Street.

Constables John Ashley and Merle Foster discovered the youths, transferring goods from a car to a house at 527 Sidney Street at 10.15 a.m. yesterday.

The officers discovered stereos and components in the house and lying in a nearby field.

Police report a third person escaped before arrests were made.

Entry was gained by removal of a hasp on the door of the shop. It had been replaced.

POWER PSYCHO — CYBERNETICS FOR YOUTH — Maxwell Maltz, M.D.

Dr. Maltz has helped many people with his theory of psycho-cybernetics — really steering control to a useful goal despite negative feelings. He points out that life is a struggle for everyone. The objective of his book is to help one live more fully, build success habits while young; particularly he emphasizes one must live with enthusiasm.

CASSEROLE TREASURY — Lorenzo R. Brunner

This is a revised edition of an earlier book published six years ago. There are over 600 casserole recipes from various countries, great chefs, and peasant kitchens. There is a section on soups and chowders and one on desserts that lend themselves to casserole preparation and service. Many delightful buffet casseroles are included.

ELEANOR AND FRANKLIN Joseph P. Lash

Throughout this story the human side and history interweave and interact. Eleanor Roosevelt's anguished childhood is told with marvellous delicacy and insight. So is her courtship, highlighted by the letters which this shy young girl wrote to her princely suitor. This is the real story of a human relationship, fascinating and moving in itself and supremely important for its influence on the destiny of the nation and the world.

CURIATE — Michael Kennedy

With access to Sir John's papers, Michael Kennedy reveals much that is not known about Barbirolli: the details of his feud with Beecham; why he remained over a quarter of a century with the Halle, what his career cost him in terms of health. But Barbirolli's famous humor is present throughout in a liberal sprinkling of vintage anecdotes.

FOOD THAT HEALS, SCRIPTURE: MENNONITE COUNTRY COOKING — Edna Staebler

An immensely popular and wonderful collection for appetites of all ages, drawn from traditional Mennonite recipes and spiced with warm, humorous anecdotes of the author's visits in cosy country kitchens. Such mouth-watering delights as sour cream salads, Dutch apple and shoofly pies, potato dumplings, maple syrup cake, and pickled baby corn will tempt any cook who would like to try something different but easy to make.

School Records To Be Checked

From the standpoint of traffic control, the William R. Kirk School at 281 John Street, is to receive the same consideration as other schools in the city.

As a result, signs requesting no parking on the street opposite the school during school hours will be erected as well as warning signs advising that there is a school in the district.

The request for the signs was made by Mrs. Katherine Fryer, principal of the school, who noted that there were 381 pupils loading and unloading from buses in front of the school.

The request was passed along to the traffic and light committee which directed that the signs be erected.

Purse Snatched

For the second time in two weeks, a woman pedestrian has been the victim of a purse snatcher working Dundas Street East.

Monday, Mrs. Melvin A. Fulford of 25 Union Street, was walking along Dundas near Ann Street, when a youth ran by her and grabbed her purse.

Most of the contents fell to the ground, but the assailant managed to get away with the purse. He ran south on Pinnebery Street.

Described as a male, white, five feet six inches tall, approximately 16 years of age, he was wearing a blue jacket and a blue toque at the time.

Mrs. Fulford told city police the youth, at no time, pushed or touched her.

On Nov. 16, Mrs. Mary Smith, 78, of 133 Charles Street, was jostled by a youth who could fit the same description. This grab was made at the corner of William Street.

Surgical Cement 'Milestone'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The U.S. government's recent release of a new surgical cement has opened up "a completely new milestone chapter" in reconstructive bone surgery in the United States—beginning with improved total artificial hip replacements that could benefit at least one million Americans.

The "methacrylate" cement also may lead to artificial shoulder and knee replacements.

This was reported Monday to the American Medical Association by Dr. Roderick Turner of Massachusetts General Hospital who expanded on the report at a news conference.

He said the newly-approved plastic cement now makes it possible for orthopedic surgeons to perform a kind of "cement hip-socket" operation originally pioneered and widely used in Britain with startling success.

The operation is designed to aid persons afflicted with diseased hips resulting from osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, congenital dislocation of the hip and certain other conditions.

The operation involves inserting the cement—while still in dough form—into the hollowed-out hip socket and moulding it to form a cup before it hardens. The cup forms a receptable for a ball-topped metal device inserted in the thigh bone and completing the ball-and-socket hip-joint.

School Gets Parking Signs

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — A research assistant from the Ontario Institute for Studies and Education will make an inventory of old county school records now stored in the vault at the offices of the Prince Edward County board of education.

Prince Edward school trustees agreed to the proposed inventory after discussing a letter explaining that there is evidence a number of old school records were not transferred to county boards and, in some cases, now are for sale in second hand book shops.

Business administrator for the Prince Edward County board of education E. A. Shortt said that some county schools turned in very complete records when local school boards amalgamated two years ago. Others provided incomplete records for storage in the vault at the new board offices.

Board chairman George Flower declared that one of "the pressing needs" for these records stems from the fact that many persons reach pension age and require verification from former school records to obtain proof of age.

Mr. Shortt confirmed the board receives "a lot of requests of this nature". He added that the major problem however, is the lack of old blueprints, deeds and easements. Copies of these can be obtained at the registry office but are missing in some cases, from old school records.

Trustees agreed to have an inventory taken to establish which records are incomplete.

Sewer Saving 'Year's Best Move'

TRENTON (Staff) — Councillor F. J. Ash, in assessing council's performance in the last year, determined that the action taken to have the works department install the Front Street sewer was "the best decision of the year."

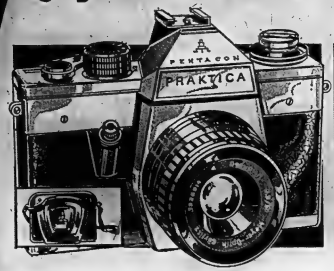
Two outside tenders set the costs for the project in the $170,000 bracket.

The town's works department under acting commissioner of works Arie Hoornweg completed a job including some extras for $119,000.

The saving of approximately $50,000 was brought to light last night in council discussions about a bonus of $7,500 a year for Mr. Hoornweg, retroactive to Aug. 1, while he serves in the acting capacity.

The motion effecting the bonus was tabled for two weeks to permit Councillor Paul Tripp extra time to study the proposal.

EGG OF PLENTY



PITTSFIELD, Me. (AP) — Policeman John Curtis says he has no idea who planted the nest egg in his ben house. But he doesn't believe in hens laying golden eggs. His daughter, Kathy, 10, said that when she went out to collect the morning eggs she lifted a nesting hen and there it was—an egg wrapped in a $5 bill and tied with blue ribbon.

Heed People Obote Said

KAMPALA (AP) — They are still selling a book entitled Thoughts of An African Leader by Milton Obote, Uganda's exiled president.

One of the many thoughts embodied in the little book is that African leaders must always listen to the people. It was expressed in a speech Obote made on Africa Day, a few months before he was overthrown for not listening to the people.

"Let all the leaders of Africa submit themselves to the masses," Obote said.

When the army took over the government Jan. 25, one of its many complaints was that Obote for eight years had not submitted himself to the masses in a free election.

An army manifesto said that Obote, far from listening, suppressed the views of many people; that he ignored widespread dissatisfaction over an indefinite state of emergency in the country and his powers of preventive detention; that he failed to heed protests about corruption, tribalism and crime.

Gen. Idi Amin, army commander who took over from Obote, has not set a date for elections, but he has been doing a lot of talking and listening.

He has been flying to all parts of the country, addressing meetings, attending churches, talking to farmers, reassuring the citizens and just listening. In a country where the news is broadcast in 17 languages this is no job for an idler. Amin speaks a half-dozen languages, including English, the official language here.

Obote had become increasingly dictatorial, diplomats say. He hired a public relations firm to polish his image as an African leader. He was one of the most aggressive opponents of British sales of arms to South Africa and led the attack on Britain at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore.

He was about to return to Uganda when the army struck. There were few casualties. Uganda Radio gave the coup a groovy touch by broadcasting "Yes, We Have No Bananas" and Andrews Sisters records.

The Uganda government offers $130,000 to anyone returning him to Uganda alive. President Amin said he would be personally responsible for Obote's welfare if he chose to return.

Fears were expressed for a few months that Obote was mustering a guerrilla force on Uganda's borders. The army rounded up about 30 young guerrillas, led by a woman and paraded them in Kampala. President Amin sent them to jail, and the guerrilla scare seems to have subsided.

The new president, once heavyweight boxing champion of Uganda, has some problems. His neighbor, President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, refuses to sit at the same table with him. Nyerere is a close friend of Obote and urged the former president to go to the Singapore conference which facilitated his downfall.

Nyerere's hostility complicates Uganda's membership in the East African Community of Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda. Under its umbrella, the air, railway, harbors, customs systems of the three former colonies are managed jointly.

President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya has taken a much more friendly view toward Amin's coup, and this is vital for Uganda.

The finance minister, Emmanuel Wakhweya, says Uganda was heading toward economic collapse when Amin stepped in. Obote built up the debt to $300 million and foreign investment was drying up as a result of nationalization measures.

Amin has eased this program, to the applause of the business community. Some 80 leading companies were under orders to transfer 60 per cent of their shares to the government. Now banks, insurance companies and some industrial firms are required to accept government participation, but only up to 49 per cent.

BCI Senior Girls Gain Berth in COSSA Finals

Slackened pace proved no problem for the BCI seniors in the final game of the Bay of Quinte girls play-offs.

The Collegians coasted to a 33-28 win over Quinte to give them an over-all edge of 105-49 in the two game, total points series.

Marilee Jones connected for 11 points in last night's contest to lead the BCI scorers in both playoff games. She stopped a total of 23 points in the Collegians opening 73-31 win.

Angela Murray added eight points to the winning effort with Dorothy LeBarron counting five.

Dianne Kerr, counted four points, while twin sister Deborah was forced to miss the game with a foot injury. The Collegians now travel to Peterborough Saturday for the COSSA championships to be held at Crestwood Secondary School.

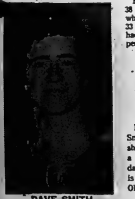
Whisker Away

TORONTO (CP) — Cliff Thorburn came within a whisker of tying a world record Tuesday night while taking four of five games from Ken Shea of Dartmouth, N.S., in the North American snooker championships.

The Vancouver player ran a 91 in the third game of the night, missing by nine points his sixth century run of the tournament. The pink ball just rimmed the pocket, and sat on the edge.

Control Trouble



Dianne Kerr of BCI and Quinte's Janet Whalen battle for control of a rebound in the final game of the Bay of Quinte senior girls basketball play-offs held at Quinte Secondary School Tuesday. BCI emerged with a 33-28 win to take the series by a 106-49 margin and advance to COSSA this Saturday.

Smith's Goal Ties Kingston

"Sudden Death" Smith struck the Kingston Frontenac in last night's 5-5 tie with the Belleville Fairways in an Eastern Ontario Junior B League game in Kingston.

Actually, "Sudden Death" Smith is the name of Dave, but after scoring in the final minute of the game to earn Belleville's split the nickname could be readily applied.

DAVE SMITH

The right-winger's goal at 19.13 of the final frame on an assist from John Mulvihill earned Belleville's deadlock.

It was the second goal of the game for Smith, who also earned an assist. Mulvihill and fellow defenceman Peter Ackerman each connected for a single tally with the other score going to Mark Woodward.

For the Frontenacs it was Bruce Jennings, Dave Johnston, Kirk Twigg, Tim Bryant and John Murray looking after the scoring.

The game was tied 1-1 at the end of the first period and 4-4 at the end of the second before Murray's goal had sent the home team into a 5-4 lead.

Bob Harrison turned aside 38 shots in the Belleville goal while Dave Dungey kicked out 33 for Kingston. Both Fairways had three of the game's eight penalties.

Royalty Roasted

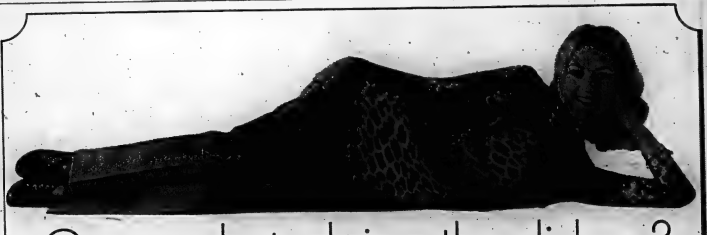
That's related Chairman George Hobbs of the British Show-Jumping Association, is "a load of rubbish."

Anne was voted British sportswoman of the year after winning the European three-day horse trial championships in September and is considered a favorite to represent Britain in the tough Olympic event in Munich next year.



"I certainly would not like to see her picked for the Olympics despite the way the press is clamoring for it," Smith said in a dinner speech.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace said: "We cannot possibly comment on these remarks."

Guess who's doing the dishes?
For years, doing the dishes has been one of life's necessary evils.
But now, because of automatic electric dishwashers, more and more people are finding out it's an unnecessary evil.
Consider some of the things an automatic electric dishwasher can save wives from. Things like: the dreary routine of washing and drying pots and dishes day after day; the worry of dishpan hands, the after-party aftermath; and the hours spent doing dishes that could be spent in a hundred-happier ways.
Consider this, too. A lot of dirty dishes come with the joys of Christmas. So what could make a more timely gift than an automatic electric dishwasher?
See your appliance dealer soon about the new automatic electric dishwashers. They're not called The Wifesavers for nothing, you know.

Angels Get Cardenas Fregosi May Leave

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — General manager Harry Dalton, who constructed a powerhouse in Baltimore, now is cleaning house in California.

The former Orioles' front office boss, famed for landing big talent and building championship teams, took only three weeks in his new position with the Angels before making a deal.

"With the acquisition of Cardenas, that makes Jim Fregosi available to be traded," said Dalton, who says he would deal the former American League all-star shortstop for "anyone who can help us."

The Cardenas-LaRoche deal was the lone major league trade Tuesday after an explosive opening-day session Monday that involved 13 players in three lightning trades.

"I know Cardenas is a good player," said Minnesota manager Bill Rigney, "but I felt we really had to do something about our relief pitching.

"We need someone to get the other side out in the ninth inning. And LaRoche just may be the best left-handed relief pitcher in the American League."

LaRoche has won nine games in two major league seasons, including a 5-1 mark last year that featured nine saves and a 2.50 earned-run average.

The 25-year-old Cardenas has long been one of baseball's premier shortstops who hits with authority. The 29-year veteran, who spent his first nine seasons with Cincinnati Reds, drilled 18 home runs last season while batting 2.64, two points over his lifetime average.

The Angels were prudded to deal for a shortstop because of a heel injury that considerably slowed Fregosi.

"Fregosi could go to third base now," said Dalton, "or he could go to first base.

"Then, too, I might be able to make a deal for him."

The Angels' new GM has expressed an interest in Baltimore's slugging Frank Robinson, who helped the Orioles win four American League pennants and two World Series in Dalton's regime.

Maravich Isn't Only Sick Hawk

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pete Maravich apparently isn't the only one ailing on Atlanta Hawks. The entire team is suffering.

The Hawks' National Basketball Association record slipped to 5-17, the worst in the Central Division, when they dropped an 86-85 decision to Chicago Bulls Tuesday night. The setback was Atlanta's ninth in a row, their longest losing streak since setting the league 25 years ago.

Maravich, sidelined with mononucleosis early in the season, has been slow coming into form. He played 24 minutes against the Bulls, but scored only eight points.

Chicago's Tom Boerwinkle rebounded at 23-83 deadlock with two free throws with 2:29 remaining and Jerry Sloan's foot shot with 1:27 left was the decisive point as the Bulls posted their eighth victory in nine games.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Golden State Warriors beat Milwaukee Bucks 106-103, Seattle SuperSonics edged New York Knicks 139-109, Cincinnati Royals trounced Baltimore Bullets 118-103, 33 at Boston Rockets downed Buffalo Braves 115-101, and Phoenix Suns outlasted Portland Trail Blazers 121-111 in overtime.

In the American Basketball Association, it was: Virginia 134 Pittsburgh 129; Indiana 114 Memphis 98; Utah 127 Floridians 114 and Denver 106 Dallas 91.

Golden State, playing without injured centre Nate Thurmond, ended Milwaukee's 34-game home-court winning streak, with the help of a balanced attack including Joe Ellis' 25 points, Jeff Mullins' 24, Carnie Russell's 22 and Clyde Lee's 20. Lee's only of the fourth loss in 25 games this season for the Bucks, who lead the Midwest Division by four games over Chicago.

Bob Rule led the Seattle attack with 28 points, while Jabber, the league's leading scorer, had 26 with 30.

Drake Boosts Olympic Bid

EDMONTON (CP) — Claire Drake, a coach at the University of Alberta, has started a campaign to get Canada into the hockey tournament at the Winter Olympics in Japan next year.

He has until Dec. 8, the deadline set by Japan for Canada's entry.

Drake has written a five-page letter to sportswriters from coast to coast explaining his stand and urging them to support his cause.

In an interview Monday, he said:

"Ours may be the only country in the world where we have a national amateur sport governing body combining with a government-appointed body does stated aim is to improve the state of amateur hockey in Canada, refusing to send a representative team to the pinnacle of amateur competition until they are granted the concession of being able to be represented by Professionals."

Drake was referring to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Hockey Canada.

Drake says the fact that next year the world championships and the Olympics will be held regarding "provides the opportunity for Canada to compete in the Olympics and still maintain their stand for open competition."

Joe Kryzka, president of the CAHA, said in Calgary:

"Our position hasn't changed, neither has Hockey Canada's nor the government's, regarding the Olympics next year because the Europeans' position position hasn't changed.

"As I said before, they're the same teams, in both world and hasn't changed.

nothing different about it."

Women In Soccer

ZURICH (Reuter) — After years of repeating women soccer players are something of a joke, the world's exclusively male official soccer organizations now are prepared to take them seriously.

A European Cup for women and ultimately a Women's World Cup seem now only a matter of time.

Female footballers will play under modified rules. The ball may be lighter, the field smaller and the duration of matches shorter. Moreover, the offence of "ungentlemanly conduct" will just have to go.

The Zurich-based International Federation of Football Associations, which organizes the World Cup, has instructed its members to encourage women's soccer teams and to offer them facilities.

The European Football Union, which organizes the European championships, has set up a committee to examine the question of women's soccer and to study rules for it.

The move towards official recognition of female soccer players has been spurred by the growing number of women's teams and by the organization of unofficial women's world championships in the last two years in Italy and Mexico.

Last year, FIFA sent its 135 national associations a questionnaire on the world's soccer to assess opinion on soccer for women.

The national associations in 21 countries replied that they already recognize women's soccer. They include Algeria, South Africa, Singapore, France, West Germany and Sweden.

Associations in another 21 countries replied that although women's soccer was not officially recognized, there were female teams. Among these were Japan, Kenya, England, Italy, Holland, Argentina, Brazil, New Zealand and the United States.

Seven Goals Since Trade

Egers Eager to Star for St. Louis

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Happiness in St. Louis is a National Hockey League trade reaping instant success, something the Blues were short of in years.

Fortunately for coach Bill Sweeny, New York Rangers couldn't wait for Jack Egers to blossom as a star. So they unloaded him, along with goalie Mike Murphy and defenceman Andre Dupont, on to St. Louis.

And if ever a change was as good as a rest, such was the case of Egers; a failure in New York, a star in St. Louis.

The 22-year-old left winger from Sudbury, Ont., teamed with Murphy and centre Garry Unger, fired his seventh goal in eight games since the trade and set up another score Tuesday night as the Blues received California Golden Seals 9-2.

In the only other schedule game, Vancouver Canucks upset Chicago Black Hawks 4-2.

Tonight's action has Los Angeles Kings at Montreal Canadiens, St. Louis visiting Toronto Maple Leafs, Buffalo Sabres at New York, Pittsburgh Penguins at Philadelphia Flyers, Red Wings at California moving into Bloomington, Minn., against the Minnesota North Stars.

McCreary said this week that Egers, a 6-foot-1 180-pounder was the key to the trade so far as St. Louis was concerned, crediting Gene Carr as the gleam in the eyes of Blues' management.

He also feels St. Louis came out on top of the deal since Egers, Murphy and Dupont have contributed a great deal to the St. Louis resurgence.

Since the trade, which also sent forwards Wayne Connelly and Jim Lorentz to the Rangers, the Blues have recovered from an early-season tailspin and show a respectable three wins and three ties to move into a share of fourth in the West with Philadelphia Flyers and Pittsburgh Penguins.

Unger, obtained in a trade last year with Detroit, took Egers' arrival as a stimulant after a slow start. He contributed a goal, his 11th, and assisted on scores by Jim Roberts and Egers.

The Seals, who have won only one and tied two of 18 games on season.

St. Louis' ice in five years, held third in the West with 19 points, 15 behind second-place Chicago.

The Hawks ran into a surprisingly aggressive skating Vancouver club that registered its second straight win over the Hawks on the West Coast this

Dave Balon and Wayne Connelly, both of whom came from New York the day after Connelly was sent to the Rangers by St. Louis, scored a goal each as did Rosemarie Andre Boudrias.

Derek Sullivan, at 9:18 of the second period, offset Balon's goal but scores by Connelly and Wayne Maki produced the victory that denied Chicago a chance to regain first in the West from Minnesota.

The win moved Vancouver into a fifth-place tie in the East with Detroit, six points behind Toronto and five ahead of Buffalo.

Ferguson Pots Two for Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oshawa Generals scrambled to a 5-5 tie with St. Catharines Black Hawks Tuesday night to increase their lead to three points in the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A League.

sixth attacker; gave Oshawa the tie with the eighth-place Black Hawks.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros beat Niagara Falls Flyers 7-3 in Niagara Falls and in Hamilton, the hometown Red Wings edged London Knights 5-4.

In St. Catharines, the Generals blew a 5-1 second-period lead before salvaging the tie in the final minute. The Generals held a 4-0 lead before the nine minute mark of the first period.

Besides Middleton's two goals, Nels Ferguson got a pair for Oshawa and Rick Johnston and Doug Ferguson got the others.

Hull Takes Jump

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull assisted on both goals as Chicago Black Hawks dropped a 4-2 score to Vancouver Canucks in National Hockey League action Tuesday night.

The two assists moved the Golden Jet into eighth place in the individual scoring race with 17 points. Team-mate Stan Mikita also picked up a point and was alone in ninth place with 25.

Fraser One Up on Gas House Teammates

The Wilson attack helped his team to a 5-1 win over Stewart Werner and then downed the pads for Jim's Pizzeria to record a 5-0 shutout over Wennemakers Esso.

With regular goalie Bob Harrison performing with the Belleville Fairways Fraser helped Jim's to a 5-0 blanking of Wennemakers.

Mrs. Jamieson, who buys food for a family of three, is a regular Loblaws shopper. She says, "I shop at Loblaws because I think I save quite a bit of money by coming here. Once in a while I go to the other stores—just to check up and see how the prices compare—but I always come back to Loblaws. I would recommend Loblaws for quality and price. I particularly like Loblaws meat and their fruit and vegetable department. Everything is fresh and nice. At Loblaws I find I can get the quality I want and not have to pay as much for it as I would in some of the other stores".

Regulations Tightened

Snowmobile Boom in Canada Continues, with Climbing Deaths

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The snowmobile boom in Canada continues to grow, accompanied by a climbing fatality rate and an increasing number of regulations governing the machines.

The federal transport department estimates there are 700,000 snowmobiles in Canada now compared to 12,000 in North America in 1963.

The Canadian Safety Council says fatalities in Canada climbed to 118 last winter from 93 the previous season—an increase of 26.9 per cent.

A Cross-Canada Survey shows that some provinces have passed new regulations this year while the federal government is promising new laws to make snowmobiles quieter and safer.

Despite the growing concern by politicians, most manufacturers and dealers expect sales in Canada this year to match those of last winter. But some say sales will not approach the boom of two years ago.

New regulations passed this year in Nova Scotia and Manitoba, similar to those approved earlier in New Brunswick and Ontario, require all snowmobiles to be registered. British Columbia's legislature also has passed such a law but it has not yet been proclaimed.

Operators in Quebec, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia require special licences to take their machines on public roads. Other provinces require a regular driver's licence or have set an age limit for public-road use.

Every province has regulations regarding where the machines can be used—often allowing municipalities to set their own laws.

Earlier this month, federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson promised new rules after government tests claimed to show that snowmobiles are unstable, too loud, have poor lighting, and have trouble turning and stopping. He promised regulations of reduce noise levels, one problem that provincial regulations have not dealt with.

A number of manufacturers said the defects were corrected in 1972 models.

Associations of snowmobile users have been formed in many areas and often offer safety courses.

The operators seem to have the most difficulty when they take their machines on to public roads where 63.4 per cent of last winter's snowmobile fatalities occurred. Manufacturers have emphasized that the machines are not designed to operate on public roads.

In Ontario, where 43 persons were killed in snowmobile mishaps last winter compared to 26 the previous winter, there were 181,600 machines registered to Nov. 1 of this year.

All snowmobiles must be registered for a $5 fee and a driver's licence is required when driving on public roads. The machines are prohibited from using freeways but are allowed on some northern roads and on the shoulders of other roads. Municipalities have the power to ban snowmobiling from all roads within their jurisdiction.

An official of the Ontario Safety League says every operator should have to take a course in snowmobile safety and urges operators to join snowmobile clubs.

'Bargaining Doesn't Work'

Labor Must Take Political Action, Impatient Laberge Says

MONTREAL (CP) — Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, has asked his organization to take wider political and social action because "I'm beginning to lose my patience."

Mr. Laberge said in an interview Tuesday, following his address to the QFL convention, he was dismayed at the lack of concern by governments for human rights, as shown by the War Measures Act brought into effect in October, 1970, and the apparent readiness of government and the judiciary to side with management in major labor disputes.

In his speech, Mr. Laberge told 1,500 delegates society was not acting in the best interests of wage-earners and the QFL should help change it.

"If we don't," he said, "others will."

The QFL had to strengthen its roots in the various regions of Quebec and its local councils had to work with other organizations which favored the same objectives.

He said a united labor front is the only solution to Quebec workers' disputes with government, high finance and the courts.

"Bargaining at separate tables doesn't work anymore," Mr. Laberge said.

The QFL had to take a larger role in politics, he said, because the business establishment used politics to fight labor. If no party fully satisfied labor's aspirations, the formation of a new party could be considered.

But he added that the Parti Quebecois best represented the interests of the workers.

"I am not saying that the QFL should support Quebec nationalists movements," Mr. Laberge said. "It's just that they seem to be fighting the same people we are."

The QFL, whose 225,000 members are about 10 per cent of the Quebec labor force, should devote itself to helping all wage-earners and "widen contracts with all wage-earners, organized or not organized."

The convention ends Saturday. The delegates have until then to decide either to accept or reject Mr. Laberge's proposals.

In a document distributed at the convention, Mr. Laberge listed six areas where the union could make its views known to government.

—All workers who are not trade union members should be organized by work sector.

—The minimum wage should be increased and a minimum guaranteed annual income established.

—Governments should have a coherent housing policy, stop land speculation by business interests and encourage the construction of low-cost dwellings.

—Existing social legislation in such fields as urban renewal, pollution control, consumer protection, health insurance and social assistance should be extended.

—The government should pass human rights legislation to match the business in power of police and the judicial apparatus. The electoral system should be reformed to more accurately reflect the popular will.

—French should become the working language in Quebec.

Municipal Election Reform Discussed by Area Clerks

Provision for money bylaw voting should be retained as part of the municipal election act.

This was the feeling yesterday of a number of Quinte area municipal clerks attending a meeting at Belleville to discuss recommendations for proposed changes in election procedure.

Attending the meeting at city hall were three representatives from the department of municipal affairs and approximately 30 municipal clerks.

The discussions were on recommendations contained in the fourth report of the Select Committee on Election l a w s presented in April of this year.

Meeting chairman Fred Braybrook said the object was to get the reaction of municipal clerks and to hear their submissions.

One of the recommendations of the select committee is that the municipal franchise be based on voting age, citizenship and residence as nearly as possible so as to conform with provincial franchise except that property owners and their spouses be entitled to vote in a municipality in which they own property but do not reside.

Elimination of what is known as the money bylaw is not included in the recommendations but some clerks feel it might be a good idea from an administration point of view.

But others feared doing away with money bylaw voting it could easily present a problem in that "transient" residents who live in a municipality for only a short time might help to get some costly project under way and then move on leaving the permanent residents to pay the shot.

One clerk questioned how property-owners with holdings in more than one municipality could be prevented from voting more than once for the same school board representative.

Mr. Braybrook said voters should be "admonished" not to take advantage of this loophole which might enable them to vote more than once on the same school board membership.

The question of whether simple enumeration of voters was a satisfactory method of determining separate school support was raised.

In some cases it is questionable whether the voter clearly understands the enumerator's question while also, if the voter happens to be away from home, the word of a neighbor is taken.

Mr. Braybrook said the proper way would be to have the voters fill out a declaration form indicating school support.

Another recommendation in the report calls for proxy voting for be made available for disabled persons.

Also there is a recommendation which in effect would do away with the residence ruling for candidates.

The proposal is that any resident of Ontario since the first of the year who is otherwise qualified to vote in any municipality would be entitled to stand for office in any other municipality.

Also disqualification of candidates would be generally less restrictive in that grounds such as non-payment of t a x e s would be eliminated.

Yesterday's meeting in Belleville was the fourth of seven such meetings scheduled in Ontario. Meetings have been held at Thunder Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Ottawa. Four more meetings are scheduled for Ottawa, London and Toronto.

Family Living Counsellor Speaks to Picton Group

Elementary school students in London, Ontario, are discovering that these paragons of the public school system have their tempers, f esperience disappointments and even get dirty while playing because it's all part of living.

Terry Roberts, co-ordinator of physical and health education for the London board of education, last night informed parents and teachers attending a public meeting at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute that basically it is his job to place things in their proper perspective.

Mr. Roberts, who explained the importance of "developing a healthy sexuality" said that if asked he would not agree that there is a sex education program under way in his school. "A sex education course means a simplistic course and we now have a family living course," he remarked.

Introduced by PECI teacher Jeremy Vincent as "one of Ontario's leading experts on sex" education, Mr. Roberts said he is dealing in a kinder, gentler in Grade 12 curriculum. He has worked with the family living program for 13 years.

Mr. Roberts explained that the London board of education remains the only board he is aware of that has approved the teaching of contraception in school. This information is part of a course initiated at the Grade 5 level. A unit dealing with marriage is taught in Grades 11 and 12.

"The objectives of the family living program primarily are not the elimination of teenage pregnancies or venereal disease but the development of a healthy sexuality which gives a boy or girl pride in his or her sex."

Sexuality in terms of personality is examined by students at the Grade 5 level.

Adolescence and its attendant problems are explained and sexuality is compared to a many-faceted jewel centred in a jewel box. Other gems surrounding it include self control, conscience and morality.

Sexuality, the centre gem, is described by Mr. Roberts as being a male or female and a healthy respect for the opposite sex.

He noted that persons with "real pizazz" actually are attractive to others because of their healthy sexuality.

The speaker emphasized the adolescent's need for the IM-AC (I am lovable and capable) philosophy and explained the many happenings in a single day, which can assault the self-confidence of a young boy or girl at the Grades 9 and 10 levels.

With a loss of self-confidence youth experiences the need for change and with a change of school, home or friends may be wishfully considered, probably change will be effected by taking something or doing something to hopefully capture lovability and capability.

Mr. Roberts said his school deals with drugs under the sub titles of moods, substances and people and added that there is no drug problem, just a people problem.

The school offers only a preventive-type program concerning drugs and moods are discussed with the reasons for their changes.

The speaker noted that hormone exercise an effect on teenagers' emotions and girls sometimes ask why boys tend to grow excited easily.

"Either the boy feels he's on top of the world or the world is on top of him," said Mr. Roberts describing mood swings experienced by adolescents.

He commented that girls chase boys who cannot understand why they're being chased since members of the opposite sex enter different stages of development at different times.

The family living program introduced at the London school includes slides and films explaining the cause of venereal disease and methods of birth control and the reasons for it in today's world of increasing population.

Slides also s h o w growth stages and the problems possibly confronted by parents adjusting to adolescence.

Mr. Roberts commented that the key items in the family living program are the right curriculum, training and the training of teachers to cultivate sensitivity, and parent involvement.

Old Press Is Scrapped

STIRLING — A piece of Stirling history faded into oblivion recently as the Stirling News-Argus scrapped its old flat-bed, hand fed newspaper press. The old press turned out its last newspaper in August, 1970, when News-Argus converted to offset method of printing. Since that time it has been used sparingly for poster work, but mainly served as a table for storing finished printing jobs.

Local councillor Harry Cooke, had the task of dismantling the heavy piece of machinery, and taking it out of the building piece by piece. Even the old handle used to roll the press by hand be'ore electricity came to Stirling, ended in the scrap heap. The News-Argus has purchased a much more modern, Vertical Miehle press which will perform the same printing functions as did the old press.

TORONTO (CP) — A vivacious Ojibway woman's love for a white man and her profound pride in being a Canadian Indian have combined to force a major revision of the federal Indian Act by the courts with important consequences for the rest of Canada's 240,000 native people.

Jeanette Corbiere Lavell, 28, now living in Toronto, lost her status as a registered Indian and band rights on her Manitoulin Island reserve when she married a white man.

At that time, the Indian Act said that any Indian woman marrying a non-Indian automatically forfeits her Indian status.

With no official support and using legal aid, Mrs. Lavell challenged the act in the courts, claiming that it contravened the Bill of Rights by discriminating against women.

The Federal Court said she was correct and torpedoed the section of the act that set out the ground rules.

But the decision has generated complications for Indian associations across Canada, band councils, the Indian affairs department and its minister.

Mr. Chrétien told the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, representing about 20,000 Indians in southwestern Ontario, last weekend that he would like to see the decision appealed. The association called for an appeal, and the federal justice department is considering testing the decision in a higher court.

Many Canadian Indian leaders fear that allowing women to retain status when "marrying out" will open the door to a massive invasion of whites on to reserve lands.

At present, the children from these mixed marriages do not acquire full band rights. However, a curious anomaly in the act prior to the Lavell case dictated that the children of an Indian woman in a mixed marriage would be declared white if born in legal wedlock, Indian if born illegitimately.

The leaders opposed to the Lavell decision wonder how long it will be before the courts rule that a mixed-marriage child should be accorded the full rights of a purely Indian child.

As one spokesman put it: A large-scale migration onto reserves by white husbands and acquisition of rights by gradually whiter generations of children would destroy the country's native culture and heritage far more effectively than the abuses and neglect of the last 200 years.

She Fought Back

Mrs. Jeanette Lavell, 28, an Ojibway Indian, seen with her son, won a victory for other Indian women when she regained her Indian status after a court decision against the Indian act. At the time of her marriage, the Indian act said that any Indian woman marrying a non-Indian automatically forfeits her Indian status, which Mrs. Lavell claimed contravened the Bill of Rights by discriminating against women. One Convicted In Riot Case At Kent State

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — One of 25 persons indicted in last year's Kent State disorders was convicted of a misdemeanor Tuesday and the case against a second was dismissed.

A jury found Jerry Rupe guilty of interfering with firemen but failed to reach a verdict on three felony counts: arson, first-degree riot and assaulting a fireman.

Arson and first-degree riot charges against Peter C. Biek were dismissed after prosecution witnesses failed to place him at the scene of the fire.

The charges stemmed from a May 2, 1970, campus fire that destroyed a Reserve Officers Training Corps building. Two days later four students were shot to death during a clash between Ohio National Guard troops and anti-war demonstrators.

Rupe, 24, of Ravenna, was not a student when the disturbances occurred. Biek, 22, was a junior.

During Rupe's trial, Kent fireman David R. Heimlig testified that Rupe slugged him with a stick after using it to poke a burning, gasoline-soaked rag into the ROTC building. Rupe denied both acts.

Canadian Studies Programs Planned

TORONTO (CP) — About two-thirds of Canada's universities will have Canadian studies programs within two years, Dr. J. Roby Kidd predicted Tuesday.

Dr. Kidd, head of the Canadian studies program of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, said about a third of the country's universities already have started some kind of Canadian studies program.

He made the statements in an interview at a conference attended by 30 university representatives.

Dr. Kidd, organizer of the conference, said this country's "search for identity" has encouraged universities and one-fifth of about 90 community colleges to institute Canadian studies programs.

He said the first institute for Canadian studies was established about 10 years ago at Carleton University in Ottawa.

Students often felt "short-changed about their own heritage," which was taught to them in a dull, almost apologetic way, Dr. Kidd said.

In many cases they have pushed for Canadian courses and at Waterloo University they helped to establish the Canadian Studies Board.

Waterloo and Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B., both have undergraduate programs with the title Canadian Studies.

Queen's University in Kingston is encouraging student teachers to create special school programs in Canada studies.

Teaching material is often unavailable, said Prof. Marvin Blauer of Brock University in St. Catharines.

He said there were "almost no general textbooks on such things as Canadian political culture," and material had to be prepared from articles, films and Canadian political plays put on by the drama department.

Rose Gets Life For Kidnapping

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose returned to court Tuesday to be sentenced to life imprisonment for the kidnapping in October, 1970, of Pierre Laporte, the late Quebec labor minister.

The kidnapping sentence is to be served concurrently with the life sentence imposed earlier this year on the 26-year-old former school teacher for the strangulation murder of Mr. Laporte.

It will not affect Rose's eligibility for parole in 10 years.

Rose was found guilty Friday by the 12-man jury.

Mr. Masse said after the conviction Friday that an appeal would be launched "as soon as possible."

He told reporters he had 25 grounds for appeal.

An appeal on the murder conviction is scheduled to begin "sometime in December," he said.

Rose was the second of four men, charged with the kidnap-slaying of Mr. Laporte, to be convicted of kidnapping.

Bernard Lortie, 23, was sentenced Nov. 22 in connection with the trial of [illegible] for murder in December.

Pakistan Says Its Army Repulses Indian Raids

From AP-REUTER

The Pakistan army says its soldiers repulsed Indian attacks at two points on the East Pakistan border, inflicting heavy casualties on the Indians.

However, Pakistan radio Tuesday night admitted that Indian troops were making small gains in various areas of East Pakistan but "at great costs."

The radio said India was using tanks and bringing in troops on all fronts.

A Pakistan army spokesman in Dacca said Tuesday night the Pakistani troops repelled an Indian attack at Chaugacha, in the Jessore district on East Pakistan's western frontier, and thwarted an Indian attempt to capture Kamalpur in the Mymensingh sector on the northwest front.

He said the Indians, having failed to capture Kamalpur, launched a fresh attack supported by tanks and artillery Monday night on two fronts, but were thrown back.

The spokesman said the battlefield was covered with Indian dead and that the Indians tried to remove the bodies from East Pakistani territory under cover of firing artillery bombardment.

He also reported that Pakistani planes destroyed seven Indian soldiers and a quantity of arms and ammunition in Dinajpur, in East Pakistan's northern sector.

The Indian government says the fighting in East Pakistan is mainly between the Mukti Bahini, the East Pakistan independence fighters, and the West Pakistan army. New Delhi says Indian troops have crossed into East Pakistan only when attacked by Pakistanis.

An All-India radio broadcast early today said the Mukti Bahini, in a series of fresh offensives, had liberated three areas in the Sylhet sector in the east and had launched an all-out attack on the strategic town of Feni in the Noakhli district.

The radio added that latest reports also said Faridpur, southwest of Dacca and hometown of the jailed Awami League leader Sheikh Mujubur Rahman, and the southern town of Barisal were completely under the control of the Bahini. Reuter correspondent Ram Sursesh, reporting from the West Bengal border town of Krishnagar, was told by defence officials that Indian troops were engaged in fighting with Pakistani troops in at least three areas inside East Pakistan.

However, the officials denied Pakistani claims that it was Indian troops who were involved in most of the fighting in East Pakistan, an assertion backed by various informed Calcutta sources, including Western diplomatic circles.

One of the battles being fought out between the Pakistanis and Indians was in the Hilli area of East Pakistan, 190 miles north of Calcutta, where the action has continued since Saturday, when Indian troops crossed the border to try and silence Pakistani artillery which has been blasting the Indian border town of Balurghat.

The Indians claim to have knocked out four tanks in the Hilli fighting and killed or wounded a total of 160 Pakistani troops. Indian casualties are put at 33 dead or wounded in the four days of fighting.

Meanwhile, India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi made a statement Tuesday which observers saw as setting India still further from acceptance of a "compromise" – tal settlement in East Pakistan.

Mrs. Gandhi told Parliament: We cannot allow the annihilation of people next door to us (in East Pakistan). It is not in the interests that the entire people, not just the Mukti Bahini, but the entire interned population of Bangla Desh should be annihilated."

Nixon Wants Allies Moving Same Way

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his face-to-face talks with allied leaders, President Nixon wants to make sure all are moving in the same general direction on major new international developments, from agreement on Berlin to the economic crisis.

So says Henry A. Kissinger, the president's national security affairs adviser, in explaining Nixon's round-the summit parleys with five major allies before his Peking and Moscow trips.

Nixon will confer with Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau here next Monday. He sees President Georges Pompidou of France the Azores Dec. 13-14, Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain at Bermuda Dec. 20-22, Chancellor Willy Brandt of Germany at Key Biscayne, Fla., Dec. 28-29, and Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan at San Clemente, Calif., Jan. 6-7.

Speaking of "a dramatic change in the international situation that has occurred in the last seven months," since Ping Pong diplomacy opened Nixon's path to Peking, Kissinger cited:

Announcements of the unprecedented presidential journey to China next February and to Moscow in May; last September's Big Four agreement on Berlin; the treaty returning Okinawa to Japan; Britain's forthcoming entry into the European Common Market; and "the whole economic negotiations."

Economics will loom large when Nixon starts with Trudeau. Canada, the largest trading partner of the United States, complains of heavy damage from the U.S. surtax.

The monetary dispute over dollar-valuation and the import surtax will figure in the Azores talks, too.

At Bermuda, Nixon is expected to stress that the United States does not want its goods discriminated against by the growing Europe an Common Market bloc.

With Sato, Nixon will be dealing with the head of a government which has been dealt double shocks by Nixon's Peking and economic moves.

Soviet Satellite Won't Attempt Mars Landing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's new Mars satellite will not attempt a soft landing on the planet, but will beam back the surface photographically from a high orbit.

The Soviet press reported this today about the mission of Mars 2 and 3, the 4-ton capsule that swung into orbit around Mars Saturday after a six-month interplanetary trip.

In announcing Tuesday that Mars 3 had gone into orbit, Tass, the Soviet news agency, said it had dropped a capsule to the surface of the planet, carrying a pennant with the Soviet Union's coat of arms on it.

This touched off speculation among American space scientists that the capsule might also be an instrument package to radio information back to the earth. But the more detailed reports today gave no indication of any such activity.

Mars 2 joined the U.S. Mariner 9, which is host to the Soviet vehicle in Mars' two weeks

Toronto Livestock

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was active with prices fully steady to the week's advance for all classes and grades of slaughter cattle at the Ontario public stockyards today.

Veal calf and lamb prices were steady and hog prices lower.

Slaughter cattle 2,297: Choice steers 35.50-36.50 with sales to 37.85, good 34-35, medium 30-34, choice heifers 33.50-34.50 with sales to 35.50, good 32.50-33.50, medium 29-31.50, common 26-28.50; good cows 23-24 with sales to 25, medium 21.50-22.50, canners and cutters 15-21, good heavy bologna bulls 28-29, common and medium 26-28.

Replacement cattle 700: Good light stockers and feeders 32-36, good heavy short-keep feeders 32-36; good stock steer calves 40-45, good stock heifer calves 35-40, common and medium stockers and feeders 28-32.

Hogs 696: Base price 27.50-28.00, extra at 28.25, choice 27 steady and boars 11-16.

Sheep and lambs 132: Good handyweight lambs 27-29, lights 25 to 35, sheep 6-15.

Nine days behind Mars 2 is Mars 3, a satellite of exact weight which may have an entirely different mission. Western specialists said. The Russians have not said when Mars 3 would reach the planet nor what its mission is.

Tass said Mars 3's elliptical orbit ranged from 15,535 to 857 miles from Mars. The low point for Mariner 9 is 862 miles above the surface.

"The most important assignment of satellites around Mars will be to study the relief and structure of the planet's structure," Tass said of Mars 3.

"The photo eye will be able to discern objects only hundreds and even tens of metres in size. Detailed maps of Mars will appear on the basis of the existing hills, valleys, craters and uplands."

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Phobos, the innermost of Mars' two moons, showed up as a jagged, pock-marked and oblong world in a photograph sent back by Mariner 9.

The Propulsion Laboratory spokesman said the picture "makes the slight elongation Phobos as being about 11 miles by 114 miles with a very irregular shape and a jagged, cratered surface."

Although the shape is "basically oblong it's so irregular you can hardly apply anything to it," he added.

The photograph was taken from a range 3,000 miles from Phobos, the closest look ever at a Martian moon, and "proved Mariner's guidance system quite good," the spokesman said.

Indians Claim B.C. Land

OTTAWA (CP) — Land claims made by the Nishga Indians of British Columbia are enforceable under British law, Vancouver lawyer Tom Berger said Tuesday.

He told the Supreme Court of Canada the Nishgas' claim to the last 100 years has "in the case of the Indian tribes of North America, always acknowledged (that Indian title exists."

Mr. Berger is asking the Supreme Court to make a declaration that the Nishgas are the owners by aboriginal rights of more than 4,000 square miles of the Nass Valley in B.C.

He was taking issue with the judgment of the B.C. Court of Appeal which rejected the Nishga claim.

Mr. Berger is expected to conclude his argument today and lawyers for British Columbia objections to the case continue.

Government Ponders Big-stick Moves to Speed Its Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government pondered some big-stick moves Tuesday to speed progress of its tax bill as the impasse continued to make only inchworm progress through the Commons.

One form of debate-limiting closure was reported to be a strong probability, with the government pushing to have the bill through the Commons and Senate before Jan. 1, to take immediate effect for the 1972 tax year.

In the House, much of the argument centered on a contemporary tax case—the Crown versus the late Stafford Smythe and Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens—and how the decision is made regarding court procedure for tax-evasion cases.

The issue was the Crown option of prosecuting either by indictment or by summary conviction.

When the Crown selects indictment, conviction carries a mandatory prison sentence of between two months and five years. Summary conviction leaves the option of fines, a fine and a jail term to the judge.

Smythe and Ballard, holding the controlling interests in Maple Leaf Gardens, home of Toronto's National Hockey League team, challenged the government right to proceed by indictment after they were charged with tax evasion. The matter went to the Supreme Court of Canada, which upheld the government's right.

But Conservative MPs argued Tuesday that the Crown option is unfair.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said it left the federal attorney-general with too powerful a tool that was too open to abuse.

"It is not likely to happen but the power is there."

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said the system destroyed what should be an objective of the law—equal treatment for all.

Corporations convicted of tax evasion pay fines, said Mr. Bigg, a former RCMP officer.

But senior corporate executives seldom were held personally responsible for a variety of reasons.

The government couldn't put a whole corporation in jail and usually settled for a fine. But an individual was liable to loss of personal liberty and the system was unfair.

With today's multi-national corporations, he said, the situation is more complicated. Even if the evidence pointed to a senior executive, it likely would be impossible to nab him because he was not in the country.

The whole system meant that the individual taxpayer faced a double jeopardy that corporate taxpayers did not.

Before stalling on this aspect, the House approved a group of items in the big bill after the government agreed to ease opposition objections by changing some words.

But only about one-third of the bill's 232 items have been passed since full debate began in September.

Outside the House, both Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, and Sinclair Knowles, his NDP counterpart, said they see a good chance the government will move to limit debate.

From the office of Allan MacEachen, government House leader, came word the government might invoke a dormant rule passed in 1969 to put a lid on debate.

It is a rule which permits the government to set a debate time limit if the opposition parties are unable to agree on one among themselves.

Mr. Knowles saw little chance the opposition parties agree on any time limit. The Conservatives wanted further debate on business and corporation taxes on which the NDP feels enough has been said.

The Conservatives have pressed for splitting up the bill —passing such popular things as higher personal income tax exemptions now and delaying the rest of it until further debate can be held next year.

This has been turned down by the government.

Conservatives, New Democrats, Social Credit MPs and some Liberals have unspoken caucusing sections of the bill to tax credit unions and co-operatives in a similar manner to regular businesses. The government already has brought in two batches of amendments to those sections aimed at taking out some of the sting.

But the Conservatives and the NDP do not agree on the provisions to tax capital gains and on tax treatment of natural resource industries.

Not enough in both cases, the NDP argues; perhaps too much, the Conservatives say.

Mr. MacEachen said Monday his intention is to "bring this debate to a close within a selected number of days."

With the opposition division, he could have the proper opening for a debate-limiting move either 30 days debating the bill —35 in item-by-item study as a committee—the Commons still moves on today or to the second clause in the 767 page bill.

The bill has 232 items, but so far in committee the Commons has spent all its time on the 21st item in a segment of the first clause.

Studied and debated at length, but awaiting votes, are a majority of the first-clause items, including the controversies measures governing taxation of capital gains, corporations, shareholders, farms, co-ops credit unions, business, property, mining, petroleum and international income.

Saskatchewan Votes Today

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan New Democratic Party, which rode to power in a landslide victory in June, hopes to deliver the coup de grace to the Liberals in two byelections today.

At stake are Morse constituency, held by former Liberal premier Ross Thatcher until his death July 23, and Souris-Estevan, left vacant Oct. 17 by the death of the NDP's Russ Brown. Victories would be more than icing on the cake for the New Democrats, who have 44 of 60 seats in the legislature.

It's not that simple for the Liberals, who ruled the province from 1963 until June and who now have only 14 seats. Observers say they must win to retain a measure of credibility.

Acting Liberal Leader D. G. Steuart says his party suffered overwhelming defeat at the polls, then the loss of their leader and haven't had a chance to reorganize.

The Liberals meet to choose a new leader in Saskatoon next week and Mr. Steuart wanted the byelections postponed. The New Democrats refused.

In Morse, located in south-central Saskatchewan, three candidates are bidding to replace Mr. Thatcher. All are farmers.

The Progressive Conservatives, a party unable to muster much enthusiasm in Saskatchewan, have sent in Leader Ed Nasserden, 52, of Saskatoon. Jack Wiebe, 35, of Herbert is representing the NDP and Jim Murdock, 39, of Central Butte, the NDP.

In the southeastern constituency of Souris-Estevan, also primarily rural, there's a two-way race between the NDP's Kim Thorson, 38, and the Liberals' Ian MacDougall, 43.

Mr. Thorson is an Estevan lawyer and Mr. MacDougall is a pipeline executive, also from Estevan.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Thursday, December 2 :

Aries (March 21—April 19). If you'd only learn the difference between when to talk and when to just shut up and listen, half your problems would be solved. Today: keep quiet.

Taurus (April 20 — May 20). There's a point in some situations where even you will mind that further effort isn't add one iota to results. Stop wasting time on fruitless special pursuits.

Gemini (May 21 — June 21). Even your changeable, quick as a bunny talents can't keep pace with the screwball trail that a higher-ups are blazing around the office. Let the boss's mind down first.

Cancer (June 22 — July 22). Friends' advice is certainly well-meaning, and they're definitely seeing things from your side, but don't put too much faith in their solutions. They only know half the story.

Leo (July 23 — Aug. 22). The first step in changing your destiny is changing yourself. Eliminate the flaws in your character that keep unwaving you in the same old disappointing situations.

Virgo (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Even a caring working hours can be exasperating enough, without coming home and listening to a lot of advice from your mate about how you should have handled things.

Libra (Sept. 23—Oct. 22). The task of explaining a procedure to a willing helper right now doesn't seem to be worth the effort. No matter how clear-cut your instructions, they're misinterpreted.

Scorpio (Oct. 23—Nov. 21). Allowing yourself to be drawn into a compromising situation, especially when the principles are romantic ones, can only lead to a tangled dilemma. Say no.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22—Dec. 21). Strife, confusion, bustling activity are scheduled shortly for home quarters. The cause of the whole hubbub could be kin who think they're being taken advantage of.

Capricorn (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Unless you've got a speech already written out, don't attempt to answer any probing questions from competitors today. A slip of the tongue could spoil all your plans.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): There's more hope every day that things will turn out well. Even the most tangled circumstances can be leading to a happy destiny. Lovers should be patient.

Pisces (Feb. 19 — March 20). Sometimes your best well-meaning efforts can turn out exactly opposite to what was planned. It does help partners, though, to know that your intentions were good.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY —

Recklessness and impatience are the two devils all your bedfellows this year. If you can wait politely until July, positive results accrue from job, family ventures.

Trudeau's Aide Assures Americans Canadians Their Friends

NEW YORK (CP) — A group of Canadians assured some troubled American businessmen Tuesday that the Canadian people and government are not anti-American although they are angry over such things as the Amchitka nuclear test and U.S. economic policies.

The assurances were given by Ivan Head, special assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, and others at a conference on Canadian-American relations held by the Centre for International Studies at New York University.

"Canadian friendship can be taken for granted," said Head at the meeting of about 40 representatives from business, government and labor from both sides of the border.

Head made his statement after some Americans expressed concern after hearing some hours of round-table discussion that largely rested on the U.S. economic policies and foreign investment in Canada.

Head, in a forthright statement, said the U.S. government is out of normalcy is a return to trade surpluses with Canada to a deficit position. He said there is "all hell to pay" when Canadian trade is in surplus for three years after being in a deficit to the United States since the beginning of the century.

The U.S. government was represented by Edward L. Allen, deputy assistant secretary for international economic research analysis of the department of commerce, and Deane R. Hinton, senior staff member of the White House council on economic policy.

Allen said the 10-per-cent special duty on imports—the surcharge that Canada objects to so forcibly—will be removed soon. But when pressed he could not say when.

Hinton said it would be difficult to find anybody in Washington who would not say that Canada must share the burden of solving the U.S. balance-of-payments problems which brought on the surcharge and other measures.

He indicated that it would not be possible for Canada to have special arrangements whereby the surcharge would be lifted in return for some action by Canada. He said the U.S. looks on this as a multi-lateral problem.

And he indicated that the U.S.-Canada auto pact will have to be altered to remove the features that the U.S. regards as inventional. But he did not think the U.S. would ask Canada to revoke its dollar as Japan is being asked to do with its yen.

Layoffs, Production Cuts Continue to Plague Industry

By IRVING C. WEYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

Layoffs and production cuts continued to plague Canadian industry during November, adding to the troubles of those trying to cut into the rolls of the unemployed.

An Ontario labor group reported the number of layoffs and shutdowns in the province for one year was greater than in any decade since the financial crash of 1929.

Mid-month figures showed the number of unemployed in Canada at 447,000, up 13,000 from a month earlier, although the number of workers with jobs rose to 8.25 million from 8.19 million, the biggest October gain in many years.

The unemployed represented 5.1 per cent of the total labor force of 8.7 million against five per cent in September and in October of 1970.

Statistics Canada said the underlying trend was toward a reduction in unemployment. The seasonally-adjusted rate—the one most economists look at—dropped to 6.7 per cent in October from an unusual peak of 7.1 in September.

Dun and Bradstreet of Canada Ltd. says that for the first 10 months of the year, 2,184 Canadian companies went into bankruptcy with liabilities of $280 million, up from 1,886 failures and debts of $218 million a year earlier.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows a wide cross-section of industry hit by closings and layoffs, everything from fish plants to a brokerage firm.

The Ontario Federation of Labor released a survey showing 10,226 workers losing their jobs in the year to June because of plant shutdowns or layoffs. It said 138 plants in the province closed or had layoffs of more than 25 workers.

There were some scattered signs of new jobs.

Manpower Minister Otto Lang said the mining industry, especially in Northern Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia, will hire more than 2,000 workers before the end of the year.

The defence department said about one-quarter of the $80 million in federal funds tagged for winter employment programs will be spent at military installations. The allocation is expected to create about 28,000 man-months of work at defence bases and stations.

Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. announced plans for construction of a multi-million dollar chemical plant at Sarnia to replace an existing plant which has pollution problems. About 250 men will be employed on construction.

Noranda Mines Ltd. said a new mine near Timmins will come into full production by next fall, providing about 200 jobs.

About 110 union members accepted a wage freeze at Excell-O Corp. in London, Ont., after the company agreed to recall some of 265 workers laid off earlier.

Across Ontario there were these samples of plant closings and cuts:

Domtar Chemical Ltd. said it will close a Toronto plant by mid-1972, leaving most of the 95 employees without jobs. About 100 workers were affected when Domtar Fine Papers Ltd. closed a Cornwall operation for three weeks. The company laid off 220 a month earlier. They have not been called back.

Hyster Co. announced closing of its Welland construction equipment plant, affecting about 85 workers. Canadian General Electric Co. laid off 60 short-term employees at its Barrie housewares plant. Clima-trol Air Coils (1970) Ltd. said it is closing its manufacturing facility at Oakville, leaving 30 employees without jobs.

St. William's Preserves Ltd. announced closing of its jam-making plant at Simcoe, leaving 38 without work. Union Carbide announced it gradually is closing a plant in Welland, resulting in loss of 210 jobs over three years.

At any rate, he said, the foundry was going to be moved because of the high hydro rates in Welland and because its furnaces were old, $69 would have had to be replaced under Ontario pollution regulations.

Move to South Africa Avoided

OTTAWA (CP) — If the federal government weren't offering Union Carbide $1.3 million to move a foundry from Welland, Ont., to Beauharnois, Que., the plant might have been moved to South Africa, the Commons was told Tuesday.

John Roberts, parliamentary secretary to Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, said the issue was not one of giving Ontario jobs to Quebec, but of keeping jobs in Canada.

He was replying during adjournment debate to a criticism of the regional expansion grant.

Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) had said the government was using its money to shift unemployment around the country.

This time it was moving 70 jobs from Welland to Beauharnois.

Mr. Roberts said that by the time the shift was made, at the end of 1972, a substantial number of the men in Welland could be moved from the abandoned foundry to Union Carbide's recently-built carbide plant in Welland.

No Sightseeing in China

Nixon to Devote All Visit to Talks

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon's seven-day visit to China in February will be devoted almost entirely to talks on ways to improve Sino-American relations, with little time set aside for sightseeing and social activities, officials say.

The president, making the first trip to China by any U.S. head of state, will arrive in Peking Feb. 21 for a stay of at least four days. He will confer with Premier Chou En-lai and be received by Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

He will then travel to Shanghai and to Hangzhou, a river port 100 miles south, for more talks with Chou and other Chinese officials before leaving Feb. 28 to return to the United States.

A sketchy outline of the president's itinerary released by the White House Tuesday represented a personal triumph for his wife, Pat, who had not been expected to go to China but who received a special invitation from the Chinese government to accompany her husband on the trip.

Diplomatic observers suggested that the Chinese intended to go out of their way to show the utmost hospitality to Mrs. Nixon while the president spent most of his time trying to make a start in resolving the serious differences that exist between the Washington and Peking governments.

White House adviser Henry Kissinger told a news conference Tuesday night that the talks between the president and the Chinese leaders will be free-wheeling, with each side bringing up whatever issues it wants.

Officials said they have no doubt that Chou will give the highest priority to Taiwan and U.S. military commitments to the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek when he confers with the president.

Kissinger said the U.S. will maintain its defence ties to Taiwan and that "there will be no deals made by either side at the expense of other countries, or concerning both countries."

His statement that any subject could be introduced in the talks left open the prospect that the Vietnam war, and China's military and economic support for Hanoi, would come up, although the United States, he said, expects the conflict to end through the Vietnamization program or negotiations with North Vietnam, not in Peking.

Kissinger stressed the modest goals the president has set for his historic journey to Peking and his feeling that his talks there will not bring about an instant detente.

He ruled out an agreement to establish diplomatic relations as a result of the presidential visit and said he expects that differences will continue after Nixon's return to the United States.

"The minimum we expect to get out of this trip is a better understanding by both sides of each other's position and a continuing means of remaining in contact so that one is not so dependent on these very dramatic encounters," he said.

Kissinger also hoped the visit would lead to agreements on exchanges in the cultural, journalistic and academic fields "so that our two peoples can get to know each other better."

Nixon will fly to China via Moscow after completing a series of summit talks with the heads of government of Canada, France, Britain, West Germany and Japan by Jan. 7 and about three months before holding summit talks in Moscow with Soviet leaders.

Jupiter Spacecraft Planned

The Jupiter craft, Pioneer II, is to be launched Feb. 27 on a half-billion-mile trip which will take about two years. En route, the spacecraft will spend six months or a year passing through the asteroid belt—millions of small chunks of space debris which orbit the sun from 180 million to 330 million miles out.

Senate Urges Aid to Pulp Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators recommended Tuesday changes in the government tax bill to provide lighter tax loads on pulp and paper companies, those earning royalties in mining and oil operations and foreign investors.

The proposals, in a report of the Senate banking committee, followed a report tabled Nov. 4 and wrap up the results of the committee's preliminary look at the tax bill.

For pulp and paper firms, the Senate committee urges an earned depletion-tax allowance —like that proposed in the bill for mining and oil companies— along with tax write-offs for pollution abatement costs.

It also recommends a 100-per-cent write-off of logging taxes paid to the provinces.

For non-operators in the mining and oil industry—those who collect royalties, for example—the report recommends the present 25-per-cent automatic depletion allowance be continued until 1981 for interests owned last June 18, the day the tax bill was introduced by the government.

Under the bill, the automatic saving would be replaced by a 33 1-3-per-cent earned depletion system. One dollar in taxes could be saved for every three spent by the operating company in eligible expenses. The change would take effect in 1976.

The committee says tax-exempt non-resident investors in Canadian bonds should retain their present privileges, and urges against provisions of the bill.

Under present law, a foreigner may be exempted from non-resident withholding tax by showing he lives in a country that imposes an income tax, and that he is exempt from that tax.

Under the bill, the non-resident also would have to show that he would also be exempt from Canadian income tax if he lived here, or that the non-resident was a trust or corporation set up as an employee pension fund.

The committee says that would discourage investment in Canadian bonds.

"The sale of Canadian debt obligations (as distinct from Canadian equities) to non-residents should be encouraged by extending the present exemption from withholding tax provisions instead of restricting it."

The report also proposes easier tax terms for profit-sharing plans, insurance companies and foreign-owned investment corporations.

Parolee to Work for Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — A special Senate subcommittee, to be formed today to investigate the parole system, plans to seek its own advice on the subject.

Senator Harper Prowse (L—Alberta), who will lead the investigation, said Tuesday night a young parolee will be hired as an adviser.

His main task would be to get the confidence of other parolees and prisoners who would be asked to appear before the subcommittee.

The subcommittee will be formed from the Senate standing committee on legal affairs but will have the powers of a special committee.

Senator Prowse said it has the full backing of Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, responsible to Parliament for the national parole board.

In its earlier report, the committee tailed for better breaks for Canadian firms operating abroad and reduced taxes on capital gains and resource industries.

Health Ministers to Meet

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial health ministers will meet here about mid-December to work out changes to the formulas for sharing costs of medical and hospital insurance programs.

Federal proposals were placed before the provinces earlier in the year and discussed at the Nov. 11-12 federal-provincial conference.

Since then, Quebec has supposedly suggested an alternative. The other provinces oppose any changes that would give them less federal money.

The federal government contributes about $1.2 billion a year toward provincial medical care and hospital insurance programs—roughly half the total cost.

Health Minister John Munro said in an address to hospital administrators Tuesday the federal government wants the new formula to link future increases in federal payments to the gross national product.

Informants have said the initial federal proposal to the provinces involved limiting the annual increase in payments to 6.7 per cent, the equivalent of the long-term growth of the gross national product.

Chinese Plan For Doctors Draws Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — China's system of highly-mobile health workers, who can rise from bedside attendant to full-fledged doctor, attracted federal government officials here Tuesday.

They were briefed on the Chinese system by Dr. Chen Wen-chieh, deputy director of the Blood Research Institute, and Dr. Ha Hsien-wen, deputy-director of surgery at the academy of Science, Peking, the first mainland Chinese medical visitors to Canada in more than five years.

Dr. J. Maurice LeClair, federal deputy health minister, said the Chinese system evidently shows "enviable upward mobility" for health-care workers.

The Chinese system holds particular interest for Canadian authorities who have been seeking ways of initiating and testing doctor-assistant programs to bolster medical services.

China has produced more than a million "barefoot" doctors to supply basic services in remote areas.

Dr. Chen said in an interview these workers, often in their mid-teens, practise in rural areas as part-time health officers. They are given periodical additional training by mobile teams of doctors or by health training centres.

Ultimately they can become full-fledged doctors. They have priority after periods of practice for available places in the medical schools. So do nurses who have been practising and taking extra training over seven or eight years.

Guidelines for Doctors Should Meet Approval

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association should develop guidelines on doctors' earnings that meet the approval of "the man on the street," says the association's general secretary.

Dr. Glenn Sawyer, writing in the Ontario Medical Review, said a policy should be drawn up before the next revision of the medical fee schedule in May, 1972.

"In doing so, we should bear in mind that the levels selected will have to be such that they will have the general approval of the man in the street," Dr. Sawyer said in an editorial.

He warned that if doctors insist on billing patients for every service they give, it could result in compulsory negotiation of fees with the provincial government.

Hexachlorophene Gets Clean Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department's food and drug directorate plans no general restriction on the use of hexachlorophene, a common soap and deodorant ingredient cited in U.S. experiments as a cause of animal brain damage.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, head of the directorate, said Tuesday the bacteria-destroying chemical has been used without ill effect for more than 20 years to bathe new-born infants.

He said vaginal deodorants were the only products containing hexachlorophene which may be subject to more stringent control. Some users of such deodorants had experienced vulvular swelling.

"These aren't serious effects but they are irritating," he said.

U.S. consumer advocate Ralph Nader asked the American food and drug administration earlier this week to classify hexachlorophene a prescription drug.

The recommendation was based on experiments showing evidence of brain damage in rats which had eaten food containing hexachlorophene. Other studies had indicated blood levels of the chemical in some persons who used it for bathing were "getting dangerously close" to those of the effected animals.

Dr. Morrison said he may advise physicians to ensure babies are thoroughly rinsed after being washed with hexachlorophene.

Hexachlorophene also is used in antiseptic creams and toothpaste.

Nuclear Theft Detector Being Tested

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canadian-developed equipment which might be used to prevent theft of dangerous nuclear materials is being studied by scientists from Canada and the United States.

A. S. Thompson, chief engineer for the project at the University of Western Ontario and a researcher with Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., said Tuesday the equipment is undergoing two weeks of testing to determine accuracy.

The equipment is an electron particle accelerator which, Mr. Thompson said, is the only equipment of its type operating in North America.

If tests prove it accurate, it could be the prototype of equipment to be used internationally to monitor fissionable materials when the International Atomic Energy Agency puts Project Safeguard into operation in 1972.

By permitting scientists to count the neutrons produced when a piece of uranium is bombarded with gamma rays, the equipment could keep an inventory of fissionable material from the time it is mined until it becomes waste from a nuclear reactor.

Scientists from Brookhaven National Laboratory of Long Island, N.Y., and ZRB Associates of La Jolla, Calif., are involved in testing the equipment here.

Mr. Thompson said several hundred devices would be required for the Safeguard monitoring, replacing chemical analysis which now requires several hours. The new equipment might be able to do it in minutes, he said.

Prof. Heinrich Froelich, one of two physicists here who developed the equipment in 1962 for the National Research Council, warned that countries, criminals or politicli factions could steal enough fissionable material to construct a bomb.

There is less than a 40-per-cent chance of discovering the loss, he said. In one U.S. plant enough fissionable material to build several bombs was unaccounted for.

Newfoundland PCs Try To Oust Smallwood

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives were planning a legal move today aimed at undercutting Liberal efforts to remain in power while asking the Newfoundland Supreme Court to declare vacant a seat won by the PCs in the Oct. 23 provincial election.

A Conservative spokesman said Tuesday the party would ask the court to declare PC candidate Ed Maynard, the elected member for St. Barbe South pending a decision on the Liberal petition.

If successful, the move would ensure the Conservatives a majority of one in the 42-seat legislature.

Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberals, who won 20 seats, plan to petition the court Thursday to have St. Barbe South declared vacant on the ground that a recount could not be completed because 185 ballots were burned.

The Conservative application for a writ of mandamus will likely be presented to the court today, the spokesman said. He said it was hoped a judge would schedule an early hearing.

The Liberal petition must be heard by two judges, and the process could take two or three weeks.

If the judges rule unanimously in favor of the Liberal petition, a byelection must be held as soon as possible. The statutory notice of a byelection is 21 days.

A byelection also would be automatic if the judges fail to agree on a decision.

If the petition is turned down the Conservatives would retain the seat.

Meanwhile, if the Conservative application for a writ of mandamus is turned down, the situation will remain uncertain until judges hearing the Liberal petition make their decision.

In the last of seven scheduled recounts, Conservative Gerald Ottenheimer was confirmed Tuesday as winner in St. Mary's riding.

Indians on three northeastern Alberta Indian reserves are demanding better living conditions and new schools from the Indian affairs department. More U.S. Tourists Forecast

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — President Nixon's U.S. 10 per cent temporary import surcharge will add additional $165 million into Canada's tourist economy, Fern Guindon, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Information, said Tuesday night.

He told the Northern Ontario Tourist Outfitters Association he expected $30 million of those U.S. tourist dollars to be spent in Ontario.

Mr. Guindon predicted the three-pronged U.S. policy of a 10-per-cent supplementary duty on manufactured goods, a wage and price freeze and a suspension of gold conversions will make it more expensive for Americans to travel in Europe.

He said U.S. tourists would therefore be more inclined to travel in Canada.

Mr. Guindon also said the practice of persons camping on Crown land at the expense of private operators is under review and a decision is expected before the next tourist season.

"It must be frustrating for (tourist camp operators) to find tourists parking freely on government-owned lands for periods up to three weeks as present regulations permit," Mr. Guindon said.

Quebec Has Huge Deficit

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Raymond Garneau tabled a $122.8 million supplementary budget in the national assembly Tuesday and said there would be no new tax hikes or borrowing despite a $95.5 million increase in the deficit.

The budget, aimed at tackling unemployment and bolstering welfare programs, earmarks $89.9 million for the social affairs department and $21 million to the department of roads and public works. The remainder will go to other departments.

With projected expenditures of $4,227.7 million and revenues of $3,939.2 million, the government collects a budgetary deficit of $307.5 million for the current fiscal year—$95.5 million more than Mr. Garneau predicted in his budget in March.

No tax increases or borrowings were necessary, Mr. Garneau said, because the government had recently borrowed $75 million to finance current spending and because of an increase in tax revenue.

Increased productivity, retail sales and sales tax revenues also had helped the government's financial picture, he said.

The federal government is paying 53 per cent of the $80 million the social affairs department is going to pump directly into welfare programs, which Mr. Garneau says will help stimulate the provincial economy.

Most of the non-welfare money is being directed into pump-priming projects.

The federal and public works department will spend $10 million for roads, bridges and highway construction and $6 million for other public works projects and $1 million for prisons to be built in the winter.

Mr. Garneau added $5 million for mental hospitals, which he admits he left out of the March budget, and $4 million for other hospitals.

Constable Suspended, Crossed Picket Lines

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for striking workers at the Sheaffer Pen Co. plant said Tuesday a town police constable who twice crossed picket lines, once bringing out packages in his private automobile, has been suspended.

Police Chief Fred Minshall of this community 65 miles north of London, declined to comment on the incident but said a statement would be prepared today.

The police officer said in an interview that he had been suspended, but said he first entered the plant to use the washroom.

The second trip to the plant, after he was suspended, was to get an affidavit from a security guard. The packages were his own private property, he said.

Marjorie Robinson, president of the International Union of Machinists and Aerospace Workers local, said Chief Minshall arrived at the picket line shortly after Constable Tom Portner, on duty at the plant, left the plant building the first time on foot and later, wearing civilian clothes and driving his own automobile, crossed the picket line into the factory and returned with packages in the back seat.

The union is demanding a 30-cent-an-hour general increase plus 15 cents an hour extra for skilled workers. Sheaffer has offered a 15-cent-an-hour increase immediately, and 10 cents in the second and third years of a three-year contract.

Mastitis Tests Easy

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write about mastitis. How can one tell the difference between mastitis (formation of cysts) and a malignancy?

I am not uncomfortable, just slight soreness and enlargement of the glands.

My original doctor is deceased and I have had myself checked from time to time when I have felt a lump, and there has been no malignancy. I feel hesitant to take up the time of a doctor for a checkup when nothing is wrong.—R.G.

Let's start with this: There just isn't any way for you to tell the difference; neither is there any way for your doctor to be positive without taking specific tests of one kind or another. But with tests, he can.

A cyst means that one of the countless small glands in the breast has become sloped up. The material produced by the gland, small as it is, cannot escape, so the gland swells and pressure is created. It may not be painful; again, it can become very uncomfortable.

Even without tests, a doctor may feel pretty sure that a cyst isn't malignant, depending on the circumstances. Again, in another case, he may be highly suspicious that a lump may be cancer and will want to find out definitely with as little delay as possible.

What circumstances? Well, if a woman has several cysts at the same time, it is likely they are, indeed, just cysts. But if there is only a single lump, and it is painless, the suspicion of cancer arises. Granted, single cysts do occur. Not every lump is cancer by any means. But the important point is to find out—at once.

Mammography (a special form of breast x-ray) is more and more being used to detect breast cancer. An older, but very definite and very necessary test is biopsy—removal of a small portion of tissue for microscopic examination, which will show whether the cells are or are not malignant. The entire cyst is removed, but that still is not a great deal of tissue. It does not entail removal of the breast. The disfigurement is very slight.

Now when a physician has examined (in the same patient) a number of lumps that proved to be cysts, and thus knows that she is subject to cyst formation, he will not be greatly surprised if more cysts may occur. (Although there may not be any more.)

But he will still be on watch for any painless lump in the breast, because the fact that one lump is a cyst doesn't positively mean that the next one will be. Location and other factors can be significant but not a means of positive diagnosis.

In a word, you aren't just taking up a doctor's time for a checkup "when nothing is wrong." It's his responsibility to determine whether anything is wrong. If not, that's fine. But it isn't a waste of time. It is a necessary precaution.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can standing on your head be harmful? I heard if you do this five minutes a day that it is good for the brain. Will this increase my I.Q. or cause me harm?—Mrs. M.M.

This notion gained some transient notoriety back around the First World War days, but for all I know it originated in Alice in Wonderland.

Anyway, it certainly won't improve your I.Q., and if you have a tendency to high blood pressure or small artery defects in the brain, it could be harmful.

Opening lead — Jack of spades.

Let's say you're in six no-trump and West leads a spade. You start with eleven tricks and the problem is to find a twelfth.

There are two obvious sources for this trick. One is in hearts, the other in diamonds—and you are missing the Jack of each suit.

You can hope that one or both suits will be divided 3-3 or that the singleton or doubleton Jack will appear — in which case cashing the A-K-Q will do the job—or you can plan the play so as to finesse against one of the Jacks later on if developments indicate that this would be the proper thing to do.

In order to make an intelligent judgment on whether or not to finesse eventually, you should try to assemble all the information you can about the opposing hands.

In line with this, you win the spade lead in your hand and return the deuce of clubs! Conceding a trick at this point is sure to simplify the play later on.

As it happens, the effect of this early concession of a trick is that you wind up making the slam almost automatically. West falls into a squeeze and you don't have to knock yourself out trying to guess whether or not to take a finesse against either Jack.

West wins the club with the nine and, let's say, returns the ten of spades. You win with the king and cash the A-K of clubs and ace of spades, on which West must make two discards.

He can afford the first discard, a diamond, but on his next discard he must relinquish either a heart or another diamond. Which one he chooses does not matter; you acquire a fourth trick in that suit and thus take the slam.

Tomorrow: A Fine Hand.

Tax Bill Study Cut To Just 4 More Days

Harry Mitchell

The First of Thousands

Bellevillian Elgin Vader made first purchase of 1972 automobile licence plates which went on sale in city yesterday. By buying early, Mr. Vader — here being helped install plates by 17-year-old daughter Mary Jo at Wright Avenue home — figures he beats the rush. Thousands of plates are issued annually in Belleville and deadline for motorists is end of February. For details see Page 2.

Rule Adopted In '69 Invoked

OTTAWA (CP) — The government took advantage of a divided opposition Wednesday to announce it is cutting off debate on its tax-change bill, before the Commons since early September.

The tool it used was House rule 75-C, a debate-limiting device unused since it became a rule in 1969.

The Commons, which has been sitting as a committee for 27 days to examine the bill section-by-section, now has only four more days to do so.

The bill then will move to its next stage — third and final reading.

The Senate then would be asked to approve the bill in time to meet the Jan. 1 government deadline for implementation.

Although the bill is expected to complete its protracted passage through Parliament before Christmas, there was a warning Wednesday from Senator Jacques Flynn, Senate opposition leader, that the Senate should not have to rubber-stamp the legislation.

The Liberal-led Senate banking committee already has studied the bill and issued two reports—the latest Tuesday—calling for extensive amendments.

Even so, informants suggest the bill would be passed.

The government announcement that Rule 75-C would be invoked formally today provoked a few opposition catcalls initially and 40 minutes of argument over technicalities.

But two hours later, some Conservative MPs staged a delayed action display of hostility by demanding and winning premature adjournment of the House for the day—a symbolic act of criticism. During the argument over that move, the Commons was in an uproar.

Rule 75-C was invoked after the breakdown of behind-the-scenes attempts to get all-party agreement on time limits, but the opposition parties disagreed.

Further, MPs of other parties said the Conservatives were divided among themselves—the leaders favoring some limit, but unable to ensure that all their backbenchers would abide by the agreement.

The Conservatives who forced early adjournment accused the government of using closure.

Twelve Missing After Fire

Two young boys, aged 9 and 11, walked to another farmhouse after the fire broke out about 2 a.m. EST and were taken to an Ottawa hospital by neighbors. They were treated for burns.

Neighbors say the family's name is Hebert and that they moved recently to the farm-house near this village 25 miles east of Ottawa from Gatineau Que., near Ottawa.

Fire Chief Roland Lefleur of nearby Clarence Creek, Ont., says 10 children, a mother and a father are missing. All that remains of the three-storey brick house is charred bricks and fiery rubble surrounding a basement furnace.

Chief Lafleur said he was not sure what caused the fire, but that it might have been a faulty furnace.

Slain British Soldier Is Believed Tortured

BELFAST (Reuter) — Northern Ireland police were investigating reports today that a British soldier whose body was found near the Irish border was tortured before he was killed.

The soldier, 35-year-old Pte. Robert Bruner, was found with four bullet wounds in his head last Monday on a lonely road near the town of Crossmaglen.

A post-mortem revealed that Bruner's thumb was pierced and one report said he was tortured and beaten before he was killed.

It was thought that the hole in his thumb was caused by a bullet or nail being driven through it.

Bruner, the fifth British soldier to be killed in Ulster this year, was shot after he visited his fiancee, 20-year-old Lucy Connelly, who lives in the southern Irish town of Dundalk.

Army officials are working on the theory that he was killed by the outlawed Irish Republican Army as a warning to other British soldiers.

Pakistani Planes Raid Capital of Indian State

NEW DELHI (AP) — Pakistani planes strafed the capital of India's Tripura State adjacent to East Pakistan's southeast border today, an Indian government spokesman announced.

The spokesman said the Indian army had been ordered to take immediate "defensive action," indicating it would cross the border. The government used the same phrase in connection with the three previous advances into East Pakistan which it has admitted.

The Indian spokesman gave this account:

Three U.S.-supplied F-86 Sabre jets bombed and strafed the city of Agartala, 60 miles due east of Dacca, and its airport for 20 minutes this afternoon.

A number of civilians were killed or wounded, but anti-aircraft guns prevented any damage to the airfield.

Agartala has been under heavy shelling since 8 p.m. Wednesday, with artillery shells smashing into heavily populated areas and in the surrounding refugee camps for Bengalis from East Pakistan. The shelling has killed four civilians and wounded 37.

The Pakistani army reported two new Indian ground attacks, but Pakistani military sources said the defenders held or repulsed all assaults.

In Parliament, Finance Minister Y. B. Chavan said India is prepared for emergencies if the U.S. stops all aid to India because of the conflict with Pakistan.

Parliament discussed a recent letter from President Nixon to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi following Wednesday night's announcement that the United States has suspended the licensing of arms shipments to India.

Discussion of the letter came amid unconfirmed reports that Nixon has also threatened to stop American aid.

In Washington, state department officials said the arms decision had been made because Indian forces had crossed the border to fight in East Pakistan.

Benson Says Surcharge Might End by Christmas

ROME (CP) — The United States surcharge on imports might be eliminated before Christmas if a major realignment of currencies can be achieved before then, says Finance Minister Edgar Benson of Canada.

Benson made the comments at a news conference Wednesday following conclusion of a two-day meeting of the Group of Ten, leading non-Communist countries.

The meeting ended without any settlement of current international monetary and trade problems caused by the U.S. decision Aug. 15 to impose a 10-per-cent surcharge on dutiable imports and suspend the dollar's gold convertibility. But some progress towards a solution appears to have been made.

Benson said if agreement on currency realignment can be achieved at a further meeting in Washington Dec. 17 and 18, the surcharge might be lifted immediately.

But he stressed that it is extremely difficult to reach such a settlement—reserved ultimately for decisions by national governments—in a forum such as the Group of Ten.

He said told reporters the Canadian dollar, floating freely in terms of U.S. currency since mid-1970, will not be returned to a fixed rate or revalued upwards as part of any general realignment.

The minister made somewhat similar statements before meetings of the prime ministers and Commons.

progress was made at the meeting. Both stressed that for the first time ministers had discussed specific figures for realignment and agreed to talks aimed at liberalizing trade over the next two months between the U.S. and Europe.

The discussions between the U.S. and Europe as well as the Washington meeting will be held in a period when President Nixon has scheduled a series of bilateral conferences with major Western leaders, including Prime Minister Trudeau.

Many observers believe no final settlement to the economic problems is possible until these are completed during the next two months.

Benson said Canada supports the U.S. in seeking reduction of trade barriers erected by the Common Market. Canada is particularly concerned about the protection offered to farmers in the community.

'Miss Jones. Bring everything we have on the Berlin Wall.'

Senators Vote To Give Nixon Control Powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed 88 to 4 a bill permitting President Nixon to continue wage, price and rent controls through April, 1973.

The measure also contains a provision designed to give retroactive wage increases to most employees who lost them because of the Aug. 15-to-Nov. 14 pay freeze.

Dollar May Have to Stop Floating

FREDERICTON (CP) — Senator Richard Stanbury of Toronto, president of the Liberal party of Canada, said Wednesday Canada may have to fix the value of her currency even though many economists favor a floating dollar.

Canada, unlike the United States, could not afford "the luxury of isolationism," he told a news conference before he addressed a Liberal meeting.

He said Canada was the fifth-largest trading nation and would have to co-operate with allies to solve a world monetary crisis.

Congress Agrees to Keep Tax Credit for Exports

WASHINGTON (CP) — A conference committee of the Senate and House of Representatives has agreed to keep in a new general tax bill a plan to promote exports of U.S.-produced goods by granting special tax privileges to domestic corporations. It dropped a punitive surcharge on imports.

The conference committee Wednesday night agreed to retain in the bill the Senate version of a provision, strongly opposed in Canada, that would allow companies to avoid payments of taxes on profits earned by specially-organized domestic-international sales corporations, provided those profits are plowed into the businesses in specific ways.

Under the measure, which would be made permanent law, tax benefits would apply to half the income of DISC businesses. The Senate version would have kept DISC on the books for five years, the House for 18 years.

The DISC plan would in effect provide a subsidy to U.S. exporters, would give U.S. companies an incentive to invest and expand plants in the United States rather than in Canada or other countries, and would reduce competitiveness of Canadian-manufactured goods in the U.S. and third-country markets.

U.S. Dollar Plunges

LONDON (AP) — The possibility of devaluation sent the U.S. dollar plunging to record lows on major European exchanges today.

This possibility sent the price of "free" non-monetary gold up on some bullion exchanges. In London the price moved up from $43.54 an ounce to $43.88. In Zurich it rose to $43.70 from $43.57.

Market conditions were generally described as hectic and state banks in Paris and London were reported buying substantial amounts of dollars to slow the decline in value.

On the Frankfurt foreign exchange, the dollar plunged to a record low of 3.29 West German marks, compared with Wednesday's close of 3.3005 marks. Today's rate represented an increase in the mark's dollar value of 11½ per cent since May, when the West German money was set free to find its own level in the market.

Auto Licences Now on Sale

The first of about 18,000 1972 motor vehicle licence plates went on sale in Belleville yesterday.

As usual, the provincial government follows its policy of alternating the same colors on the following prizes for licence base carry blue numerals on a white background.

Prices for both licences and plates are increased from other years, reports city licence issuer George Olsen.

It's still $2 for a licence with the following plates for licence plates based on vehicle weight: Passenger vehicles, $30; six cylinder, $27.50; eight cylinder $35.

Snowmobiles still cost a $2 registration fee for two years.

Deadline for 1972 licences is February 29, says Mr. Olsen, who operates his bureau in rooms at about 18,000 annually.

First Bellevillian to purchase 1972 plates yesterday was Elgin Yader, a teacher education specialist in the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Moira Authority Gets Land Grant

A provincial grant of $15,600 has been approved for the Authority for purchase of additional grakelank property south of Highway 401 on the west side of the Moira River.

Quinte MPP the Hon. Richard Potter announced yesterday that the grant had been approved by the Hon. George Kerr, Minister of the Environment.

An authority official said the grant would be used to purchase approximately seven acres of land to round out several blocks of property acquired earlier for the park development on the west side of the Moira opposite Riverside Park.

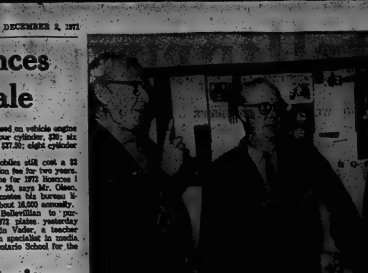
The authority now owns approximately 70 acres of west river bank property between Highway 401 and College St. The 70 per cent provincial grant is received by the authority on the purchase of greenbelt property with the city in the above case as the main dividing municipality leaving the major portion of the authority's share of the cost.

The city parks board has already commenced development of the west river bank property acquired earlier.

A swimming beach, roadway and parking area will be developed near the Ontario Hydro power line and a parks board service centre will be constructed on the hill at the north.

A general cleanup of the entire area has all but been completed, leaving selected area for esthetic value and provision of shade.

Milk Can Retinning Is Offered



The Prince Edward Milk Committee is prepared to assist county producers to assemble milk cans for retinning.

Kenneth Wright, committee public relations officer, in his weekly newsletter asks that any producers considering retinning of cans to get in touch with the committee.

The Prince Edward Tinning Company plant at Demorestville is closed temporarily, but would re-open soon if enough interest is shown. Belleville companies require a minimum of 30 cans in a lot and a load of up to 90 cans can be retinned in a day. The cost for retinning is $5 per can plus $1 per lid.

You Can Help Yourself In New Liquor Store

DESERONTO (Staff)— This town could well be the toast of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario.

Yesterday the board opened what one official considered to be the smartest, brightest most up-to-date liquor store in the province.

Liquor, wines, beers, liqueurs are finally out in the open — lined along the aisles where consumers can make their choices right before their eyes.

The system replaces the decades - old method whereby the customer chose his liquor by number from a board, filled out a chit and waited while a counter assistant disappeared to the rear of the store to seek out the ordered brand.

Now even shopping carts and baskets are provided for the convenience of customers who scrutinize the goods labelled and priced, before checking out with a cashier without having to sign any forms.

Added to this is a bright decor to create "nice, bright, cheerful atmosphere," said Ken Lewis, LCBO district supervisor.

For a small town (population 1,863) there's nothing like it in Ontario," enthused Mr. Lewis. "I would say this is the most liquor store in Ontario right at the present time."

There now are more then 30 such stores scattered around the province and the Deseronto outlet isn't the first in the Quinte district. Last September a similar store was opened at Wellington.

However, said Mr. Lewis, the Deseronto opening appeared to attract much attention.

During opening day, customers came from as far away as Kingston, Belleville and Frankford.

A number may have been persons passing through town, but many, he believes, were drawn to the store by curiosity for a novel installation.

"We've seen quite an increase (over normal Wednesday business) here today — that's for sure," said the supervisor.

Tax

But Rule 75-C is not closure.

Closure is invoked under Rule 33. Under Rule 33 the government unilaterally at any time, having to give only 24 hours notice that it intends to use the rule. But once Rule 33 is invoked, there are clearly-established time limits over each stage of debate and the rule must be invoked repeatedly at each stage.

Under 75-C the government must give 48 hours warning, but the limits of debate are its to establish. It also does not be invoked only once to cover all sections of any given piece of legislation.

It also is the third of three stages. Rule 75-A requires a motion for the gain unanimous consent of Commons parties to certain debate-limiting measures while Rule 75-B requires an attempt by at least three House parties to reach agreement on debating limits.

Rule 75-C can be invoked only after every avenue under 75-A and 75-B have been exhausted.

The delayed-action fireworks came late in the afternoon. The Conservatives were infuriated at the treatment given a Conservative motion to adjourn committee debate on the bill an hour early as a symbolic protest over the time limitation.

As James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) moved the adjournment motion, Conservatives rushed into the House in a pre-planned manoeuvre to generate an opposition majority.

If Chairman Prosper Boulanger (L—Montreal Mercier) had put the motion immediately as required under Commons rules, the Conservatives would easily have passed what was little more than a small gesture of protest.

But Mr. Boulanger allowed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to put a point of order, and while he did so several Liberals entered the chamber.

Even after Mr. Boulanger put the motion, several other Liberals entered even though under Commons rules it is illegal to enter the House after a motion has been put.

The Conservatives, with support from the NDP, finally won the vote by 46 to 42, with two Social Credit members sliding with the government.

Under the behavior of the government members and Mr. Boulanger infuriated the opposition. Memo pads and envelopes flew, gaulia rang and the government was acutely embarrassed.

"Public opinion," he said, "particularly the business community, wants to end the uncertainty that now prevails as to what is to be the tax system of this country.

"I believes that public opinion will support the idea that the bill has been canvassed fairly thoroughly and it is now time to move on to some other items that require parliamentary attention."

Electrocutions Illustrate Hydro Danger

TWEED (Staff) — Ronald Chapman, assistant accident prevention officer for Ontario Hydro, electrocuted eight 'people' last night, but since this is a fairly regular occurrence, they weren't overly upset.

The 'people' are only two inches tall and really don't feel a thing.

Ontario Hydro had several educational models constructed in Toronto, to show the eight most serious situations in which careless or unknowledgeable people become electrocuted.

Under carefully controlled conditions, the 'tiny 'people' were zapped climbing trees and hydro poles to rescue cats; flying a kite near power lines; helping an automobile accident victim trapped in a car on which hydro lines have landed; painting working next to exposed house wires; a tiny farmer removing ground pipes next to hydro lines; two little people adjusting a television antenna.

The educational side have proved effective when operated for school children.

"As a matter of fact," he told more than 50 members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Fire Aid Association at the Tweed fire hall last night, "of the 24 fatalities in Ontario this year, only five were children. The rest were adults."

Mr. Chapman said there have been a total of 81 fatal and non - fatal accidents throughout the province as of Nov. 30.

He said a majority of accidents have involved a structure (steam shovel) stray into overhead wires. However, with a heavy line allotted a North Bay firm recently, Ontario Hydro is hopeful that more stringent controls will force workers to be more careful in such situations.

Another serious problem which has arisen recently are incidents where a ball game or kite gets caught in hydro poles and steel guy wires act as a perfect conductor.

"It's not necessarily electrical burns that cause injuries," he said, "it's the fall that can result from the shock," he told firefighters.

A U.S.-produced safety film was shown and a number of these incidents, on which the hydro safety officer commented later.

Accident victims in cases charged by fallen wires, are advised by the hydro people to 'shuffle' rather than walk after jumping out. The victim who touches both a car and the ground is in for a shock. Because electricity travels in circular waves much like a two ton ripple, one foot following another, can provide enough variance for the charge to catch him as it "jumps" from the source. The higher the voltage . . . the further electricity can jump.

Firefighters are urged to call hydro crews when dealing any fire which can come in contact with hydro wires. Although Mr. Chapman admitted five hydro employees died this year on the job, he said their four-year apprenticeship provides the men with experience few firemen can obtain. He said because hydro linesmen are working with between 110 and 350,000 volts, the odds of being electrocuted are much lower than for the average layman.

He urged members of the association to exact extreme caution and care if required to handle electric lines during emergencies. Mr. Chapman is distributed booklets illustrating proper explanations which is available.

"Electricity is 'something you can't see, taste or smell . . . but you can feel it," he concluded.

Warmer Weekend After Cold Snap

Mercury dipped to 5 above last night at Belleville's pump house, and it was cold comfort to local people to know that it was chillier up north.

Trenton recorded a warmer 7 above zero last night.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton reports that the record low for Trenton was 11 below zero in 1932.

A warming trend is expected to spread slowly through the district from now to the weekend, climaxing with temperatures in the 40s on Sunday.

Light snow can be expected on Saturday, and showers are forecast for Sunday.

Machine Electrocutes 'People'

Ronald E. Chapman, assistant accident prevention officer for Ontario Hydro, makes a practice of electrocuting eight miniature 'people' on this $2,400 scale model. The educational aid was constructed to show eight situations in which most electrocutions occur. The tiny, mobile figures can be zapped with 9,000 volts of carefully contained electricity, to illustrate dangers of which people should be aware. He was demonstrating his classroom aid at the regular monthly meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Fire Aid Association at Tweed last night.

Rebates Depend on Taxes

The Ontario residential property tax reduction system will remain identical to last year's system with a rebate figure of $59.40 for residents in the city of Belleville.

The system of rebates was instituted in 1968 with its chief objective being "to offset the increase in residential taxes needed for the maintenance of the educational system."

When school boards were enlarged to service a greater area in '68, city dwellers found themselves paying more taxes to upgrade the standards of rural schools and to pay bus costs.

"The rebate, made annually, tries to compensate for this increase," said Frank Morrell, city treasurer.

The rebate figure is worked from both a base figure and a yearly changing one.

"Thirty dollars is the basic sum and then 10 per cent of the average residential tax of the municipality is added," said Mr. Morrell.

"From the figure of $59.40, it appears that the average residential tax is only $294 ($59.40-30.00)," said Mr. Morrell. "This is not a fair representation of the average tax because of the large number of apartment dwellings in the city which pull the figure down.

An average home in the city will be paying as much as $300 in annual residential taxes.

The landlord is bound by law to pay the rebate before the end of December for each occupant of his building.

This includes any tenant in an individually assessed living quarter. The rebate is not payed to roomers.

While the rebate figure is set at $59.40, if this figure exceeds half of the residents' (owner) annual taxes, the rebate figure will be lowered in that case.

"If the owner is only paying $100 annually in taxes, his rebate can only be $50," said Mr. Morrell.

If a tenant moves within the first 11 months of the year, the landlord is responsible for delivering the amount of rebate he deserves within 30 days of his moving.

For every month he was a tenant, he would receive one twelfth of the annual rebate.

The rebate must be paid in cash or cheque and must not be a deduction from the rent.

This year, the rebate in the city is the same for both the separate school board and the public school system.

In Picton the rebate is $59.27 for public school supporters and $55.76 for separate school supporters.

For the town of Trenton it is $54.50 across the board.

Fishing Limits

Continuing Common Market negotiations pointing Britain's possible entry have stalled once again — this time over fishing rights. Market members, especially France, are reported favoring access for all to the waters around Britain as well as to those on the European side.

Britain is strongly opposed to such an idea on the grounds that national fishing rights must be protected from indiscriminate trawling by foreign boats. What the next step is we don't know, but it is clear that this is one more obstacle to Britain's final entry into the European Common Market.

We think Britain has a point; it would surely be better if each country stuck to its own coastal boundaries if the fish population is not to be virtually eliminated. Britain shows good sense in this matter, something we cannot say for the Europeans.

Materialist Dilemma

The Navajos of New Mexico are no more enamored of the trappings of modern civilization than are many of their Indian brothers in Canada. They are reported to have chosen the white man, with only token indication that he is asking official permission from the tribes, is trying to push through an electrification project involving placement of towers and cables on Indian lands.

The Indians say they have no electricity in their primitive homes and have no need of it. They just want to be left alone. All this is a long way from Prince Edward County and the subject of music, but consider that the Indians, not to mention Maoris and other native peoples make very rhythmic music without any need of costly materialist trappings. And this in contrast to the word from across the bay that organization of a band at Prince Edward Collegiate would cost an estimated $25,000 — approximately $15,000 salary for a music instructor and up to $10,000 for instruments.

This would indeed be a big additional item for the taxpayers of sparsely-populated Prince Edward, but it is also a rather sad commentary on our high-priced times that it should take so much to bring students of the Collegiate in Picton abreast of the musical times as it were.

Compounding the problem is the fact that student interest in such a project is not that keen. All right then, without a musical choir? Little cost would be involved for that, perhaps a uniform at most, and there must surely be enough interested in singing for such a project to get off the ground. A choral group could do much for the school. It could provide a cultural link with the surrounding region, just as the Sing-Out young people in Trenton have done for their community.

Dairy Show

Where else is the legend of empire in our Anglo-Saxon society so staunchly preserved as in Belleville? Yes, the British Empire Dairy Show is under way again, this time in a vacant store at the Four Corners. And it is being held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, a body whose antecedents go back 44 years when the empire still flourished and the Commonwealth as it took its place was a political arrangement of the future. And despite many vicissitudes, the Ontario cheese industry survives, its products still available and as attractive to the palate as ever.

More Break-ins

The dreary succession of break-ins which have been plaguing Belleville continue, as witness two more reported in recent days. From the locations given of late — Moira St. E., North Front St. and College Street W. — it is clear the thieves (with a partiality for radio and TV equipment) have been concentrating their nefarious activities within a relatively small radius. There are too many burglars around Belleville these days for comfort and the sooner the police can reduce or eliminate this threat to citizens and their belongings the better.

Scots Loch

A reference to Loch Lomond in our editorial page picture caption last Saturday came out as "Loch Lochond" which was reprehensible indeed and will not happen again!

Bureaucracy Suspect

Despite Security Government 'Leaks' Like A Sieve

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — A blue wisp of smoke climbs into the pale early winter air from the chimney atop the old Canadian Bank of Commerce building on Wellington street now used as an annex to the Bank of Canada.

It is a very high-priced fire they have going down there in the big furnaces in the basement.

It is money going up in flames — old money, withdrawn from circulation, but still good for spending if you could get your hands on it.

The burning is a security measure.

Daily there are such incinerations in other government buildings in Ottawa.

Not of money.

But of official papers and documents, carrying the "read tab" of government secrecy. Highlevel "for your eyes only" material, which, once read, must be destroyed.

They are reduced to ashes in the furnaces of External Affairs, of the Privy Council and Prime Minister's Office, and of National Defence, stuffed into what the bureaucrats call "burn bags," and checked into the furnace.

In other only slightly less secure departments there are "shredders" to tear official papers into straw-wide strips.

Some departments use paper sacks which chew down secret documents and coordinate money to the consistency of grist.

At departmental doorways there are uniformed guards to peer at the photographs on the official passes of visitors and compare them with the faces of the bearers.

In every department and section of it dealing in the handling of business of official confidentiality there are the government's own security men, working under the cover of clerks. Junior executives and other bright-young-men types, of very likely some, old and trusted career officers.

All of this, the elaborate apparatus of security.

But it is not working. And never has.

Even the Bank of Canada, bastion of security has had its leaky days. Some years ago, mint-new stacks of new money vanished without a trace, thousands of dollars worth of it, and while there has been revealed of the how, who or where of its mysterious disappearance, all of this, more than a hundred percent water-tight, the government departments collectively are a sieve.

Always have been, with the flow of secret information accelerated, but, more likely, not nevertheless slowed.

But never are such leaks as have come in almost a torrent from "sources" within the government and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Among them: leaks of dossiers accuracy on the LaSalle Drug Commission, Defence Department disclosures, the Gray Report on Canada investment, the Privy Council memo on American capital, and who knows how many more.

What has gone wrong?

Two theories.

Conservative Whip Jed Baldwin charges it to the "new young" permissive and often unprincipled type of advisers the Cabinet more and more frequently consults.

Those are headstrong types, says Jed Baldwin, often acutely socially conscious and impatient with "establishment" ways.

Accepting their own standards as accuracy on the LaSalle Drug Commission, Defence Department disclosures, the Gray Report on Canada investment, the Privy Council memo on American capital, and who knows how many more.

What has gone wrong?

Two theories.

Conservative Whip Jed Baldwin charges it to the "new young" permissive and often unprincipled type of advisers the Cabinet more and more frequently consults.

Those are headstrong types, says Jed Baldwin, often acutely socially conscious and impatient with "establishment" ways.

They "leak" Jed Baldwin suspects, with the hope of embarrassing the Government, and forcing its hand.

Remember how, just the other day the four writers preparing Senator Dave Croll's poverty report split, and walking out after denouncing him as an old fuddy-duddy, pocketed their own recommendations?

But Ontario Conservative MP Wallace Nesbitt, has another theory. He has said, over a period of time, that he suspects the Civil Service. Not the individual, but rather he calls the "secret mind" of the collective service.

He has recalled that when there is a "change in consensus" that the Government is not accepting its advice, the whole administration must be dismissed. The Government destroyed, in turn, the government of Lester Pearson, Prime Minister St. Laurent and the Conservative prime minister of John Diefenbaker, because, its administrators, as Mr. Nesbitt puts it, "they just would not do it their years told".

Neither will the Trudeau government, with the Prime Ministers' entourage up his own private bureaucracy in the PMO.

And so what does he expect?

And A Book About It

An Awful Amount Of Scotch

BBC London Letter

Three hundred million bottles of Scotch whisky are exported every year. And a book about whisky has also penetrated to many corners of the globe. Titled simply 'Scotch', it was written by the famous Scottish author and diplomat, Sir Robert Bruce Lockhart, who died last year.

A BBC review of the latest edition (published by Putnam and Co., London) finds Sir Robert makes Scotland's national drink fascinating to read about. The name, he points out, means 'water of life' and comes from the Gaelic. Two kinds of whisky are made in Scotland, malt and grain. Malt whisky is made from malted barley in a traditional pot still, and malt whiskies produced in different parts of Scotland have their own distinctive flavors, for the water used in the fermentation process gives different tastes according to the rocks and peat through which it flows. Grain whisky can be made from any kind of cereal, and a more modern type of apparatus is used for it, known as the patent still. Most of the Scotch drunk today is a blend of malt and grain whiskies, but connoisseurs maintain nothing competes with the single malts — if you can get them.

But there is much in this book besides an account of the origins of whisky and the way it is made. Sir Robert maintains that it is whisky that has made the Scots what they are. 'It is with our nature and our climate' he writes. 'It rekindles old fires in us, our hatred of cant and privilege . . . It is our release from materialism. I often think that without it we should have been so irritatingly efficient that a worse persecution than the Hebrews have suffered would have been our inevitable fate'.

Will Dr. Potter Make It To Cabinet Rank?

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
of The Intelligencer

Government centres on a premier. Public attention goes largely to the man who is the leader. But no man can govern alone. Behind every premier and prime minister there is a group of ministers. And on the quality of these men, and women (?), can depend the final quality of the government itself.

In days when cabinets were smaller, and affairs much less complex, there was a common assessment that any provincial premier with three strong men backing him up could probably give good administration. If he had four more he was to be considered blessed with a large sense of talent.

This assessment probably wouldn't apply today except that a leader with four or more good men behind him still is fortunate. The calibre of men coming into public life has not kept pace with the growth in intricacy of the affairs they have to administer and discuss.

However, on the old standard at least, Premier Davis is perhaps fortunate.

In the Davis government as it starts its first full term in office there are five or six men who are to be considered in the strong category.

At the top of the list is Treasurer D'Arcy McKeough. Mr. McKeough has as good a grasp of financial affairs as any recent treasurer, and perhaps better.

Over the next few years he has to steer the province through a major fiscal reorganization. But probably his hardest job will be finding the dollars among the many demands for a new spending. Some considered view he can do this can be taken, from his record as Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, relatively short tenure as treasurer.

Particularly in his administration of regional government and regional development he has shown that he can usually swayed from the main points.

MacNaughton is the elder statesman of the group, after a long spell as Treasurer and particularly Chairman of Treasury Board, probably knows more about the affairs of the government generally than anybody else.

The great asset of the Transportation Minister is that he is cool and does not rattle. There has been some thought, however, that if a suitable post came up outside government he might move over. But the premier has been successfully launched through his first election.

With Bert Lawrence we could see as much progress in his department of Health as to any single department minister. He is a pragmatic intellectual with both initiative and imagination. He early has made his mark in medical professions and is beginning turning home cure under health insurance. This last step in the long run might even save money, and at least it will certainly make our health care facilities more efficient.

Dalton Bales is a sleeper in the government in that he seldom gets much public attention. But in his quiet way he has been an outstanding administrator.

John White in some senses mentals might not be put in the top rank. But in a sense he is another sleeper. He is very down to earth, well balanced, and should keep his calm before the fervor that can infest higher education.

Allan Lawrence is somewhat of a conundrum. As Minister of Justice he has not been the stride and imagination that marked his term as Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs and his candidacy for the party leadership. He organizationally has considerable ability and you can be perhaps no in the wrong portfolio.

Justice is a senior ministry. But it doesn't offer much scope for the talents that brave-star-scientist Lawrence.

Also somewhat of a conundrum is Education Minister Robert Welch. To date the strongest ability he has shown is as a political orator, however the education portfolio is a juncture which tends to smother a minister, even though, again, it is a senior post. And of course there wasn't room in Welch's earlier portfolio of Provincial Secretary. With him it is essentially a case that we don't have much on which to judge because he hasn't had the opportunity to show much.

Below this top level, but just below, we have Environment Minister George Kerr who has turned out to be a surprisingly good minister, unexpectedly bold and independent. Also Public Works Minister James Auld belongs here. His economy and efficiency have been commendable.

And Agriculture Minister William Stewart has handled the hard job of guiding the transformation in farming well. But he definitely is a specialist and even time in the Cabinet his assets can be questioned.

Then going down the line we have:

Revenue Minister Eric Winkler. Very new to the cabinet, but is seasoned with the strength he could probably handle any of half a dozen jobs well.

Trade and Development Minister Allan Grossman. Was excellent in Consumer Services, but leaves the impression of being over his head in his present very important portfolio. (Probably the most difficult ministry to fill in the government.)

Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle. This department, small organized in itself, but he administers it unobtrusively and apparently successfully.

Correctional Services Minister Syl Apps. Dedicated to his job, but also dedicated to old-time virtues a bit too much to please some people.

Mines Minister Lose Bernier. A new boy learning his job. His probably will become even aspire to top rank, but will be a good, independent and a passionate spokesman for the north.

Welfare Minister Claude Wells. Has been so naive he had some PCs in despair. There have been some slights of hand in connection.

Provincial Secretary John Yaremko. The veteran of the government. And a veteran of trouble. His greatest task probably be one of the first to be agreed up for the cabinet as the premier needs to get some of the new men into his cabinet.

And the Minister Without Portfolio Dr. Richard Potter, an refreshingly frank and independent, (but too much so for his own future?), and James Snow, a well-to-do developer who might make a good Minister of Public Works but who also, because of his background might be suspect in this portfolio.

It will be interesting to see what this premier does with these two men.

Ontario Dairy Princess Cheese Show Visitor

Ontario Dairy Princess Miss Nancy Brown of Grand Valley, near Orangeville, was a visitor Wednesday at the opening session of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers annual convention.

Fresh from a three-week official visit to the United Kingdom and to the World Cheese Expo in Wisconsin, Miss Brown told of her experiences and how she will spend the next year promoting the Ontario dairy industry.

Earlier in the day the Ontario Dairy Princess visited the British Empire Dairy Show in downtown Belleville.

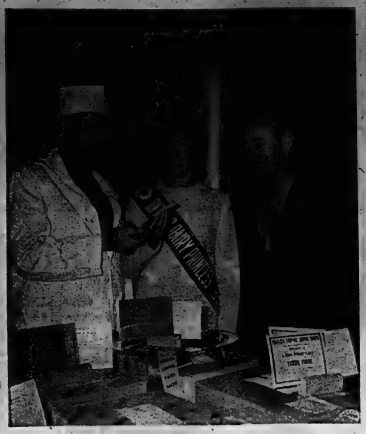
Association president Donald J. Pollock of Campbellford welcomed visitors to the convention session which was later addressed by experts in the dairy field. Included among the afternoon's speakers were Dr. D. M. Irvine, University of Guelph; William Y. Moore, Kingston, representing the Ontario Milk Commission; R. H. Jardine, director, Milk Products Division and Mr. J. Sherk, Chief, Markets and Merchandising, Dairy Division Ottawa.

Mr. Sherk outlined the changes in standards for the manufacture of variety cheese in Canada.

Also on the speakers' list was Miss Barbara Hill, director of Home Economics, department of agriculture and food, who showed movies and slides and illustrated how dairy products were promoted in the many recipes prepared in her department.

The cheese makers' convention will conclude today with a talk by George McLaughlin, chairman, Ontario Milk Marketing Board, and a panel discussion on whether cheese exports.

Fire Destroys Barn and Hay



TRENTON (Staff) — Frankford firemen called to the Albert Zufelt farm in Murray Township Tuesday experience winter conditions as flames destroyed a large barn and 2,000 bales of hay stored on the premises.

Nineteen head of yearling cattle, herded in the stable out of the weather, were able to break free and escape without harm.

A brisk wind carried flames away from the farmhouse occupied by Trenton policeman Carmen Schwager and his family of seven. The Schwagers were without water today, however, since the pump pressure system located in the barn was destroyed in the fire.

The loss is covered by insurance.

Ameliasburg Firefighters Win Top Award

TWEED (Staff) — For the second time in as many years, Ameliasburg Township Volunteer fire department has been named top fire department in the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Aid Association.

Deputy chief Emerson and Clyde Pope of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office visited each of the 20-member fire halls this week, rating them on such points as over-all appearance . . . regardless of the physical condition of their halls . . . cleanliness of hall and equipment and maintenance of equipment.

The Belleville firefighter noted an over-all improvement in most fire departments since the 1971 surprise inspection.

"We examined all the fire stations and found improvements in a majority of them," he noted.

Achieving 96 of a possible 100 points, Ameliasburg's fire department "really won it. They kept their standards up but improved on their past record.

The more than 50 members present last night approved a motion to have the unannounced inspection tour timed for the last week in October, rather than the colder end of November, first week in December period.

Father, Son Discussion on Use of Bad Language Never Forgotten

By DORIS CLARK

A 15-year-old lad is heading — fast — for trouble unless he changes course soon, and I'm afraid only his father can help him.

Father took exception to St. There was a discussion in which the lad never forgot.

What father said was, "Do you realize that when you use such a word you show disrespect to your own mother and father? To the act which created you, our son?"

Bob thought a little. Said he had never thought of it that way. And because the rapport between father and son was of the high class variety, that special word (and a few others like it) forthwith vanished from Bob's vocabulary.

Dear Doris: I agree that unwanted gifts must be received graciously, but oh, please, may I make a plea for more thoughtfully chosen Christmas presents? Through the years a loving relative has been sending gifts to our family that were almost always unusable.

They have been chosen too early in the year, and too quickly . . . bobby equipment when the hobby had been abandoned out - of - fashion; wrong size clothes, plastic cars by the collector of good metal ones, an elaborate game that duplicates an already unwanted one . . . the list is long, and represents a great deal of wasted time and money.

The children have been taught to say thank-you for all gifts received, and realize the love behind the gift, but I am sorry for all the disappointments. — Christmas Present.

Dear C. P.: Makes you feel as if the donor wanted to get the whole thing out of the way in a hurry doesn't it? In contrast, I have a good friend who spends hours in Christmas card departments for the purpose of selecting each card individually to express her feelings whom she is sending it.

To purchase in January, in a sort of bake-hobo fashion, a lot, of good enough looking merchandise which is not in the least related to what the receiver is going to enjoy . . . this is barely an expression of the Christmas spirit.

Dear Doris: I really do enjoy reading your column—not so much because it is a problem-solving type but because I dig your advice and comments. And now I have a beef.

The restrictions placed upon teen-agers by some schools and homes are turning them into yes-men. Too often they are cut down when they ask "Why?" Very soon they will no longer ask. — Belittled

Dear Belittled: Right. Nothing discourages education so much as a know-it-all teacher who can't — or won't — see the learner's puzzlement and tune in enough to help out with an answer.

Even if said teacher does not know the answer, this gives him no licence to abolish the question. Students will honor the mature adult who faces his own limitations, and gets his class to work with him in finding out the Why of whatever it is.

Talk it over with Doris. This Canadian social worker can shed new light on your problem.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Must wives be surprised at Christmas?

YES. Even though the average wife is probably exhausted by now from shopping for surprise gifts for family and friend. That doesn't mean that a husband should not surprise his wife with a gift. If he is more interested in pleasing her than in trying to prove what a wonderful guy he is, he will enjoy finding what she wants despite all her protests that "I have had it up to here with all the surprises I want this year."

Is it useless to fight against sadness?

NO. Those who give sadness a battle when it tends to overwhelm them are doing more than putting off the inevitable. They are actively building up a stomach defense against being sad. Although they are not pretending it doesn't exist, the people who refuse to give themselves over to sadness are conquering the themselves with establishing an attitude that will enable them to accept a sadness or anything elsethey cannot escape.

Do sports-minded teenagers by-pass romance?

NO; as a matter of fact, many young athletes find their activities in sports give them a well-balanced and positive outlook toward romance. The confidence they gain in sports will "spill over" into other areas of interest to the teenager: their school work as well as romance. And the athlete who is interested in sports is also better able to fit romance into his life without letting it be his prime concern.

Novel Items Displayed at Tabernacle UCW Bazaar

Christmas bells hanging in clusters from the ceiling were trimmed in green or red as the theme for the Tabernacle United Church Christmas bazaar and tea on Wednesday afternoon. A few larger red bells added a further note of color while at one end of the hall, two red bells flared to the wall against a background of white framed with holly leaves had the effect of a mural.

At the entrance which was also adorned with bells and streamers, guests were received by Mrs. Leslie Hall, convener Mrs. Jeanne Miller, UCW president Marg Nelson, co-convener Lil Shannon, tea-room convener, Chris Pickell and Marg Wessels.

The main tea table was appointed with an ecru lace cloth centred with three gold candles with a base composed of holly leaves sprayed gold. On the stage, just behind the tea table a cozy paper fireplace enclosed a cheerful painted fire. All around it gift-wrapped parcels lay in easy abandon while the clock on the mantle piece sported the jovial face of Santa Claus. The convener of decorations was Marg Brooks.

Small gold bells, tied with red bows nestling on beds of holly formed the centrepieces for the smaller tea tables which were decorated by Marg Orr.

Tea room hostesses were Mrs. J. Cornell and Mrs. A. E. Cordish while Mrs. F. Schiroth, Mrs. E. Elliott and the women of unit 13 held the fort in the kitchen.

Plates were replenished by Mrs. R. Brickman, Mrs. H. Burley and Mrs. H. C. Barlow while a large number of women helped to serve the multitude of guests.

The bazaar was noteworthy for the variety of novel and ingenious or created articles. Among the wares on the Christmas gifts and decorations booth, convened by Mrs. Edith Stanton and a large number of assistants, were two red "mail boxes" perched on wooden posts for storing Christmas cards. The men's booth convened by Al Hunter offered among other things, bundles of loosing logs for the fireplace tied with brightly coloured bows and boxes of nuts and apples.

Explorers' booth with Kay Stenson in charge and Lela Cunningham, in charge of can-sold a variety of such as articles in novel parfait glasses, a cactus plants in mini-luxury pots. Particularly eye-catching on the candy booth convened by Mrs. A. Charlton and her assistants was a candy house of the Hansel and Gretel type. The children's wear and layland booth was convened by Pam Pickle, Dorothy Hunter, Joan McKenna and Doreen Atkins.

Aprons galore were sold by Gladys Brickman and her co-conveners. The popular home baking table was convened by Mrs. Ashley and a number of other women while Mrs. S. Spafford, Mrs. S. Johnson and Mrs. Ashley were in charge of the fancy work.

St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Trenton was the setting for the recent marriage of Mary Grace Elizabeth McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. McDonald of Trenton and Hans Josef Amann of Newgarten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jens E. Amann of Belleville. Rev. J. P. Grainger officiated at the ceremony and wedding music was played by Mrs. Marie Rose who also accompanied the soloist William Long in several selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a fitted A-line gown of heavy white crepe featuring a bias band extending from the side front seams and ending in the back with a bow trim. The round neckline and long sleeves as well as the train and hemline of the gown were enhanced with satin braid trim. A floor-length veil was caught to a bead band of matching satin braid and she carried a cascade bouquet of roses.

Maid of honor Miss Betty Sue of Pickford, bridesmaid Miss Rose Gougeon of Ottawa and junior bridesmaid Miss Tracy Ferguson were empire styled red velvet gowns with V-necklines and short sleeves. They wore matching red velvet bows in their hair and each carried a cluster of miniature white carnations and red bare flowers.

For the reception at the Fish and Game Club hall in Frankford the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a deep pink A-line crepe dress with wedding ring collar edged with pink braid and matching full-length coat, brown accessories and a mauve orchid corsage. Assisting the bridegroom's mother were an aqua polyester full-length gown with matching coat, black accessories and a white orchid corsage. Also assisting in the receiving line was the bridegroom's aunt Mrs. Hertha Lauterberger from Heidelberg, Germany.

Leaving on the honeymoon trip to western and northern Ontario, the bride donned a pink V-neck crimplene dress with grey Persian lamb coat, pink and black accessories with a single rose corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Amann will reside at 469 Bayview Ave., Toronto.

BREAST CANCER: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

Radical surgery has long been regarded by most cancer specialists as the treatment for breast cancer. But — as reported in the December issue of Reader's Digest — a growing minority of cancer experts believes that far less mutilating forms of treatment may give breast-cancer patients an equally good chance of survival. What lies behind this medical controversy? Should women consent to radical mastectomies? Or should they search instead for surgeons willing to perform more conservative and less disfiguring operations? How can breast-cancer patients maximize their chances of survival? For a frank and honest discussion of these and other questions, read CONTROVERSY OVER BREAST CANCER — in December Reader's Digest. Pick up your copy today.

Ann Landers

Attorney Questions Ann's Advice

Dear Ann Landers: As an attorney who specializes in malpractice suits I must take issue with your response to the lady in Buffalo who didn't like the medical care her husband received. He almost died following a sleeping session. She wanted to know what she could do about it.

From the tone of her inquiry I strongly suspect that she wanted to sue the doctor. Your suggestion that she contact the County Medical Society was ridiculous. That would be like reporting a case of racial discrimination to the Ku Klux Klan.

I have read your column for years and generally your advice is sound, but you really fell on your face this time. By any chance, is your husband a doctor?—Disappointed In Boston

Dear Boss: Last things first. No, my husband is not a doctor. Obviously, he isn't a lawyer either. You are right—my answer was a bummer. I should have advised the woman to see an attorney. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday I was looking out the window and saw four of the neighbor children standing around a small hole in the ground which they had just dug. They were having a "funeral" for a newborn baby kitten that did not survive. I was horrified when suddenly one of the little boys (about six years old) came out of the house with a butcher knife. He stabbed the dead kitten several times and seemed to be enjoying himself immensely. I was sick all evening. Where does a child get such ideas? Should I tell his mother?—Concerned Mother

Dear Mother: Where? Probably from television. By all means tell the boy's mother. She should have this information so she can keep an eye on him. Maybe next he'll decide he wants to do the same thing to a live kitten—or his little brother.

MODULAR 4

What Is Modular 4?

Modular 4 is what we came up with after completely building the Philips Color TV from the inside out. We re-designed the circuitry, to give you a more efficient more reliable operation. We eliminated the old spaghetti-type wiring systems by condensing them into units that can better stand up to continual, full-time viewing. And since each circuit panel stands on its own, if something goes wrong, it can be replaced within minutes right in your home. Of course, such an efficient operation just naturally results in a great color picture.

Federal Conservatives Gather For Three-day Policy Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party, showing growing confidence, is preparing for a national policy conference it hopes will serve as the springboard to victory in the next federal election.

The party predicts about 1,500 delegates for the Sunday-to-Tuesday convention, Sept. 12 time task will be to pass judgment on a comprehensive series of policy papers prepared by national headquarters and distributed during the summer and fall.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has said the convention will be the culmination of a game plan drawn up in October, 1969, for development of policies to use in the next federal election campaign.

He has contrasted this long-term, systematic approach with what he alleges is inconsistent, contradictory development of Liberal government policies. Mr. Stanfield has said the Conservatives can, with hard work, win the next general election.

He has been expressing increasing optimism, partly generated by provincial election successes recently in Ontario, Alberta and Newfoundland. It has also fed on the Liberal government's economic problems.

But two major limitations still exist.

Prairie Conservatives continue to hold reservations about the men running the national party and object to many of their policies.

The party has a small toehold in Quebec.

The scant Commons representation of three Quebec MPs and weak organization there will be only indirectly affected by policy discussions. Any improvement through the convention may be through election of the party officers.

A far greater influence on the party's Quebec fortunes would be selection by Mr. Stanfield of a Quebec lieutenant.

Discussions involving several prominent Quebec figures have been proceeding for some time, but so far there has been no indication the convention will be used as the occasion to announce a selection.

There are, however, indications that western dissident will play a significant role at the convention.

A policy conference of western Conservatives, held in Saskatoon in early September, was organized to facilitate formation of a united western voice in the policy-making process. Delegates vowed to carry the western viewpoint forcefully to the Ottawa convention.

The Saskatoon conference treated the national party's policy papers roughly. One resolution was passed stating that "the policy statements on economic affairs and national development be rejected in their entirety because they contain many errors, inconsistencies and policies not consistent with the policies of the Progressive Conservative party."

Another resolution specifically opposed the concept of a capital-gains tax, which had been accepted in the national policy papers.

This week a group of Prairie Conservative MPs issued a statement calling for a greater western voice in party organization, financing and policy-making.

The Conservative party under Stanfield has been headed by a Maritimer, has got its guts and heart in Ontario and has paid little attention to Western Canada," said Jack Horner, MP for the Alberta riding of Crowfoot.

Although Prairie MPs and delegates to the Saskatoon conference expressed grave reservations about the general leadership of the party—and in several cases showed outright hostility—there were no signs of a developing challenge to Mr. Stanfield personally.

Liberals And NDP Win Seats

REGINA (CP) — The balance of power in Saskatchewan was unchanged Wednesday night after two byelections which climaxed a month of frantic campaigning by five candidates.

The New Democratic Party now is back to the 45 seats it picked up in the June 23 provincial general election and the Liberals are back to 11. Each had lost a seat because of a member's death.

Premier Allan Blakeney, whose NDP toppled the seven-year-old Liberal administration in June, described the outcome of the byelections as "a victory for the government and its policies" despite the fact the NDP took only one of the seats.

The ridings, both in agricultural southern Saskatchewan, were Morse and Souris-Estevan. The first was held by former premier Ross Thatcher until his death July 23, the other by NDP MLA Ross Brown until his death Oct. 17.

"Both of these seats were held for a number of years by Liberal members as we had an uphill battle to each of them," the premier said, adding that governments generally have the cards stacked against them in byelections.

Morse was won by Jack Messer, 35-year-old farmer from Herbert who once was campaign manager for Mr. Thatcher. He defeated former premier's son, Colin, for the Liberal nomination.

The complete count from 50 polls gave Mr. Wiebe 2,660 votes compared with 2,274 for Jim Murdoch, 30, the NDP candidate, and 681 for Ed Nasserden of Saskatoon, the 32-year-old leader of the Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative party. Mr. Wiebe's total represented 47 per cent of the popular vote.

While it was a fairly easy win for Mr. Wiebe in Morse, Souris-Estevan was a see-saw battle until many of the 71 polls had reported.

The winner was Kim Thorson, 28, a lawyer from Estevan, with 3,855 votes to the 4,078 recorded by Ian MacDougall, the 43-year-old planning executive from Estevan who was the Liberal's hope. Mr. Thorson got 51 per cent of the popular vote.

Leader To Give Views Of PCs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Frank Moores, Progressive Conservative leader, plans to explain his party's position in the current battle for power with the Liberals on a province-wide radio and television broadcast tonight.

A Conservative spokesman said Wednesday Mr. Moores would tell Newfoundlanders why his party should take over the government from Premier Joseph Smallwood despite the indecisive outcome of the Oct. 28 provincial election.

The spokesman said Mr. Moores's address would be carried on private radio and television stations as well as CBC-TV and radio.

Mr. Smallwood invited the Conservatives Wednesday to support a Liberal petition to the Newfoundland Supreme Court to clear the way for a byelection in St. Barbe South, one of 21 seats taken by the Conservatives in the election.

The Liberals, who won 20 seats, claim the district is vacant because a recount was halted when it was discovered that 195 ballots were missing.

Mr. Moores rejected the invitation.

The Conservative leader also said he was considering asking John Turner, federal justice minister, to intervene in the situation.

He said a letter had been sent to Lt.-Gov. E. John A. Harnum requesting that the Liberal government be asked to resign or the legislature be asked to convene.

The Conservative claim to victory is based on an argument that the official count for St. Barbe South should stand in the absence of ballots to complete a recount.

Shulman Invites Charge

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto High Park, offered some advice on life insurance Wednesday, and said he hoped the information constituted a breach of law.

He advised the public to turn in all forms of life insurance and buy term insurance.

Ontario's Insurance Act, passed last July 28, contains a section which prohibits the practice of "twisting" and prescribes a penalty of up to $500.

Twisting generally is defined as inducing an insured person to cancel one life insurance policy in favor of buying another one from a competing company.

The law, which previously applied to life insurance agents only, was extended in July to cover anyone who twists or attempts to twist a policy.

Dr. Shulman described the new legislation as "anti-social" and said it provided a means of assuring life insurance companies huge profits.

Mr. Shulman said if the government "is really serious about this law, then they should charge me."

M. A. Thompson, deputy superintendent of insurance for the department of financial and commercial affairs, said it is "highly unlikely" this would happen.

"He's offered a general opinion on the merits of term insurance which he's entitled to do," Mr. Thomson said.

Good Health

Snack Often Good Idea

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My three-year-old is forever asking for something to eat—potato chips, cookies, yogurt or whatever strikes her fancy.

I've been letting her have what she wants within reason (not too many sweets) and I notice that other mothers do the same.

I am becoming concerned, however, whether I may be teaching her bad eating habits by allowing her to snack at will. Many times she does not eat her supper and this bothers my husband to see good food wasted. Should I let her continue to snack or put my foot down?—Mrs. R.K.

It's important, of course, to inculcate good eating habits, but that doesn't mean snacks are forbidden. They just have to be kept under control.

A child of three will pull your leg for goodies as long as she knows—or suspects—that some are available. I have a grandson about that age who seems to be able to sniff out the presence of cookies or candy even if there is no visible sign of them. And he gets some at times, but within limits.

The basic pattern of "good eating habits" is eating three meals a day and, of course, eating the right things, with special emphasis on a good breakfast.

Growth spurts—children don't grow steadily, but have growing periods, then plateaus when growth slows down—have a lot to do with a child's need for food. Especially in such a spurt, some sort of snack at mid-afternoon is not only permissible but a good thing.

But when a child has done a good deal of snacking and then won't eat dinner, it's a strong hint that there was a little too much snacking. So—cut it down especially in late afternoon.

Some of the foods you mentioned (bologna, yogurt) have a considerable protein content. Naturally I'm not downgrading protein. It's a needed item of diet, and some folks don't get enough.

In terms of snacks, however, another consideration enters. Protein digests slowly. Hence, protein "stays with you" longer than other types and for that reason a high-protein snack in the afternoon can interfere with appetite at dinner time.

My suggestion would be to offer a lighter snack. Keep the protein foods for mealtime. For an afternoon snack, try milk, fruit, a small cookie, or the like. It will provide energy but not destroy appetite later. Candy is apt to dull her appetite.

Incidentally, if you are worried about a child not getting enough to eat, remember that if a child is growing normally and has plenty of energy there's not much to worry about.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been taking a diuretic daily for two years. A nurse told me you have to be sure to eat at least one banana and drink a glass of orange juice every day. Is this true? Why? My doctor never mentioned it.—Mrs. C.S.

Some of the diuretics can, in time, contribute to loss of potassium, but it is easily corrected, and there's no point in correcting it unless it happens. Bananas and orange juice are high in potassium. That's evidently what the nurse was thinking about, but there are other sources of potassium, and in any event, your doctor evidently has not seen any sign that you need more.

Note to Mrs. J.D.G.—and a number of others: I know of no way of getting rid of stretch marks; the only thing to do is wait until the color fades, which leaves them less noticeable. I don't know of anything other than that, unless you choose to cover them with cosmetics.

Reinstatement Of Teacher Recommended

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Teachers Federation relations committee has recommended the reinstatement of a Metropolitan Toronto teacher suspended after conviction for possessing marijuana.

The report urged that Brian Clow, 25, of Pickering be allowed to continue teaching pending the federation's executive. Clow was suspended with pay from Don Mills Collegiate Institute after a conviction and fine of $200 in October.

The disciplines committee report says Clow should be allowed to continue teaching, but should not be eligible for a permanent certificate until June 30, 1973.

Quebec Maker Cheese Champ

BELLEVILLE — A cheese maker from the province of Quebec has won this year's triple crown of the cheese making industry.

Lionel Lamoureux of Granby, Quebec, earlier this year won the $5 prize for cheese at the Canadian National Exhibition and last month took top honors at the Royal Winter Fair.

And this week at Belleville, the Quebec maker won the grand championship of the British Empire Dairy show being held today and Thursday in conjunction with the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers.

Mr. Lamoureux won top honors in the open class with a September cheese which graded 98.30 points. The prize winning cheese scored 43.35 points for flavor.

But this year's winner had strong competition for top honors with Rhead Wathier, RR3 Chesterville, Ontario, scoring 98.30 in the June and October classes.

Douglas Rowe of Wartworth won the square block class with a score of 98.25 and also had the same score for his cheese in the British Empire class.

Gary Rédd of RR3 Stirling won the mature class with a score of 98 points while the Hastings county block class was won by Ted Foley of Foxboro Factory with a similar score. The Stilton class was won by Mr. Lamoureux, the grand champion.

Yves Leroux of Balderson won the top prize in the cheese display class with Ted Foley of Foxboro and Lewis Keilar of Milford as runners up.

This year's cheese show attracted a total of 161 entries and included the highest number of Quebec makers in several years.

Salvation Army Kettles to Bubble

The first will appear at Quinte Mall Friday night, and after that the kettles — now up-dated to sophisticated plastic bubbles — will be placed in seven or eight locations in Belleville.

"The Salvation Army Christmas kettle has become a great tradition in our society," says Capt. E. T. Gurney, commander of the corps here.

All the money collected goes to provide Christmas dinners for needy families. And every year the Army hopes there will be enough left over to take care of some of its winter relief work.

Until this year, the kettles at Towers brought the largest returns, says Capt. Gurney, but the new Quinte Mall may change the picture this year.

All the Salvation Army's welfare work is emergency relief that fits in, on an interim basis, until other, usually government assistance is available.

Although the Army has fund drives for its other work, all the Christmas kettle funds are used for the holiday season and winter relief.

Trudeau Says Economic Issues May Be Settled at Nixon Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Major issues in U.S.-Canada economic relations may be resolved in discussions with President Nixon next Monday, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday.

While no final agenda has been drawn, he said it was "possible" the U.S.-Canada auto trade pact and the defence production sharing agreement—both under negotiation by officials in Ottawa and Washington—would be discussed at the Washington sessions.

"I am waiting to know from officials whether they are at the stage, as I think they are, at which we might be able to reach some conclusions, if further discussions are added between officials. I will try not to take any final position in Washington."

Asked about press reports that the government is prepared to make concessions on the auto-pact question, Mr. Trudeau said he was "not in a position now to state the Canadian position.

"It is possible that by next Monday we will be in a position to state to the president Canada's bargaining position on this."

The U.S. has been pressing since 1969 for a revision of the 1965 auto pact, which contains safeguards protecting Canada's share of production in the North American market.

Canada earned a surplus in auto trade under the agreement for the first time in 1970, according to Canadian figures.

The Trudeau-Nixon talks also will be the first public discussion of the defence production sharing agreement and other bilateral issues have been the topic of official talks since the imposition Aug. 15 of the U.S. 10-per-cent import surcharge.

But Mr. Trudeau reiterated the government's position that discussion of the auto pact was not related to the surcharge.

He repeated that Canada was not trying to bargain its way out from under the impact of the surcharge, which makes Canadian exports more expensive in U.S. markets.

He and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp suggested that Canada had agreed after imposition of the surcharge to renegotiate the pact to prevent a U.S. move to cancel it.

"That is why," Mr. Trudeau added in the House, "in our discussions we have always tried to ensure that there would not only be the best possible deal for Canada but that there would be also a deal which would be acceptable to the United States."

Mr. Sharp also denied a Toronto Star story Wednesday that reported him as indicating Canada is prepared to agree to a temporary suspension of the safeguards, to increase the duty-free allowance on goods bought by Canadian visitors to the U.S.—now $25 every three months—and to increase military purchases in the U.S.

"These were not my offerings," Mr. Sharp told reporters.

Asked directly whether Canada is ready to suspend the safeguards; Mr. Sharp replied: "Nobody is going to answer that question."

Prime Minister Trudeau gave a similar reply when asked in the House whether the government has agreed to raise the duty-free ceiling on purchases by Canadians in the U.S.

"No, we have not so agreed, but, if we had, I imagine it would be very unwise of me to tell the House that we had if we wanted to use this as a bargaining point with the U.S."

Asked about the reported secret agreement on the safeguards, a U.S. embassy official said he knew of no such agreement.

Mr. Trudeau also was asked whether energy exports to the U.S. would be discussed in his meetings with President Nixon.

The prime minister repeated that the agenda had not been set.

Davis Voices Alarm

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis sent a telegram Wednesday to Prime Minister Trudeau expressing his concern over a possible federal government agreement to changes in the auto pact to help ease United States economic problems.

Mr. Davis was commenting on published reports which quoted External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp as saying Ottawa was prepared to temporarily suspend Canadian safeguards in the U.S.-Canada auto pact to enable Washington to abolish its recent supplementary duty on imports.

"Today's press reports give me renewed concern and I would urge your most careful consideration of these matters," Mr. Davis said in the telegram.

Mr. Davis repeated his government's concern "lest any changes in the auto pact be negotiated which would be disadvantageous to Canadian industry or result in a less favorable position for Canadian firms."

Washington Pleased With Sharp

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States officials expressed guarded satisfaction Wednesday in response to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's assertion that Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help the U.S. ease its economic problems and abolish the 10-per-cent import surtax.

But one official said a suggestion that Canada might suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-U.S. auto agreement "doesn't make much sense."

"This is the first I have heard of a temporary suspension and frankly, I don't think the U.S. would go for it," a spokesman said. The idea of the 1965 pact, with built-in safeguards to tilt it temporarily in Canada's favor, was "to give Canada a breathing space and then move on to full reciprocity where the forces of a free market would come into play." The Americans argue that the transitional period has passed.

Safeguards For U.S. Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Kaplan, chairman of the Commons finance committee, said Wednesday Canada should offer to insert safeguards for the U.S. car industry in the auto trade pact as a possible means of breaking "the current apparent impasse" with Washington.

Mr. Kaplan (Toronto—Don Valley) said that while the U.S. considers safeguards for Canadian industry in the 1965 agreement—now being renegotiated—an unfair benefit to Canada, he believes they are necessary and must be retained.

"Perhaps a solution would be to offer reverse safeguards to the United States, around a safety zone of a few percentage points of total trade," the Liberal MP told the Electronics Industries Association of Canada here.

Players to Form Co-op

Senior 'A' Hockey Still Alive in Belleville

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Reports concerning the death of the Belleville Quintes appear to have been greatly exaggerated.

Senior hockey, in the city of Belleville is alive, and apparently well, following a meeting of more than 100 fans and players Wednesday night to determine the fate of the city's entry in the OHA Senior A league.

The team appeared to be destined to drop out of the eight team alignment when former owner Ken Morphy announced Tuesday that he was withdrawing his financial support from the club.

Team members agreed unanimously last night to continue playing on a co-operative basis with the players to divide any profits realized at the end of the season. All but two of the current team were present at the meeting.

A five man steering committee has been chosen to help player representatives organize affairs until a permanent executive can be established. Serving on the committee will be Belleville residents Gord Robbin, Gerry O'Connor, Dr. H. F. Williamson, Bill Thompson and Fred Bemis.

The team will begin its co-operative effort with no outstanding debts and no current bank balance. Former owner Morphy has agreed to handle any previous debts incurred this season, while at the same time allowing the use of team equipment and sweaters which he purchased. Funds for the operation are expected to come from ticket sales and from the financial support of various individuals from within the community. Already several offers of financial support have been forthcoming.

Serving as player representatives for the team, which will retain the name of Quintes, will be Lionel Boily and Ralph Plane, who men who organized the public meeting and former playing-coach Dave Jones, who has served only in a playing capacity this year.

The players agreed to retain the services of coach Gene Poirier and the first year mentor agreed by phone to resume his position behind the Belleville bench. The CFB Trenton corporal has guided the Belleville team to a 6-11-0 mark so far this season, placing them sixth in the eight-team league.

Earlier in the meeting an offer of full sponsorship was forthcoming from a Napanee district resident. He was advised that his proposal would be taken under consideration by the players.

They apparently decided against attempting to procure private sponsorship, electing instead to follow the co-op format that has proved so successful over the years by the Galt Hornets. The Galt management will be contacted for suggestions concerning the new Belleville operation.

It is believed to be a virtual certainty that the OHA will allow the franchise to continue under the new arrangement. Bill Hanley, secretary-treasurer of the OHA, is reported to have stated that "if Belleville decides to continue there probably won't even be a meeting Thursday". The group had planned to meet Thursday night to discuss the fate of Belleville's franchise and $1,000 performance bond.

It appears to be business as usual for the Belleville Quintes this weekend. They will travel to Oakville Friday night for an 8:30 p.m. meeting with the Oaks, returning to Belleville Saturday to face the Kingston Aces in an 8 p.m. home game.

Steering Committee Formed

Quintes to Follow Galt Management Pattern

If a team intends to emulate an OHA Senior A rival, then it certainly would be logical to pick the Galt Hornets.

Last season the black and gold business firm all the way to the Allan Cup, while this year the Hornets are perched atop the league standings with an impressive 16-4 record.

While the Belleville Quintes are hopeful of some day being able to follow in Galt's playing steps, it's at the executive level that the local seniors hope to pattern themselves first after the Hornets.

The five man Belleville steering committee, which will re-organize the Quintes fortunes until a permanent executive can be established is much the same as Galt's six strong executive.

The Hornets have been utilizing this type of operation, including a share the wealth scheme by the players, since 1960. As CJBQ sports director Jack Devine pointed out at last night's public meeting, "The Galt club has been making large salaries the past few years only because the players themselves have been involved. They sold over 1200 seasons tickets this year."

Committee member Bill Thompson, who moved to this city from Galt five years ago believes that a major reason for the large pre-season ticket sale is that, " the executive there work to establish a strong booster club. Then you have someone to really push the ticket sales." The Galt booster club has a membership of approximately 200.

Gord Renwick, president of the Galt executive will be contacted in the immediate future. It is hoped that his experience in this type of venture will prove invaluable to the new Quintes steering committee.

Private Sponsorship Rejected

The Senior A hockey meeting was proceeding quite smoothly Wednesday night. Over 100 fans and players were jammed into the Prince Edward suite of the Quinte Hotel to determine if Belleville senior entry could indeed be saved.

Napanee resident Doug Richardson dropped a small bomb in the proceedings when he offered to undertake financing of the entire project coupled with the stipulation that he would also take over the coaching reins.

Proceeding were halted while the players met to consider the offer and to confer with their prospective sponsor. They agreed to consider his offer, but later elected to run things on a share the wealth basis rather than have a single private sponsor.

Players Have Vested Interests

One thing appears certain, that for the remainder of the OHA Senior A season the Belleville Quinte may turn in some very good performances or they may turn in some very bad performances but they won't be turning in any indifferent performances. The calibre of play presented by the Quintes will undoubtedly have a definite affect on attendance at the Belleville Memorial home games, and this in turn will decide whether or not the team is able to operate at a profit. That simple fact appears certain to ensure an all-out effort from each teammember since their pay scale will be determined by the profit realized.

It was the belief of former-owner Ken Murphy that not all players have been giving a 100 per cent effort as of late. Fred Bezgin, a current member of the steering committee echoed the sentiments of a number of local fans at the public meeting when he demanded that, "there has to be a noticeable difference in the players' attitudes. You have one group who give 110 per cent every game and others who just don't give a damn."

Chairman Lionel Boily, defensive regular with the Quintes expressed the belief that, "We played some weak teams at the start of the season and won quite a few games. Then against the stronger teams we started to lose regularly. We sort of got in a losing rut and we didn't have confidence in ourselves."

The veteran player added that, "In our last game against Kingston we played terrible hockey, but then we got a couple of goals in the third period and for the last seven or eight minutes we didn't let them get the puck out of their end. I think that this was an encouraging sign that the team is coming around."

Gord Robin, another member of the steering committee expressed the formula which the group hope to operate under in the early going. "We're going to have to pay as we go and not accumulate debts that we'll still be paying off next summer," he said.

Still another committeemember Dr. H. F. Williamson expressed the groups gratitude to Ken Murphy for his donation of equipment. "We're grateful to Mr. Murphy for what he has donated. Without his help we might not have even had the chance to resume operations."

Galt Seeks Loan of Rexe For European Hockey Tour

Local hockey fans weren't the only people interested in the fate of the Belleville Quintes. There were a number of hockey entries throughout the OHA Senior A league who appeared to have more than a passing interest. In players who would be cut adrift if the Quintes had folded.

Manager Cliff Earl of the Kingston Aces was quoted in the Kingston Whig-Standard as being "interested in two or three Belleville players . . .". No team was able to officially approach a player until the OHA had decided upon the plight of the Belleville franchise.

Despite the fact that no official overtures could be made Quintes goalie Steve Rexe reported feelers from no less than five clubs in the Senior A loop when it appeared that Belleville would go under.

The former Canadian National team netminder, along with night school student Ray Johnston were the only players unable to attend the Wednesday night meeting. "I think that it's a good idea if we can get the support of fans here," said Rexe, of the team's new share the wealth policy.

One offer that the redhead has received is from the Galt Hornets who will leave this month for a hockey tour of Sweden. The Hornets have expressed interest in obtaining the services of Rexe on loan from the Quintes for the European tour.

"It would likely mean missing about five or six games," speculated Rexe. "I'll have to get in touch with the management for permission, but I think that it might even help our team. It isn't good for one goalie to play all the time. I think that there should be sort of a team rivalry."

Back-up goalie Ron Jury has seen limited action in parts of two regular season games this year. The 21-year-old backstop had been the Most Valuable Player for the Belleville Junior "B" Fairways for the past two seasons.

Midget All-Stars Slice Circle 70

The Blake Kerr Imperial midgets cut a slice out of Centre 70 last night by handing the Kingston area team a 6-1 beat in their Quinte - St. Lawrence OMHA game last night.

The Imperials now sport a record of 5 wins and 1 loss in regular OMHA play this season.

Scoring leader Mark Coates was top gun once again for the Imperials counting three goals and adding an assist. The night's effort left him with 28 points for the season, including 12 goals.

Saturday the Belleville midgets meet Point Anne in a 3.30 p.m. contest at Dick Ellis, while taking on the Kingston Rotary Kiwanis midgets in a 5.15 p.m. bout Sunday.

Poirier Gets Confidence Vote

By the nature of his position a coach is placed in a difficult position in disputes between management and the players. He is a part of the management and must act as such, but at the same time he must keep the respect of his players if he hopes to accomplish the task that he has been hired to do.

Gene Poirier's calm, unruffled coaching style has earned him a few brickbats from fans who prefer a go-get-em, fire-eater approach to the game. The first year coach obviously was able to retain the respect of his players and owner Ken Murphy as well in the recent change of team ownership of the Belleville Quintes.

While assessing his reasons for withdrawing support from the club Murphy refused to cite the coach fro what he felt was lack of effort by some players adding that "he probably knows more about hockey than anybody out there."

From the players standpoint team spokesman Lionel Boily stated flatly at a public meeting Wednesday night "the players haven't had any quarrel with the coach we've had. This hasn't been a problem."

The remaining . . . players present at the meeting apparently agreed with Boily's sentiments resulting in the request that Poirier remain his coaching position. The CFB corporal agreed by phone to continue coaching.

When asked if he planned any changes in his coaching philosophy or had any stipulations about returning to his position, the coach stated "It's something we'll keep in the dressing room."

When asked if he was pleased with what, in fact, amounted to a vote of confidence from his players Poirier replied, "Very definitely."

Jr. Habs Lose Full House

MONTREAL (CP) — There was a time when Montreal Junior Canadiens were drawing crowds of 10,000 to 15,000 for their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series games at the Forum.

It was only two years ago that the Junior Canadiens drew 18,838 for a regularly-scheduled OHA game against Oshawa.

But now, the club is having trouble and has drawn less than 2,700 fans to each of its last two home games.

"It's like this every year before Christmas," he said in an interview Wednesday. "People are saving and they just don't have the money to spend."

So far this season, the Junior Canadiens have drawn 23,612 fans in seven dates at home for an average of 3,373. Only in their first two games did they attract more than 4,000 spectators.

"With the exception of Ottawa, we're drawing just about the same as the other teams in the OHA," said Wimmer. "But in those cities there's nothing much to do and their teams are considered just like NHL teams."

One probable reason for the decline in attendance has been the won-lost record of the Junior Canadiens. So far this year, the Montreal club has only two wins and three ties in 17 games.

Also, the Canadiens don't have superstars like Rejean Houle, Gilbert Perreault, Richard Martin or Marc Tardif as they had in former years.

But Wimmer still is confident the crowds will return.

"Give them good hockey and they'll come," he said. "Even with Houle and Perreault, our crowds weren't that big before Christmas."

Trottier Sparks Leafs

Hot Line Still Humming in Win Over Sabres

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Guy Trottier has had few moments in the National Hockey League season to call his own.

New York's Hot Line has had few nights when it wasn't enjoying moments of glory.

Both had reason to recall Wednesday nights moments.

Trottier, the diminutive winger referred to around the press box set up the winner as the Maple Leafs defeated St. Louis Blues 4-3.

The Hot Line, centre Jean Ratelle flanked by Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield, picked up 19 points as the highlying Rangers drubbed Buffalo Sabres 7-2.

Elsewhere, Jacques Lemaire's two third-period goals powered Montreal Canadiens to a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Kings. Pittsburgh Penguins used Bob Leiter's three goals to whitewash Detroit Red Wings 4-2 and a three-goal night by Bill Goldsworthy helped Minnesota North Stars pad their lead in the West Division with a 6-1 victory over, California Golden Seals.

Trottier, with only two goals to his credit this season after potting 19 a year ago, was as much surprised as the fans with which he was able to get through the St. Louis team as anybody.

The 5-foot-8 165-pounder from Hull, Que., who makes his off-season home in Dayton, Ohio, swept behind his own net and up his off-wing, shaking off the futile efforts of Blues' defenseman Jim Roberts before rifling a 25-footer past goaltender Ernie Wakely.

"I had the puck and Derryl (Sittler) and Jim (Harrison) were covered, so I kept going," recalled Trottier later in the dressing room. "I went over the blueline expecting Derryl to bust in, but he was still covered."

"Cripes, when I saw I had the goalie, I said 'Why room between the defenceman and the goalie, I said 'Why bust, I'll shoot.'"

There were some late-game heroics by goaltender Bernie Parent, who replaced starter Jacques Plante in the third period after the veteran goalie suffered a lower leg injury.

Centre Norm Ullman potted his clincher in an empty net with 19 seconds left in the game, but only after the Blues had pulled Wakely and sent out six attackers to seek the equalizer.

At New York, where the Rangers extended their home ice win streak to five games and unbeaten mark to 11, Gilbert notched two goals and two assists, giving him 36 points for the season and 533 career points —second in Ranger production to Andy Bathgate's 729.

Ratelle, with a goal and two assists, became the third all-time Ranger scorer with 479 points, passing Camille Henry's total. WHA May Raid Refs

TORONTO (CP) — Ian (Scotty) Morrison, of Toronto, the National Hockey League's referee-in-chief, said Wednesday he expects the World Hockey Association will attempt to raid his officials.

"There have been rumors that some of the referees and linesmen have been approached in general terms," he said in an interview, "but I haven't heard of any formal approach to our organization."

"If and when the WHA gets off the ground, I have no doubt offers will be made to some of our men."

Although the referees and linesmen are signed to contracts, none of them are multi-year agreements. However, the contracts contain an option-renewable clause.

Morrison presides over a group of 37 officials, 19 of whom are linesmen-referee trainees. Most of the referees officiate exclusively in the NHL, but some function in the American, Western and Central Leagues which are under his jurisdiction.

The referee-in-chief said he expected that the minor pro leagues and amateur hockey would lose the most officials to the newly-organized WHA.

Morrison said recruiting of game officials—he says nothing of scorers, timekeepers, goal judges penalty-timekeepers and statisticians—could present a serious obstacle to WHA president Gary Davidson and co-founder Dennis Murphy of California.

"Operation of the referee-in-chief's office, officials' salaries, travelling and accommodation expenses, constitutes the second-highest financial outlay in the NHL," Morrison said.

Hadfield Ties Orr

Vic Hadfield of New York Rangers moved into a second place tie in the National Hockey League's scoring race Wednesday with Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins. Both have 39 points.

Hadfield scored one goal and two assists as the Rangers beat Buffalo Sabres 7-2.

Hadfield's linemates, Jean Ratelle and Rod Gilbert, also had a productive evening. Ratelle also scored a goal and two assists and Gilbert added two of each. Ratelle now is in third place with 38 points, trailed closely by Gilbert with 36.

The leaders:

Esposito, B	19	22	41
Hadfield, NY	19	21	39
Orr, B	11	28	39
Ratelle, NY	15	23	38

Bill Hanley of Toronto, secretary-manager of the Ontario Hockey Association, which probably employs the largest group of officials of any association affiliated with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, agreed that amateur hockey organizations would be most vulnerable to inroads by the WHA.

The 225 OHA referees are not signed to contracts. They receive $25 a league game, plus expenses. Linesmen get $10 a game. The fees are increased for playoffs.

Protocevst, replacing injured Syl Apps.

Leiter, a minor-league veteran, responded with his first three goal game in the big leagues and ended the Penguins' losing string at six games.

The win moved Pittsburgh into third place in the West with 20 points, 17 behind the high-flying Minnesotans who stretched their lead over Chicago Black Hawks, idle Wednesday night, to three points.

Goldsworthy, who had been in a scoring slump until last week, scored twice in the first period as the hometown North Stars opened a 3-0 lead and added his third, a power-play effort in the final period.

Linemates Jude Drouin and J.P. Parise drew assists on all three goals as the Stars supported goaltender Cesare Maniago with a 31-shot barrage. California goaltenders Lyle Carter and Gilles Meloche.

Cavaliers Move Up on Bullets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Cavaliers, sailing within a game of idle first-place Baltimore Bullets in the Central Division, routed off their fifth consecutive victory Wednesday night as Charlie Davis came off the bench to jump in 11 fourth-quarter points and sparked them to a 118-110 triumph over Houston Rockets. . . .

In other action, Chicago Bulls beat Cincinnati Royals 109-101, Atlanta Hawks defeated Detroit Pistons 117-101, Los Angeles Lakers bested Boston Celtics 134-111, Philadelphia 76ers stipped by Seattle SuperSonics 102-88 and Phoenix Suns bombed Portland Trail Blazers 130-103.

In the American Basketball Association's two games, Carolina nosed out Pittsburgh 118-117 and the Floridians squeezed by Dallas 107-106 in overtime.

Butch Beard led the Cavaliers with 21 points, John Johnson and Bobby Smith had 20 apiece, Davis had 19 and Austin Carr 18 while Rich Roberson hauled down 18 rebounds.

Chicago's Bulls edged within 3½ games of first-place Milwaukee in the Midwest Division, and kept Cincinnati tied with Cleveland.

Bob Love finished with 36 points, 24 of them in the first two periods as the Bulls built a 65-40 margin. Guard Nate Archibald of the Royals led all scorers with 41 points, 29 of them in the final two periods.

Atlanta snapped a six-game losing streak by handing the Pistons their fifth straight setback.

Pete Maravich and Herm Gilliam had 23 points apiece, second only to team-mate Lou Hudson's 24, and Walt Bellamy added 21. Jimmy Walker of Detroit led all scorers with 27.

Los Angeles, on a rampage of its own, rolled to victory No. 15 in a row—five short of the all-time NBA record set a year ago by Milwaukee—as guards Gail Goodrich and Jerry West combined for a massive 78 points against Boston.

The Lakers cut the Celtics' Atlantic Division lead over Idle New York to half a game and opened their own Pacific Division margin to 5½ over the Golden State Warriors. John Havlicek had 36 points for Boston.

Billy Cunningham, playing in his 500th NBA game, led Philadelphia with 28 points, including two on the 22-foot jump shot with 18 seconds to play that clinched the 76ers' victory over the SuperSonics, paced by Spencer Haywood's 26 points.

Phoenix, with Paul Silas hitting 25 points had Mo Layton and Connie Hawkins scored 22 apiece, connected on a torrid 56 per cent of their field goal attempts against the Trail Blazers.

Law Makers Make Their Pitch

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Shocked when Washington Senators skipped town, law makers in the United States capital have begun to pitch for a new major league franchisee.

They made their first big delivery Wednesday at the winter baseball meetings—and threw a curve in the process.

A delegation of congressmen and community leaders from Washington expressed their strong desire for a team with baseball officials listened politely for hours.

After the meeting, there was a hint of pressure from Washington if baseball doesn't come through by 1972.

We must have a team in Washington by 1971," Joseph Danzansky, president of the city's board of trade, told a news conference.

What if baseball doesn't satisfy the demand?

"We'll run over that bridge when we come to it," Rep. B. F. Sisk (R—Cal.) said in a curt tone.

Sisk went on, softening his platform: "We are here on the request of the leadership of Congress. We are reasonable men working for the good of baseball. We don't want to hurt baseball."

Washington was caught short when the Senators moved to Dallas-Fort Worth last September. Owner Bob Short blamed financial difficulties.

"We've gone through a shock and sometimes a shock awakens you," said baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said of the meeting.

"We had a very satisfying meeting. Baseball is flattered to have this delegation here. We will study the problem and see if a solution can be found."

The delegation presented a petition signed by 738 members of Congress supporting the return of baseball to Washington.

Kuhn said the Washington group had described in detail "the strong feeling for baseball in Washington."

"They did not ask for a decision at this time but asked for a committee of baseball people to work with them." The commissioner said he would name a panel to work with the Washington group.

The major leagues shifting the winter meeting site Wednesday to Phoenix after the minors closed up shop in the morning at nearby Scottsdale.

The majors went through a series of private, unspectacular sessions and there was no explosive trading action like the four big deals that highlighted the first two days of the meetings Monday and Tuesday.

Mathis Threatens ABC, Cossell With Law Suit

NEW YORK (AP)— Buster Mathis and his manager threatened legal action Wednesday unless ABC and sportscaster Howard Cosell publicly apologize for their television presentation of the Mathis-Muhammad Ali fight.

"The American Broadcasting Co. and Howard Cosell have seriously damaged the reputation and earning power of a serious athlete," Jimmy Iselin, president of Peers Managment, which handles Mathis, told a news conference.

Mathis and Iselin also said they would ask that ABC show the film of the fight in its entirety.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, said in a statement that there would be no showing of the fight and no apology.

Cosell derided the fight when it was shown on Wide World of Sports Nov. 20, three days after Ali won an easy 12-round decision. The fight was shown only in part with the action accompanied by music and subtitles such as "Ouch."

Ali, who talked to the news conference via telephone from Philadelphia, said he was not upset with the presentation.

Chrysler Cuts Out of Racing Scene

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. announced Wednesday it will not provide factory support for any stock car racing teams for the 1972 season.

Chrysler thus ends the successful affiliation with several stock car teams, notably that of Richard Petty's National Association of Stock Car Racers championship Plymouth team.

Robert J. Cahill, manager of vehicle performance planning for Chrysler, said in making the announcement that Dodge and Plymouth drivers had championships in the five major stock car circuits.

Chrysler will continue to support drag racing activities in 1972, Cahill said, although at a reduced level.

Nicklaus Sights On Trevino

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, his fearsome game in gear, has set dead aim on Lee Trevino and the leading-money winning spot going into the last two weeks of the pro golf tour.

The Golden Bear, winner of the PGA championship earlier this year, served notice Wednesday he's the man to beat in today's start of the $150,000 Walt Disney World Open Golf Tournament when he cruised around the 6,804-yard, par-72 Magnolia course with a 68.

That gave him a share of first place in the pro-am with Bert Yancey in the individual scoring, but his team score of 58 wasn't good enough to beat Pete Brown at 57.

"In 10 years on the pro tour, I've never won a team pro-am," Nicklaus said.

Nicklaus, his position as the game's premier player threatened by Trevino's mid-summer surge, won three of his last four starts and finished third last week.

Now he's closing in on Trevino for the top money-winning spot going into today's first round in this new event. Trevino, who leaped into the top rank of the game's great stars with his lightning sweep of the American, British and Canadian opens, already has set a record of $229,323.

But Nicklaus is within striking distance at $213,678 and may make a bid for the title.

"Sure the money winning title is important," said Nicklaus, a three-time winner of the crown. "But I don't think it's as important as winning one of the big four tournaments. . . .

"If I can do it within my schedule, that's fine. And right now I seem to be playing pretty well. I'm driving well, my irons are reasonably good and I'm putting pretty well."

Will he play next week in the Bahama Islands Open, the last event on the schedule?

"Well, let's put it this way: I'd rather not. But if I'm in a position to win it, well, one more tournament would still put me within my schedule—25 or 26 tournaments."

Instant Replay

After watching an apparent touchdown catch ruled dead at the one-yard line in Sunday's 37-34 loss to Cleveland, Hughes is ready to suggest putting an official in the press box with an instant-replay handy.

"There's too much money involved in some of their decisions," Hughes said. "There's a lot of money involved for each player when it causes him to lose his Super Bowl share.

"I don't see why they couldn't put an official on a television camera and let him overrule decisions on the field if they turn out to be wrong.

Filion Looked For New Harness Worlds

YONKERS, N.Y. (CP) — Steve Filion looked for new worlds to conquer today after becoming the first harness racing driver in history to drive 500 winners in a year.

Filion was the first driver to rein 400 winners in a year, accomplishing the feat in 1968, and won the first world harness racing championship here in 1970.

After driving his 500th winner of 1971 Wednesday night, the 32-year-old Angers, native has only one goal left—most Meilnye wins.

That mark is held by Billy Haughton with 3,445, set in 1965. Filion now has 3,417 and could break Haughton's mark before the end of the year.

He intends to give it a try.

"I'm not stopping, going to keep going on," he said.

Filion has been racing after nights at Freehold, N.J., and Yonkers in his bid to pass the 500 mark. Freehold now is closed but Yonkers remains open until Dec. 15 and he plans a full schedule until then.

"Only vacation will be Christmas holidays when Barbara (his wife) and I will take the kids, Tammy Lyn, and Herve Jr., to their grandparents in Trenton," Filion said. "Then I'm going to Las Vegas for a couple of days and on to Florida.

"I've never been there. But I won't do any driving until Roosevelt opens."

Roosevelt reopens in January. After that Filion will drive at Dover Downs in Delaware, Connaught Park in Ottawa, Greenwood Raceway in Toronto and Blue Bonnets in Montreal.

Filion originally set the record for most victories in a season with 494 in 1970. He broke that mark earlier this week and then guessed for 500.

It came behind T'ts Im d Royal, an 11-year-old pacer and oldest horse in Filion's long stable, in the second race at Yonkers, Thursday. Royal was off as the 4-to-5 favorite and paid $5.20, $3.20 and $2. Thursday Royal was timed in 2:07 2-5 for the mile race.

TORONTO (CP) — Sabby Piscopo has virtually given up hope of defending his North American riding title.

The Oshawa jockey, whose 81 winners last year established the second-highest number total in history, was two years at Greenwood Tuesday to bring his 1971 total to 362. Meanwhile, Larry Pincay Jr., the current leader, won two at Woodbine to reach 367.

Hawley said he has cancelled plans to ride at Liberty Bell track in Philadelphia when the Greenwood season ends Saturday.

"I've heard Pincay is going to Florida to ride when Aqueduct closes," he said. "If he does, I'm going to take a holiday. There'd be no way I could catch him."

Hawley said he plans a West Indies vacation, returning to action in Florida when Gulfstream Park opens Jan. 17.

Linda Carbonetto, former Canadian women's figure skating champion, says being a professional skater is comparatively easy. Csonka Heads AFC Rushers

NEW YORK (CP) — Less than first-down yardage separates the three leading rushers in the National Football League.

The National Conference leader is John Brockington, Green Bay Packers' sensational rookie, with 874 yards in 161 attempts, followed by Steve Owens of Detroit Lions, who has logged the ball 200 times for 870 yards.

With three games remaining, the only player with a chance of overtaking the top trio is Floyd Little of Denver Broncos, the AFC runner-up with 833 yards in 215 carries.

Vic Washington, San Francisco 49ers' acquisition from the Canadian Football League, moved into third place in the NFC by picking up 125 yards in 27 attempts against New York Jets Sunday but the former Ot-

No Le Mans Cuf

LE MANS, France (AP) — Threats to cut the famous 24-hour Le Mans auto race down to as short as six hours were rejected by the organizers Wednesday.

Moves have been started both to cut world championship sports car races to six hours or 1,000 kilometres, and to forbid drivers racing for more than six hours in any one event.

Club officials said Le Mans would continue outside the championship, if necessary.

tawa Rough Rider's 891-yard total left him virtually out of reach of the leaders.

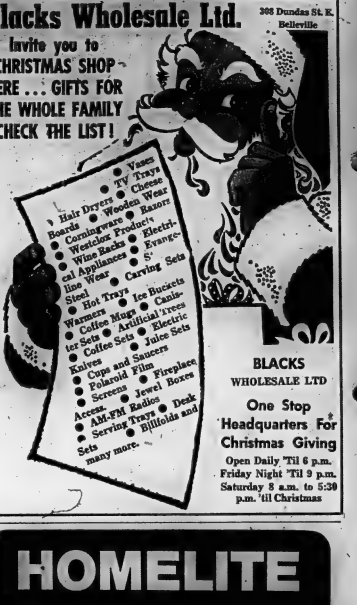
Veteran Fred Mitchell took over the lead among pass-receivers, snaring seven of Dave Lamonica's tosses in Oakland Raiders' 37-14 loss to Baltimore Colts for a total of 47, five more than his nearest rivals.

Paul Warfield, the veteran Miami end who once played for Calgary Stampeders of the CFL, and Otis Taylor of Kansas City Chiefs lead the receivers in yards gained with 861 apiece.

Miami quarterback Bob Griese threw his 18th and 19th touchdown passes of the season against Chicago Bears Monday to maintain his position as the AFC's leading passer and team mate Garo Yepremian kicked 16 points for a conference-leading total of 66.

Warfield did not score in the Dolphins' 34-3 rout of the Bears but continued to lead the NFL in touchdowns with 11, two more than Owens.

Roger Staubach had a big day in Dallas Cowboys' 38-31 victory over Los Angeles Rams last Thursday, firing two touchdown passes to defensive Greg Landry for Detroit as the leader among NFC quarterbacks. Despite his scrambling style, he has given up only three interceptions, an NFL low, while completing 96 of 186 throws.



Jerrel Wilson of Kansas City retained the league punting leadership with a 47.8 average to 45.3 for Dave Lewis of Cincinnati Bengals, a former quarterback with Montreal Alouettes of the CFL.

Another CFL graduate, Jake Scott of Miami, moved into a three-way tie for the AFC lead in interceptions by grabbing two against Chicago for a total of seven. Scott, a former British Columbia Lion, also ranks third in punt returns with a 9.3 average.

Apple Industry Probe Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Frank Welch (PC—Nova Scotia) called Wednesday for a royal commission to investigate Canada's ailing apple industry and castigated the government for lack of attention to the problem.

Senator Welch told the Senate that Canada's once-great apple industry is losing export markets. The domestic market also was being increasingly absorbed by foreign apples and apple products.

The Canadian industry "going down the drain fast," said Senator Welch, president of Welch-La Farms Ltd., one of the largest apple growers in Eastern Canada.

He said imported concentrated apple juice from Mediterranean countries has been taking over the Canadian market for years.

Apple-growers in the U.S. could sell their apples in Canada duty-free, but Canadian apples exported to the U.S. were subject to a duty of 31 cents a bushel.

U.S. apples are underselling Canadian apples in Canadian markets.

Last year, when Canada was having trouble disposing of its apples, the government permitted free imports of apples and apple products from Australia, New Zealand, France, South Africa, Chile and Japan, none of which would accept Canadian apples, he said.

For years Canadian apple-growers had been selling apples for use in apple products below production cost and, while European countries subsidized their growers Canada would not.

A total of 35 per cent of all the apple juice made in Ontario was made from imported apple concentrate.

OTTAWA (CP) — Possibilities for exports of Canadian apples are growing because of advanced research on disease-causing insects.

In a news release, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said Wednesday, South Africa has agreed to allow importing of Canadian apples and others are interested.

South Africa for five years kept Canadian apples out of that country because of insect problems.

Ships Told to Leave Seaway

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Cargo ships in the Great Lakes should begin heading back to sea or risk being trapped in the St. Lawrence Seaway.

That was the warning issued Wednesday by the executive committee of the International Association of Great Lakes Ports.

"Unless all ships in all Great Lakes ports have discharged their cargoes and are on their way within three days, some ships are going to get caught within the seaway system," a committee statement said.

The committee noted that 81 vessels have moved into the seaway since Nov. 12, the last day seaway authorities recommended inbound trips.

Unless ships begin departing promptly, the committee said, as many as 75 ships may be jammed at the Welland Canal exit by Friday.

The seaway officially closes Dec. 12 but it will continue to service ships on a day-by-day basis, depending upon weather.

The committee charged the Shipping Federation, a Montreal-based organization of steamship operators, "has continued to book additional vessels into the seaway."

Vessel operators, the committee said, "are just not living up to their scheduled departures."

Police Forces Geared to Stop Holiday Drinking by Drivers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For police across Canada, the problem is to keep Canadians who use the nation's highways alive over the Christmas and New Year's holiday season.

And since police attribute most fatal car accidents to drinking, they believe the simplest method of cutting down on holiday traffic deaths is to convince drinkers to stay away from the steering wheel.

A Canadian Press survey of the Canadian Press shows that many police forces have already geared their campaigns to prevent needless tragedies during the holidays.

Some forces will rely on regular methods of surveillance and education. Some plan special campaigns, ranging from extensive advertising programs designed to convince drinking drivers to stay off the highways to added patrols and spot checks.

Police in all the provinces have the same goal in mind: To save lives.

NEWFOUNDLAND

RCMP in Newfoundland say they will follow the routine procedure of putting extra patrols on highways during the Christmas season. But an RCMP spokesman says there has been "no noticeable increase" in drinking-driving accidents recently despite the increase in the number of cars and drivers.

A spokesman for the Newfoundland Constabulary, which polices St. John's, says no extra patrols or efforts have been made in the city during the last two years because police found people are getting more sensible.

NOVA SCOTIA

Highways Minister Garnet Brown has appealed to all motorists to co-operate with police to "hit hard at drinking drivers," and has also instructed his department to conduct an intensive education program during December.

"I trust the small minority of drivers who feel it is safe to drink and drive to know that their decision could be very costly," he said.

Halifax Police Chief John Wren says his department's policy is to try to convince people they should arrange for some other means of transportation when they know they will be drinking.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Police in Prince Edward Island will be pushing the message on radio, television and newspaper advertisements that drinking and driving don't mix.

Police Chief Sterns Webster of Charlottetown says extra patrols will be on duty over the holiday season.

NEW BRUNSWICK

Provincial Secretary Rodman Logan has cautioned all drivers to drive defensively and says there is no place on provincial highways for the drunken driver.

Both RCMP and police in Saint John indicate they'll be tightening up on spot checks and Saint John police are in the middle of a six-week television and newspaper campaign with spot announcements on pedestrian and vehicular safety.

QUEBEC

Provincial police in Quebec plan no special patrols over the holiday period but publicity announcements are planned warning the public about drinking and driving.

Montreal police plan their usual surveillance and the stepped-up traffic program began before Christmas. There will be a full police staff at Christmas and New Year's and during these days police officers have flashing lights going on their cruisers during the day to draw attention to police presence.

ONTARIO

There will be the usual heavy patrols on the province's highways by the Ontario Provincial Police during the holiday season this year.

In Toronto, Deputy Police Chief John Murray says police will be tougher on drinking drivers this year because breath-testing devices have failed to discourage them. Impaired driving charges are 75 per cent higher than a year ago. Spot checks in Toronto started Wednesday.

MANITOBA

Police say there might be more police cars on this road during peak holiday periods but no special crackdown is being planned.

RCMP spokesman said "special splurges are not recognized as the best method of promoting traffic safety."

"We go all out all year round," he said.

SASKATCHEWAN

Inspector Denis Chisolm of the Regina city police said usual spot checks would be set up.

"Naturally, we direct more attention to the driver because it is that time of year," said Insp. Chisolm who also said advance publicity had "quite a deterrent effect."

RCMP plan routine checks and Insp. Randy Schramm said the force, "solicits the co-operation of the public . . . through local news media."

ALBERTA

RCMP say a special blitz to reduce the number of drinking drivers begins Nov. 1 and will be part of a permanent program. The idea, said Insp. W. J. Hunter, is not to get more convictions but to get drinking drivers off the road.

In Calgary on Christmas Eve there will be the customary courtesy cars—driven by off-duty policemen—to take wobbly celebrants home. Edmonton Police Chief Norman Ward said the traffic enforcement squad has been increased as of Dec. 1, "just when we really needed it."

BRITISH COLUMBIA

The attorney-general's office says the province plans to repeal its anti-drinking-&-driving campaign first unveiled on the Labor Day weekend. Radio, television and newspaper ads will begin about Dec. 22 and run until after New Year's.

Vancouver city police have been putting out weekend roadblocks since the first weekend of November and will put out roadblocks every night during the Christmas season. In a new move, police will analyse trends, ascertain where the most drinking drivers are being nabbed, where none or few are being caught and change the location of roadblocks accordingly.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♥

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Here is a fine hand played by Edwin Kantar, well-known California star. He got to four hearts on the bidding shown and West, after cashing two diamonds, shifted to a trump.

Kantar won in dummy with the king and embarked upon a partial elimination play in an effort to cut his two club losers down to one. He cashed the A-K of spades, ruffed a spade with the queen, returned to his hand with a heart to the ace, and ruffed his last diamond with the eight to produce the following position:

North
♥ 7 5 3
West	East
♠ —	♠ J 9
♥ K Q 8	♥ J
♦ —	♦ 7

West was marked by the bidding with the king of clubs, so when Kantar now led the deuce from dummy and East followed low, he inserted the eight, losing to the ten. West could not afford to return a club, which would have made life easy for declarer, so he returned the queen of diamonds instead.

Kantar ruffed in dummy with the ten and East was actually be discarded the jack trouble, whatever he did. Accordingly, he chose to ruff the ace next but Kantar had the answer to this. He overruffed the ten with the jack, threw East's last trump with the nine, and finessed through West's king of clubs to bring home the contract.

South would have been equally successful had East started with J-x-x of clubs instead of J-x. In that case, West's diamond return would have allowed declarer to discard a club as he ruffed the diamond in dummy.

Tomorrow: The rebid.

What The Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Friday, December 4

Aries (March 21-April 19). Key allies are a bit tired of happy today, especially when it involves changes around the house. Try to effect a compromise between new curtains and a new house.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Household routines, particularly ones that involve any monotony, can be taken for granted with ill-starred results today. Check dials on appliances, temperature settings, and the like.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Weekend hobbies should provide more than just a way to waste money, but now could be a mystery that won't be used. Finish what you started last week.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Flowing through old letters, photographs, and similar treasure chest mementos can send you on a mental journey back to places and folks you haven't thought of in years.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Distant kin (the black sheep variety you'd prefer to forget) can suddenly call or turn up just in time to throw an annoying twist into holiday plans later this month.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you're not shopping today, keep your cash in a safe place, check to see you don't mislay either wallet, credit cards. If you're careless, it could be a most expensive day.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Pals who'd counted on spending the day the same way they usually do could be more than mildly surprised when you decide to cut an independent caper. Just don't stand them up.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). How you'll keep one happy surprise until the appointed day in month's end is beyond me. It might help, though, if you wiped that silly twinkle off your face.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Quite a few of your promises directly hinge on other folks keeping their end of the bargain. Let them know how you view any agreements if they start slipping.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Posing problems, making calculations and generally keeping your weight around is not a wise tactic to use now to test your mate's affection. It's one game they're not in the mood for.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Travel plans don't seem to fit smoothly into your present work schedule. Unless you intend to put in a lot of overtime in the next few weeks, trips are out.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). This is a far better weekend for those who stick by old friends and loves, rather than looking for new faces. Strangers can suddenly appear, then repel.

Today's Birthday — Before you start to count on pressed ambitious materializing next summer, better be warned that Fate is liable to spice up your plans unexpectedly. Something even better is coming.

Sharp Calls Rhodesian Accord Unsatisfactory

OTTAWA (CP) — Britain's proposed plan for bringing legal independence to Rhodesia falls short of satisfying the Canadian government, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday.

But in a cautious statement to the Commons, Mr. Sharp expressed hope that some of the plan's potential shortcomings will be overcome and that the will of the black Rhodesian majority will be satisfied.

The scheme was made public by Sir Alec Douglas-Home, British's foreign affairs minister, last week.

He maintained that it would move Rhodesia towards majority rule and racial equality, although some critics have estimated that its terms would effectively put off majority rule for 65 or more years.

The Canadian government position also was outlined in the Senate by Senator Paul Martin, government leader, and prompted a comment from Senator Gratian O'Leary. (PC—Ontario) that the government has been guilty of hypocrisy in its stand on the Rhodesian issue.

Mr. Sharp's hesitant reception was shared by Heath Macquarrie, Conservative external affairs critic.

He said the British plan is unsatisfactory, and urged the government to express grave reservations about it.

Mr. Sharp said that, no matter what the misgivings of Canadians, Canada can not substitute its judgment for the judgment of the Rhodesian people on the acceptability of terms of independence.

Rhodesia declared unilateral independence from Britain in 1965, and the two countries have been negotiating its legalization ever since.

LONDON (AP) — With cries of "shame" and "bloody disgraceful" issuing from packed opposition benches, the Commons approved Wednesday night the Conservative government's proposals for settlement of the six-year rebellion of white-ruled Rhodesia.

Supreme Court Ruling Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The first case in which the Canadian Bill of Rights has been used to fight discrimination against women will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, Justice Minister John Turner announced Wednesday.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said later "radical changes" in the administration of Indian affairs will result if the Supreme Court upholds a Federal Court decision on which the test is based.

The decision overthrows a marriage provision in the Indian Act on the grounds that it is discriminatory against women.

The Commons announcement that it will be heard in the Supreme Court was taken by Conservative spokesman as an attempt to break the Federal Court judgment.

Indians have been sharply divided on whether women should lose their treaty rights, as in the case now, when they marry non-Indians.

Mr. Chretien was asked whether the judgment, if upheld, would have a retroactive effect on the hundreds of Indian women who have lost their equity in reserve funds, and their right to live on the reserve or be treated as treaty Indians because they have violated the marriage provision.

The provision has been aimed at protecting the reserve lands from domination by non-Indians.

The Indian affairs minister replied that he would await the Supreme Court decision before making any comment.

The royal commission on women, recommending deletion of the marriage provision in the Indian Act, said in its report that 4,859 Indian women lost treaty status between 1958 and 1968 as a result of marriage to non-Indians.

The case involves Jeanette Vivian Lavell, whose name was struck from the register of the Wikwemikong Indian Band in Ontario when she married a non-Indian.

Her argument—that the Bill of Rights renders inoperative sections of the Indian Act dealing with Indian women who marry non-Indians—was upheld Oct. 1 by the appeal division of the new Federal Court of Canada.

The court found provisions in the Indian Act discriminatory. They deny the right of an Indian woman to equality before the law and do not give Indian women the same marriage rights as Indian men, who may marry a non-Indian with no loss of status.

Tommy Douglas' Daughter Freed Of U.S. Charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charges of conspiracy and possession of hand grenades were dropped Wednesday against Shirley Jean Sutherland, former wife of actor Donald Sutherland, and a co-defendant, Donald Freed.

Mrs. Sutherland, 27, is the daughter of T. C. Douglas, former leader of the New Democratic Party in Canada.

Mrs. Sutherland and Freed, a teacher, were members of a group called Friends of the Panthers, the U.S. attorney's office said.

Quebec 'Militia' Formed

MONTREAL (CP) — A group calling itself Le Milice de la Republique du Quebec — The Militia of the Republic of Quebec — says it has set up headquarters in an apartment in east-end Montreal.

A spokesman for the group, a burly 300-pound "Colonel Joe," says the militia's role is "to defend the people of Quebec against everything and everyone — against police, army, anti-separatists or anyone else who threatens them."

He said the militia was formed Oct. 1 and was legally incorporated Oct. 14. He did not elaborate on the group's incorporation.

The leader is "General" André Mabeu but it is "Colonel" Joseph-Gerard - Andre Patrick Chamberlin who gives most of the orders and does most of the talking at headquarters.

"We're not clandestine and we do nothing illegal," he said in an interview at the group's headquarters.

"Our only firearms are rifles and there's no law against having rifles . . . for hunting. Everything else is perfectly legal stuff bought in army surplus stores."

The militia claims a membership of "more than 100 persons" and is allied with the Quebec Republican Party, led by Claude Longtin, a ex-Y. employee [illegible] lost to Mayor Jean Drapeau in the 1970 election.

Aside from its .303 rifles, the militia's arsenal includes bayonets, army surplus helmets, gas masks, truncheons, battle uniforms and at least three jeeps painted in military style.

Montreal's Police Find Nitro Cache

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal police spent seven hours Wednesday neutralizing — more than 40 ounces of highly-explosive nitroglycerine discovered buried in the basement of a west-end motel.

Four Montreal detectives discovered the explosive after they received an anonymous tip.

Between 30 and 60 occupants and employees of the motel were evacuated.

One officer said that amount of nitroglycerine could conceivably level a city block.

A technical squad neutralized the explosive with acetone, a highly-volatile solvent, and then disposed of it by burning it mixed with sawdust.

India Attacks West Pakistan

From REUTER-AP

Pakistan radio said today that Indian armed forces attacked Pakistani forward positions all along the West Pakistan frontier, spreading the conflict to both parts of Pakistan, which is separated by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

India announced that the Pakistani air force had made air raids on three airports in western India including one on Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir.

An Indian government spokesman, briefing reporters as New Delhi was thrown into darkness by an unexpected air raid warning, said Pakistani aircraft attacked Amritsar in the western Punjab and Pathankot, also in the Punjab, as well as Srinagar.

The defence ministry spokesman said that the airports appeared to be the main targets of the attacks.

Pakistan radio, reporting on charges of Indian attacks against West Pakistan, said the situation remained confused.

It was the first major action reported on the West Pakistan-northern Indian front. The fighting had previously been concentrated on East Pakistan's border with India.

Radio Pakistan reported that India had sent three more divisions in the biggest Indian offensive in days against Pakistan and fierce fighting was reported on seven fronts around the borders of East Pakistan.

The Associated Press reported from New Delhi there appeared little doubt that India and Pakistan were again at "all out war"—for the third time since they became independent in August, 1947, after the partition of British India into predominantly Hindu and Moslem states.

In the air attacks, India also reported that four Pakistani Sabre jets heading for Agartala in Tripura state this afternoon were intercepted and three damaged.

The spokesman described raids by the Pakistani air force on the airfields of Amritsar, Srinagar and Pathankot as "a blatant attack."

Srinagar is about 300 miles north of New Delhi. Pathankot is some 150 miles north and slightly west of the Indian capital. Amritsar, only 10 miles from the West Pakistan border, is 120 miles northwest of New Delhi.

The Indian spokesman who announced the Pakistani air attacks said there had been no declaration of war by Pakistan.

Dollar Crisis
Solution By 1972 Possible

WASHINGTON (CP) — Treasury Secretary John Connally says he's generally optimistic there will be some settlement to the world's economic crisis by the end of 1971.

Connally returned Thursday from high-level financial discussions in Rome and told a news conference:

"There's hope that we can settle it before the end of the year."

But then he cautioned: "I do not want to raise false hopes."

In any case, the treasury secretary said "very large steps" were taken by the United States at the Rome meeting of the Group of Ten financial powers.

"I think we are making progress," he said striking a more optimistic tone than he ever has about finding a value for the American dollar that the non-Communist world can live with.

Reports of American plans to devalue the dollar swept through Europe Thursday following the end of the Rome meeting. That set off a rush of dollar-selling.

But Connally said the United States had made no offers to devalue the dollar at the Group of Ten meeting.

"I do not believe that the United States delegation in private meetings or in the executive session made an offer (to devalue).

"No offer was made. Assumptions were made, but no offers."

Sheikdoms In Persian Gulf Unite

DUBAI (AP) — Six Persian Gulf sheikdoms, two rich in oil and the others poor, joined Thursday to become the Union of Arab Emirates, a new country the size of Austria with a population of 180,000.

They formed the union at a time when Arab brother states are involved in a furious dispute with Iran, which occupied three tiny islands at the entrance to the Persian Gulf Wednesday.

One of the islands, Abu Musa, belonged to Sharajah, one of the members of the union. Sheik Khalid, ruler of Sharajah, entered an agreement with Iran to split proceeds if oil is found around the island and accepted an Iranian subsidy of $3.75 million.

This may be the reason that his brother, Sheik Sakr, was wounded Wednesday by a gunman, who escaped. The incident did not prevent Khalid from attending the meeting in Dubai's Gemeira Palace, although Sakr's condition was reported serious. He was in a Dubai hospital.

Planning Board Accepts Tender

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville will have its long-awaited official plan and accompanying zoning bylaws no later than July of 1973.

Quinte Planning Board last night voted unanimously to accept the $23,500 tender of consultants Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd. to prepare a complete report for presentation to the department of municipal affairs.

Although 19 months has been set as a limit, the board authorized its personnel committee to negotiate further the time element involved. The date of submission could be earlier.

At the same time, planners announced they are at present establishing terms of reference to call tenders for the Quinte Area official plan, which could be undertaken at the same time Belleville is being documented.

The over-all official plan would establish the planning future of the nine member municipalities in the Quinte Planning Board. Several of the municipalities have accepted plans or plans are in the hands of the provincial planning department.

Of these municipalities, only the village of Brighton and the Brighton Township have provincially approved plans. Trenton and Stirling (its request to split from the board was turned down in November) have complete plans, which have been adopted by their councils but have yet to be approved by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Murray Township's plan is in the planning stages, with background studies under way for Frankford, and the townships of Sidney and Thurlow.

In Belleville, only the controversial residential chapter of the plan has been tabled.

Of the aforementioned municipalities, only Brighton village has an approved zoning bylaw.

What does an official plan and accompanying zoning bylaw mean to the community?

— An end to almost 10 years of tabling, retabling and discarding of numerous reports.

— Settlement of the apartment controversy in Belleville. During the summer months, planning board and staff members have been deluged with homeowners complaining of apartment construction in their residential neighborhoods. Construction companies battled to keep zoning laws which allow apartment development. Even the courts took a hand to allow erection of an apartment on the Anderson property on Bridge Street.

— Annexation development: Within the next two years, Hastings County School Board expects more than $5 million will be spent for new schools. Close liaison with the school board will be maintained in order to allow for future educational expansion.

Egypt May Ask UN To Order Israel Out

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN diplomats expect Egypt, in the Middle East debate starting today, to ask the General Assembly to demand that Israel withdraw from all Egyptian territory seized in the 1967 war.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad was to open the debate this afternoon. Diplomatic sources said his main objective probably would be an assembly demand that Israel comply with the proposals presented last February by Gunnar Jarring, the special UN envoy for the Middle East. In an effort to lay the groundwork for peace negotiations, Jarring sought simultaneous pledges from Israel that it would withdraw from all Egyptian land and from Egypt that it would enter a peace agreement with the Israelites.

Egypt agreed, but Israel refused, and Jarring's attempt to hold indirect peace negotiations with himself as go-between broke down.

The Swedish ambassador returned to New York Sunday from his regular post at Moscow and since then has talked with Riad and Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah.

Vienna Talks May Curb Nuclear Missiles Race

VIENNA (Reuter) — Talks between Soviet and United States representatives in this Austria capital could prove a turning point in complex negotiations towards curbing their nuclear missile race and further improving East-West understanding.

Many analysts believe that U.S. President Richard Nixon is virtually keen for a positive result from the latest Vienna meeting which could enable him to sign some form of agreement when he visits Moscow in May.

The two sides have been meeting for the last two years in Helsinki and Vienna in what has become known as SALT — strategic arms limitation talks —find an acceptable formula to end the costly arms race.

The Americans hope this sixth round of talks, which opened in Vienna Nov. 15, will yield if not an actual first-stage agreement then the recognizable outline of one that will maintain a balance of security for each country.

The chief American delegate, Gerard Smith, has said the earlier rounds have made real progress and he now is hopeful of a successful conclusion.

Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Semyonov, leading the Soviet delegation, spent most of Tuesday discussions in a constructive spirit.

Major differences remain to be solved—some technical, some strategic and some political.

The two sides have still to resolve the differences between what are considered tactical nuclear weapons and what should be classified as strategic and therefore subject to any agreement.

Doubling Queen's Household Money Provokes Battle Royal in Britain

LONDON (CP) — "Good," says the Queen in the Tory-supporting Daily Mail cartoon. "We'll be able to afford a turkey for Christmas."

"Extra money by the bucket-ful for the royals, not a penny extra for the pensions," says the Communist Morning Star.

The monarchy "serves us well" and should be given "secure financial backing," says the ever-loyal Scotsman, its sentiment echoed by The Times and other well-established newspapers.

The roaring flood of comment was unleashed by Parliament's select committee report recommending that the Queen's household pay be doubled to $2.4 million a year from the current $1.2 million, the first major boost in 19 years.

Big Services also are proposed for all the other members of the Royal Family with the exception of Prince Charles, who draws an independent income from Duchy of Cornwall revenues.

Under the committee's recommendations, allowances for the Queen Mother will rise to $240,000 a year, up $65,000; Princess Anne will get $37,000, up $22,000—and a boost to $80,000 after marriage.

Princess Margaret's allowance will increase to $90,000 from $77,000 and the Duke of Gloucester, the Queen's 71-year-old uncle who has been ailing for many years, will get $115,000, up $25,000.

The government now will rush to enact the necessary legislation in time to bring increases into effect by Jan. 1. A battle royal looms in Parliament as Labor members dig in to revise the traditional way of paying the Queen and her functionaries, for all the trappings of maintaining a monarchy.

Labor left-wingers may even split with the party leadership to demand stripping the Queen of all her alleged wealth. An indication came from Labor left-winger William Hamilton in the select committee who described the pay increase as "the most incredible piece of brazen pay claim made in the last 200 years." The report was made public Thursday.

Critics maintain the Queen should dip more into her own private funds to help pay for her special style of living. But all the speculation that her wealth is in the neighborhood of some $125 million has been roundly condemned by her functionaries as a gross exaggeration.

Objections May Be Withdrawn

The department of municipal affairs may withdraw objections forwarded to city council against zoning of Bushy Island as industrial, to take in fishery and boat rental business on the property, south of the former city garbage site.

On Nov. 15, a letter was forwarded to city clerk Adam Stalker from municipal affairs senior planner Cecil A. Louis, registering four objections to the proposed move.

They included department of health and the Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit references to lack of municipal sewers and perjolations they would not be provided; the area was termed "unsuitable for ... septic tank systems" owing to a low water table, and a final stumbling block stating the health unit did not look favorably on any enlargement of the fish processing industry requiring extension of waste facilities.

Quinte Planning Board planning director Bert Kenny last night told representatives on the board that the department of municipal affairs was considering the fact that is a small parcel of land with no municipal bylaw and free to expand."

Mr. Kenny said he had spoken with Mr. Louis recently and he had indicated the department of municipal affairs "would be withdrawing the objection."

Fourteen Couples In Dance Marathon

Remember when a ragtime band, coon skin coats and a wooden dance floor were all that was needed to guarantee a good time?

If you're not 60 or older, the memory will probably be no more than mere history.

But last night students from Loyalist College took the trip down memory lane by staging a dance marathon contest complete with ankle spats and flapper outfits, at Bata Cafeteria.

Dancing to the music of Kid Bastien's Camelia Jazz Band, 14 couples began the trek at 8 p.m. and by midnight only three had retired. Most, in honor of the occasion were trying some form of the Charleston but the basic intent was to remain active.

The story was somewhat different two hours later, however, with only the team of Sue Nagy and Tony Dekeyser still gyrating.

For their effort, they will be treated to dinner at the Four Seasons Hotel and will receive an engraved trophy.

Dance marathons were a big craze during the depression era of the early 1930s. Couples would subject themselves to hours, and sometimes days, of exhausting torture to win prizes which, today, seem incomparable.

Many members of the modern generation were not made aware of the former pastime by the movie They Shoot Horses, don't They which accurately portrayed the gruelling atmosphere surrounding the contests.

Loyalist spokesman Doug Thomas, says he hopes the marathon will become an annual affair.

"The college has been here for four years and people don't know anything about us. We want the marathon to be a community effort to familiarize people with the college," he said.

The band, a seven-man combo of brass, piano and percussion, has professed a liking for events such as this.

"We'll be the last one's out," said one member. "The dance is over when we leave."

Imported from Toronto, they were relieved periodically by recorded rock and music.

Earlier in the day, they took part in taping and picture sessions at the college. Sessions in recording and television arts courses were able to experiment with a vast array of equipment, capturing the sound and sight of the lively during a 15 min. session in a Loyalist studio.

First Chairman Honored

Judge J. C. Anderson, first chairman of the Loyalist College board, was recognized last night for his "untiring efforts and devoted service" to the college by presentation of a plaque from the board. The plaque was presented by present chairman Frank Robertwhose term of office will end with the new year.

Loyalist Enrolment Projection Was Close

Enrolment at Loyalist College this year is slightly higher than the numbers projected, the board of governors learned last night.

The college has 603 "full-time equivalent" students enrolled in day school, two more than the number expected.

But this does not indicate the actual number of people in the day school classes. The figure for equivalent students is arrived at by multiplying the number of students and the number of hours of instruction they take and dividing this total by the number of hours that constitute a full-time student's class load.

With this enrolment, the student-teacher ratio stands at 13.9 to 1 in arts and business, 8.2 to 1 in technology and 16.4 to 1 in the Manpower retraining scheme.

"Our target ratio is 15 to 1," president Herbert Yount told the board. "But because we are a small college, it is much tougher for us to get to that point than it is for some of the large metro colleges."

The board received a staff workload analysis from Paul King, dean of the faculty of arts, indicating the overall student - teacher ratio to be 12.4 "a good one for a small emerging college, with the complex problems of small classes in specialty programs."

This year saw a significant increase in the ratio for applied arts and business. But because of a decrease in enrolment in the technology program, the ratio is reduced in that department this year.

Donald M. Soutter called for a report on the support staff workload at the college. "I can see what everybody on the academic staff is doing from this analysis," he said. "I cannot for the support staff."

Director of finance, Glen Harry, also gave statistics for the extension courses operated in former years by the Hastings county board of education and now the responsibility of the college.

Registration, on a "full-time equivalent students" basis, is down from 237 in 1969-71 to 171 this year.

The college's own extension programs have an increased enrolment this year. About 273 were expected but the full-time equivalent student enrolment is now up to 364.

The number of Manpower retraining students could rise to about 600 before the year is over, Mr. King said.

Enrolment has fallen to a very low level both at the college and in Bancroft and the board chairman will finance only 107 more students for academic upgrading before the college year is over.

Bancroft had requested training for 60 students but the board that will be permitted is about 40. The remaining 127 seats available for academic upgrading will be allocated to the other Quinte area centres such as Napanee, Picton and Belleville.

Firemen's Pay to Council

Paul Stephenson, president of the Belleville Firefighters' Association, announced this morning that their 1971-72 contract with the city of Belleville, will be presented to council on Monday, Dec. 6.

"We're hopeful that the wages themselves will be ratified by council members. There are some other small items, however, which we hope will be passed, other than wages," he told The. The association has been operating on their 1970 contract this year.

Intelligencer.

Arbitration decision for 1970 was not handed down until July of 1971, with negotiations under way in late fall of this year.

The association representative is disclined to disclose terms of their agreement until after council has viewed them at its Monday meeting.

There are 48 members of the Belleville Firefighters' Association.

Poles Pose Problem

TRENTON (Staff) — The start on construction on the proposed addition to the F. W. Wolverton store on Dundas Street could be delayed, depending on the willingness of the company or the contractor to assume the cost of relocating two hydro poles.

At a special meeting of the Public Utilities Commission called to discuss the request yesterday, utilities manager Douglas Marlow was instructed to point out commission policy in the replies to the parties involved.

Commissioner Commissioner Charles Hilton; the commission has never borne expenditures of this nature in the past and should maintain the same attitude in this case.

The cost of moving the poles is $1,760 and the time it would take the PUC to do the job is two or three days.

Tibetan Crafts On Display

Belleville's Tibetan community is sharing its culture with fellow citizens this weekend through a display in the basement gallery of Carlaw Public Library.

Between 4 and 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday they are presenting a display of artifacts and crafts. On exhibit are rugs, costumes, jewelry, an antique prayer wheel and a shrine, among other items.

The public is invited to visit the display and meet the newest immigrants to the Quinte district.

Cat Under Observation

A stray cat is being kept under observation at the Ontario Humane Society's Quinte Branch near Belleville after it was found up at an Amherstburg township public school yesterday.

As a precaution, parents of youngsters who may have handled the cat have been advised by school principal Glenn Salter.

Mr. Salter said it was not definite whether any of the youngsters had been bitten or scratched by the cat.

Students were questioned but "with kids it's hard to tell," he said.

However, where he considered it necessary, he sent notes home with several students informing parents the youngsters may have handled the cat.

He informed parents that in such cases parents usually take children to a physician and inform him of what happened.

"Anytime this happens I like to let parents know . . ." he added. "I always like to be on the cautious side."

Mr. Salter personally drove the cat to the animal shelter where officials judged it "looked fine" but decided to keep it under observation.

Agreement Lacking on Best Method of Cheese Marketing

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Ontario cheese buyers, factory owners and cheese milk producers have contrasting opinions about the need and value of cheese marketing exchanges.

This was indicated Thursday in no uncertain terms, during a panel discussion at the Central Ontario Cheese Marketing Convention held in Belleville.

Buyers, while admitting that there is need for some sort of a price setting agency, say that cheese exchanges as they are now operated have outserved their usefulness.

But factory owners and producers take the opposite view and feel that the cheese exchanges are again the official agency for the province and today is the barometer which determines the price for all cheese in Ontario.

Over the years there have been several changes in the method of selling cheese.

As noted above, buyers originally bought cheese direct from the factory, then boards were set up and later, when dissatisfaction over the board system developed, cheese marketing co-operatives were formed in the 1920s.

Now the cheese marketing co-operatives have been phased out of existence and cheese changes should be retained.

Taking part in yesterday's panel discussion on the subject are the Ontario Exchanges Serving the Industry? were: buyers Vern Edwards, of Cornwall and Roy Johnson of Western Ontario, brothers cheese factory owners Harold Elliott, and George Wood, secretary and general manager of the Beulah factory in Centre Hastings.

Mr. Edwards said he was in favor of abolishing the cheese boards in favor of a method of contract buying directly from the factories.

He said that such a proposal had been placed before the 1970 convention of the only thing accomplished was to prevent the rotation of the clock in the Dutch auction method of selling on the Belleville exchange.

Mr. Edwards took strong exception to the present policy of allowing exceptions from board selling, which he said was discriminatory.

Some factories were allowed exception from board selling, others were allowed partial exemption, and others were flatly refused.

He urged that change was needed but at the same time admitted there was a need for some system of establishing a base price for cheese.

On the other hand, factory owner Harold Elliott said he favored the board system of selling.

But he called for an end to board exemption selling.

"All cheese should be sold the same way and on the board or otherwise," he said.

Roy Johnson, buyer for an Ingersoll cream cheese company, admitted that cheese boards had served a useful purpose but said times had changed. Cheese prices should be established on the basis of milk cost, he felt.

He asked why cheddar cheese was the only controlled-dairy product.

He had no objection to cheese boards but claimed buyers should have the right to contract with factories if they so desired.

This prompted a discussion from the floor with Arnold Judson, representing the Milk Marketing Board stating that present regulations leave no place for contract buying.

Mr. Edward said it "burned" him that factories would have a board exemption for the sale of pasteurized cheese.

"I'm not a liar, I can't prove it — that is (many cases) more than 30 million pounds annually, cheese buyers contract directly with the factories. These exchanges exist, but only as a medium of exchange between the buyers.

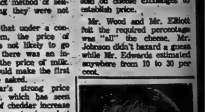
George Wood of Beulah factory said he thought the cheese exchanges "were doing a pretty good job.

"They are serving their purpose and if nothing else, establish a reasonable market for cheese," he said.

Mr. Wood said he didn't have much use for the factory contract method of selling but thought they were not fair.

He said that under a contract system, the price of cheese was not likely to go up unless there was an increase in the price of milk.

"The world makes the first move?" he asked.



This year's strong price for cheese, which has sent the price of cheddar increase by 59 per cent since last spring, came under discussion.

As result of the increased prices, Mr. Edwards said cheese factories had had a heyday. He admitted, however, they had had it coming.

This year's strong cheese price had resulted in a 76 per cent increase in production in the province of Quebec and it was admitted that it could happen again next year.

Panel members didn't agree on the percentage amount of cheese which would have to be held by the cheese exchanges to establish price.

Mr. Wood and Mr. Elliott felt the required percentage was "all" the cheese. Mr. Johnson didn't hazard a guess while Mr. Edwards estimated anywhere from 10 to 30 per cent.

Cheese Production Half of 1900 Level

The heyday of the cheddar cheese industry and its place in the economy of the Ontario dairy farmer was reviewed yesterday at the closing session of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association annual convention in Belleville.

Dr. E. Haslett, Department of Farm Economics and Statistics, Toronto, told cheese makers that shortly after the turn of the century, Ontario produced up to 160 million pounds of cheese with the production totalling six per cent of the province's manufacturing output.

At that time the small rural cheese factory was the main economic force and social activity of the community, he said.

In contrast, Ontario now produces only about 80 million pounds of cheese annually or approximately one half of what made back in 1906.

The history of cheese marketing and the formation of the cheese board system of selling cheese, which came into being after 1933, was also reviewed by the speaker.

Until this time, individual buyers had bought cheese directly at the factory.

By 1935, a total of 31 cheese boards had been set up in the province, including that in Belleville, which was formed in the 1870s.

Traditionally, the Belleville board has sold the largest quantity of cheese of any exchange in the province and today is the barometer which determines the price for all cheese in Ontario.

Over the years there have been several changes in the method of selling cheese.

As noted above, buyers originally bought cheese direct from the factory, then boards were set up and later, when dissatisfaction over the board system developed, cheese marketing co-operatives were formed in the 1920s.

Now the cheese marketing co-operatives have been phased out of existence and cheese

City Plan

— All city departments, such as the Industrial Commission, police, public utilities, commission and traffic and light committees . . . in fact, any and all boards and organizations that affect community growth, will be consulted.

"An official plan is a guide for council. Official plans control council and its actions. Zoning bylaws control the use of land," planning director Bert Kenny has stated.

"An official plan is a community effort and requires a fair bit of input by the community."

Totten, Sims and Hubicki have scheduled 13 meetings, including public hearings, sessions with council and planning board and regular consultation between their company and planning staff.

The firm, at present working on an official plan for Hastings County, will establish a Belleville office in January of next year.

The plan, when finally produced, should give an estimate of lands required for the future for various needs of the population: land for housing; land for industry; land for commerce and land for recreation.

The planning board hopes to reduce the estimated time of completion, members feel past plans and reports may not have been taken into consideration by the consulting firm and will provide valuable resource material.

A total of seven firms submitted tenders, ranging in price from $10,000 to $44,000.

Extensive interviews were conducted with the four companies the personnel committee felt could produce the best report for Belleville. However, only Totten, Sims Hubicki Associates Ltd. tendered for a complete job, from primary work to final submission.

One company, not selected, tendered for $10,000. It wanted to edit all past reports, gathering dust in office files, into a complete plan.

Poverty in America

Poverty is a word we hear mentioned with disturbing regularity these days. And it is not in connection with the obvious places like Latin America, the Middle East and parts of Asia. It exists there but in a perpetual way which, unhappily, we tend to take for granted. The poverty we are speaking of is right here in North America, in a continent possessing the greatest concentration of wealth and affluence known to man.

Consider that in the city of Seattle 12 per cent of the population are unemployed, twice the national average in the United States. Those out of work include formerly well-to-do employees laid off by the Boeing plant: engineers and the like, and some have been off work as long as 18 months.

To meet the situation, one in which many apparently have exhausted unemployment and welfare benefits, a group called Neighbors in Need has been established. It provides food for those in distress, at present there is a large stockpile of food but it is feared the numbers requiring help will grow thus making increasing inroads into the supply. There is even a lack of malnutrition among the young people which, aside from the gnawing experience of hunger, is expected to show up also in poor performance and low grades at school.

It seems incredible, but that is the word from Seattle. The situation may be duplicated in other centres, if not so seriously, across the nation as well as here in Canada where unemployment is the most pressing social ill of the day. We see the Economic Council of Canada is calling for more jobs and increased production. These indeed are crying needs. Could we emulate China in this regard? It seems that everyone in that vast land of 700,000,000 people is occupied in some way or another. We do not want Communism here but we could learn something at least from the Chinese dedication to work and the means they employ to achieve full employment. Are there no farmers requiring help around Seattle and other cities of high unemployment?

Minister Still Away

Energy Minister J. J. Greene apparently is still recovering in hospital in London, Ont. from the attack he suffered while visiting Japan in September, and Prime Minister Trudeau has said he does not have sufficient information on the minister's health to know whether he will be able to continue in his post.

This of course is a matter for Mr. Greene in consultation with his doctors and the Prime Minister, not to mention his family. The Energy Minister was sidelined once before with a heart attack and the thought must be uppermost in his mind again whether the rigors of office are not too high a price to pay in such circumstances.

Mr. Greene, a lawyer by profession, is a very able politician, and his loss to the Cabinet would be keenly felt. However it will come to that remains to be seen. Both Mr. Greene's health and the interests of the cabinet are paramount.

The Terrorist Mind

The sickening rationale of the anarchist mind that equates social progress with death, destruction and elimination of political foes has been demonstrated by the assassination of the Premier of Jordan. King Hussein, who has escaped so many times himself, has been threatened by the same guerrilla group, along with his family. This world will never be "a better place," as the popular song would have it, if it continues to breed Oswalds and Sirhans and innumerable other hatchet men like the ones who killed Premier Wasfi Tell.

Anti-Glare Device

A San Antonio concern is said to be working on an anti-glare device for car headlights. Tests thus far, using polaroid elements as in sunglasses, and fixed to both headlights and the sun visors inside the car have been successful. The next step is actual road tests involving a survey of anything up to 40,000 cars. While the preliminary testing is being done in Texas it is reported that the U.S. firm concerned may carry out the more extensive road testing in Prince Edward Island of all places.

U.S. Hopes to Expand Trade with Soviet Union

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States has apparently concluded that exports are more comfort than ideology at a time when the U.S. balance of trade has gone so badly askew.

In the surprisingly pragmatic spirit introduced by American foreign policy by President Richard Nixon, the result of that conclusion is a series of decisions aimed at securing a bigger foothold for American businessmen in the expanding markets of the Soviet Union.

Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, who has consistently carried a businesslike view into the Nixon cabinet was in Moscow recently for a 10-day visit that represents the first by an administration officer since Nixon took office.

Underlining the importance of the Stans visit are two factors.

First, the trip was immediately preceded by a Washington announcement that the commerce department has issued $538 million in export licences to U.S. firms who want to help the Soviet Union build a huge truck plant on the Kama River, 600 miles east of Moscow.

The U.S. has issued now a total of nearly $1 billion in licences for the truck plant, reversing its previous opposition. Great Soviet gains in foreign competitors seeking the same Soviet contracts, the final total of sales is completely uncertain. But the message of the licences was clear enough.

Secondly, Stans was accompanied by several high-ranking aides, including Edmund Sonnenfeldt, chief adviser on Soviet affairs to Henry Kissinger, the president's own immensely influential foreign-policy adviser.

Their chief task, U.S. sources say, is to explore the potential for greatly expanded trade with the U.S.S.R. Stans is reported to have told a group of businessmen in New York this week that two-way Soviet-American trade could potentially reach $5 billion or $6 billion.

Stans' prediction was generally regarded as highly optimistic, given the current level of such trade, but not impossible considering the success other countries have had.

American sales to the U.S.S.R. this year are expected to total $150 million, up significantly from the $118 million of 1970. But they were still less last year than, for example, Sweden's—which reached $127 million in 1970 although Sweden's population of eight million is less than three per cent of the U.S. figure.

The Nixon administration has been trying to clear away some of the undergrowth—the result of old anti-Communist feelings —which currently hamper such trade.

If has worked out new agreements with Negotiaremore to allow more exports to Communist countries in foreign ships. It has extended most-favored-nation treatment to Poland and may find itself soon with congressional encouragement to do the same for others. And it has begun talks with the Soviet Union to settle outstanding claims of $800 million to $1,000 million from the days when private businesses were expropriated by the Soviet government.

Now it seems ready to make a big push for markets for such trade.

American businessmen feel the greatest opportunities may be, as New York banker Robert V. Roosa said recently, in sophisticated goods which make use of American technology and in special management contracts, licensing arrangements and joint ventures.

Other countries have already paved a profitable path to Moscow with similar ventures. West Germany, Japan, Italy and almost all other Western European nations has been able to arrange satisfactory arrangements with the Soviet Union in recent years.

Mr. Roosa pointed out with some irony, these countries "often base their products and services on technology which was first developed in The United States."

Another Side to Apartments Issue

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Having read several letters carried on your editorial page regarding the apartments I feel there is a facet to this issue not yet represented and citizens' desires not yet heard.

I am a citizen of half a century and am at present living in an apartment building of which I am proud to be a tenant.

I am not familiar with the adjective "conglomerate" in connection with apartments as your correspondent of November 29 has used it. The apartment building in which I live is architecturally planned, well - built, sound proof, well maintained, and is located on one of Belleville's oldest streets next door to Belleville's oldest homes, but entirely to private homes. I would call them conglomerate apartments. It is difficult to find a block on this old street with a home that today is a single family dwelling.

Because beautiful old homes are doctors' offices, dentist's offices, employment offices, insurance offices and homes containing from one to seven or more apartments in addition to the owner's quarters.

I maintain that buildings such as the one in which I live, built for the purpose for which they are used, add more to the city in beauty and in revenue than the most of the neighboring buildings.

The truly private homes seem to be built in that area surrounding the city which your correspondent refers to as appropriate for apartment construction.

Alan Reuter Likely Choice as Speaker

By DON O'HEARN

From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — Premier Davis has announced that he will nominate Alan Reuter, Waterloo South MPP, as Speaker of the new legislature.

This means that Mr. Reuter will be the Speaker.

The speakership is an elective office and conceivably his nomination could be opposed.

Invariably, however, the government's choice is accepted: Usually the opposition party leaders are consulted in advance.

And in the case of Mr. Reuter not only will it be accepted, but almost certainly it will be enthusiastically endorsed.

For he is a very popular choice, and most members opposition included, expect he will be one of Ontario's outstanding Speakers.

Mr. Speaker can have a strong influence on the quality of a legislature.

He is in charge of the House, the referee-in-chief. He is not a boxing match, a hockey game, football game or any of our other high-conflict sports.

If he is domineering or pompous the whole legislature can incline to get short-tempered and stay that way.

If he tends to favor the government he loses the respect of the opposition and it can make his life miserable and the House itself a squabble-pit.

There are a number of other ways in which he can lower the quality of the proceedings and therefore the legislature itself.

But if he is intelligent, doesn't keep too tight a rein yet maintains control, and particularly if he always treats the members as adults, he can contribute to making a House that works steadily and constructively yet also has some life.

Physically a slight man, an accountant in private life, the new Speaker is mild in manner. But he has shown an understanding of politics and of men that have brought him respect.

An MPP since 1963, before that he has been an alderman and mayor in Preston.

Now 58, he has long passed the point in politics where you panic, the mark of the professional.

He has been deputy Speaker for the last few years. In this experience his professionalism showed.

For he kept a cool, quiet hand on what, when under his control, was mostly a cheerful House, even in its fighting moods.

A brief news item in the Ontario Intelligencer recently about the development of the steam locomotive had special interest for Dr. O. A. Marshall, of this city. Dr. Marshall is the great grandson of Tom Marshall, an Englishman who assisted the inventor, Stephenson, with the construction of an early locomotive. Early locomotives covered a route of about 10 miles at a speed of about 10 miles an hour, Dr. Marshall recalls. A little later, an improved locomotive, called "The Rocket" made its appearance. "The Rocket" was used to haul passengers. It achieved a speed of 25 miles an hour, which the public deemed "reckless" in those days.

U.K. Photo Pioneers

BBC London Letter

Like all arts, films have a technique. D. W. Griffith, the American cinema pioneer in the generally-accepted sense, is most of them. But there is evidence that three essential film shots, the close-up, the tracking shot and the trick cut, were discovered by the big if primitive movie studios but in a British seaside town.

A film made by a member of the British Film Institute called "Mary Jane's Mishap" illustrates excerpts from one made back in 1903 which shows in quite in such detail that actor's tonsils are visible. The original film was called "The Big Swallow" and was produced under the joint direction of a Brighton chemist and a portrait photographer.

Other films by the same pair include tracking shots of a train entering a tunnel and trick effects like a man being run over by a steam-roller, squashed flat, and then being reinflated by a passer-by with a bicycle pump. The interesting thing about these techniques, noted a BBC reporter who saw the film, is that they were used a dozen years before the gates generally accepted for their discovery and to men as Georges Melies, the French trick photographer, and D. W. Griffith.

Cats Can Be Southpaws

BBG London Letter

Your cat's appetite, does it vary? When it disdains food, you may think your pet has been overindulged and spoiled. Not right. But a veterinary expert has a theory, based on careful study. His cats can be left or right-handed, and according to which they are, they will prefer to eat food served on that side. So a left-handed cat will eat from the dish put on its left but not one put on its right. Indeed starving a cat and then addressing a veterinary teachers and research conference, a speaker for the BBC as saying that if a left handed cat is offered a dish containing meat on its left and one with food on its right, it would first go to the nuts and bolts.

Slaying of Jordan P.M. Spotlights New Guerrilla Threat

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Middle East, already torn by profound tensions as a result of the Arab-Israeli conflict, now is in deeply apprehensive about the possible consequences of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Tell's assassination in Cairo.

If the killing is proved to be the work of assassins representing the Palestine "liberation" movement, it would constitute the first major initiative by supporters of this cause in recent months.

The Palestine Arab guerrillas are ostensibly pledged above all to overthrow the present state of Israel and restore the territorial and constitutional rights they say were once enjoyed west of the Jordan River by the thousands of refugees currently living in neighboring countries such as Jordan.

But for years the guerrillas have — by force of circumstances if not by choice—concentrated much of their military effort on a chronic struggle with the army commanded by King Hussein of Jordan, a country that has long served as their main base in the crusade against Israel.

The fight against Hussein symbolized the perpetuation of that disunity which has plagued the Arab world for centuries.

Repeatedly since the beginning of the guerrilla movement more than two decades ago, arguments have erupted in the Arab ranks, likely to be sapping the strength of the "anti-Zionist Crusade."

The bloodbath which last year climaxed the rivalry between the leftist guerrillas and what they branded as the "reactionary" forces of Hussein's regular government in Jordan was a milestone in the history of Arab disunity.

The stunning defeat inflicted by Jordan's army on the guerrillas served to plunge the irregulars into at least temporary impotence as far as their internecine struggle against Zionism was concerned.

Hussein, with the now-assassinated Wasfi Tell as a main instrument of his domestic might, seemed to have emerged triumphant from the prolonged period of virtual civil war.

Now, with dramatic suddenness, the Cairo assassination has again cast doubt on the stability of the present Jordanian political order—so the group alleged to have been involved in the murder of Tell would have the world believe.

The Black September organization, the very name of which recalls last year's murderous massacre of Arabs, is reported to have threatened the lives of the entire Jordanian royal family as retribution for the killings and deaths of guerrillas mowed down by Hussein's army in 1970.

The Tell assassination shocked the Arab world, whose leaders were gathered at the time in Cairo for a conference on future military steps against Israel.

The shooting of Tell may ultimately be found to have been a blessing in disguise if it does the hatreds dividing conservative Arab against Arab, and particularly the time he had chosen to make new declarations about the necessity for all-out war against Israel.

The Arab League announced a boycott of goods made by Jews in Palestine.

1895—Novelist Robert Louis Stevenson died.

1586—Niccolo Amati, violin maker, was born.

Adults to Receive Education Advice

Guidance teachers are going out into the community to advise adults in Northumberland and Durham counties.

With, thousands of adults now going to school to raise their educational level, the board has decided to offer an Adult Educational Counselling Service throughout the two counties.

The service is now offered at Bowmanville, Campbellford and Cobourg on a regular weekly basis from September to April. Since the end of October the service has been expanded to 10 other small centres on a short-term basis.

Three approaches to education are open to adults — night school, regular day school and correspondence courses.

But most adults have no idea of the variety of courses available to them and the ease with which they can enrol in school, even though they may have little formal education.

"Most adults don't realize they can cash in their experience and maturity for what amounts to educational credits," says a county board spokesman.

As mature students, adults can often gain entrance to courses they never guessed would be available to them.

The adult education counsellor assesses the present education of these adults seeking the service, advises about new courses, assists in planning a good educational program to meet the individuals needs, finds short cuts and gives adults a boost toward their goal.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER AN AIR CRASH?

Interviewing eyewitnesses, examining charred plane wreckages, analyzing flight data, listening to cockpit voice recordings — it's all in a day's work for members of A.A.I.D. — the Canadian government's Aircraft Accident Investigation Division. The December issue of Reader's Digest reveals how this dedicated team of investigators will go to almost any length to pinpoint the cause of an air crash. They probe 600 accidents a year . . . and they will inquire into a Tiger Moth crack-up as meticulously as a major airline disaster. Find out how Canada's air crash investigators are working to make flying safer for you — in the December Reader's Digest. Get your copy today.

'Gifts from Santa'

Mrs. William Slade, convener of tickets for the IODE "gifts from Santa" draw arranges the gifts around the Christmas tree. Tickets are being sold for the collection of gifts which includes a doll, electric blanket, cooker, watch and other articles for a family of four. Proceeds will go to the service projects of the IODE.

A Time for Children

Mrs. C. Chapman, in charge of the Christmas boutique at the Holy Rosary CWL bazaar, held on Wednesday evening, finds that her booth is popular with children. Her wares included centrepieces, wreaths and Christmas decorations, took place.

IODE Raises Funds in Many Ways

The IODE, the women's organization which aims at expressing patriotism through service to the community, the country and the world at large has many ways of raising funds for its problems. The two Belleville chapters of the I.O.D.E., St. Julien and Argyll chapters co-operate in many ways of the services to the local community.

At present, the St. Julian's chapter is organizing a unique draw to help finance its innumerable community projects. A collection of gifts called "gifts from Santa" has been purchased from local merchants and donated by members. The collection consists of gifts for the home, parents and a family of four to the value of $150 to $199.

Tickets are available from members at the East End plaza, Towers and the Quinte Mall and at four downtown stores. These gifts will be on display in Whalen's Real Estate window from December 3 to 10. The draw will be held at the tea on December 11 at the tea and sale of Christmas baking and novelties which will be convened by the chapter at the Kiwanis Centre.

Among the many projects receiving support from St. Julien's chapter are schools. Every public school room is given an IODE calender each year. Two high school graduates receive $100 bursaries each year for further education.

At citizenship courts, each new citizen is presented with an illuminated card and maple leaf pin and then entertained at tea after the ceremony.

The IODE also assists new citizens in getting settled in their new homes and in learning English.

For some years now the St. Julien chapter has sponsored the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra in the presentation of their annual concert in Belleville. Members of the chapter assist at blood donors' clinics, cancer society workrooms and in helping needy war veterans' families. Donations have been made to the Christmas gift basket project of the Central Volunteer Bureau and to the building fund of the Council House at the Tyendinaga Reserve.

St. Julien chapter sends gifts and magazines to the Fore nursing station at Hall Beach in the NW territories and has made contributions to the building of a community hall at Attawapiskat on James Bay. Members are busy all year knitting and sewing articles which are sent to provincial headquarters to be distributed in Canada through the Save the Children Fund and throughout the world by the British Save the Children Fund.

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR HAROLD RUPERT

Rupert – Robertson

Rev. John Morrison officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in St. Mark's United Church, [illegible] St. Alfreda Jean Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Robertson of Willowdale, became the bride of Arthur Harold Rupert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rupert, RR 6 Belleville. Mrs. H. Farnham provided wedding music and accompanied the soloist Mrs. Marilyn Martin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of candlelight satin with the bodice featuring a mandarin collar. A cathedral veil was caught to a head band appliqued with Austrian lace and the sweeping floor length train with matching lace. She carried a bouquet of Woburn Abbey roses and shasta daisies.

Matron of honor Mrs. Judy Mc[illegible] bridesmaids Miss Elaner Pound and Mc[illegible] Preez of the bridegroom were identically attired in moss green velvet gowns having cathedral bell sleeves. Each carried a bouquet of dried flowers in vivid autumn colors.

A reception was held at the Gilleal Hall where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a floral velvet dress the neckline and sleeves edged with pearl trim and complemented with pale pink rose corsage. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a forest green lace dress with matching sleeveless coat, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For their honeymoon around Lake Ontario, the bride chose a red knit dress with black accessories and a corsage of red and white roses and carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert will reside at RR6, Belleville.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter signed "Ill In Illinois"—from the woman who was upset by her husband's homosexuality that it was making her a non-functional, nervous wreck. I sympathize with the guy because I'm in the same spot.

Two years ago (at the age of 18) I made the mistake of telling my parents I was a homosexual. They became hysterical, begged me to change, and asked me to see a psychiatrist. I told them I was perfectly happy with my life. I was a wonderful male friend. We get along fine and I have no interest in heterosexual relationships. I am not a screaming queen. I don't go to gay bars looking for pickups. I am a productive person and very successful in my work.

I am wasting my parents' money by seeing a 'psychiatrist but I like to talk to him. I find myself becoming resentful of their involvement in my life, which is more of a problem to me than homosexuality. I can understand their disappointment, however. We are a religious family and they long for me to marry and have children. Thank you for telling "Ill In Illinois" he is by no means alone as he is because the chances of him changing are very slim. I, for one, appreciate your realistic counsel.—Gay But Adjusted

Dear G.B.A.: You've made your statement—and I made mine to "Ill In Illinois" for which I received plenty of criticism. It's O.K.F. however. I can take it as well as dish it out.

Dear Ann Landers: What does a person say to a friend who has had her nose done over? Does one mention it? I was caught by surprise the other day—and I'm sure I made a fool of myself. I just stood there speechless.

I have never read anything about this subject, Ann, and the etiquette books don't deal with it. Please advise.—New Rochelle

Dear N.R.: Miss New Nose could and should have helped you out by asking, "How do you like it?" She knew you were surprised to see the alteration and it would have been gracious of her to cushion the shock.

If the occasion should rise again (and it will, new noses are contagious—when one gal does it, it gives the other courage), simply say: "You look great."

Dear Ann: I'm a typical teenager and my parents are typical parents. They keep telling me how hard it is to bring up children these days. (There are three teens in our family). What I want to say is this: It's not only hard for them to raise us—it's hard for us to be raised by them.

I realize my parents have lived longer and experience is a great [illegible] but they don't understand that kids must have their own experiences? We want to try out our own ideas. We don't want theirs—all worked out and neatly packaged. I am different from my father. He is himself and I am me. I am not a revolutionary, but I'd like to change some things that he thinks are fine.

Every teen would like to sit down [illegible] and tell them what he thinks and why, but [illegible] open discussion. When I tried last week I was called "stupid, foolish, too young to know anything," so I won't try it again.

Maybe if my parents (and others who treat their teen-agers like morons) get this letter they will understand how it looks from the other side of the fence.—Walled Out

Dear W.O.: Thanks for "your side." It's a good one and I buy it.

Host of Children Enjoy Bazaar

More akin to a children's fun fair than to the mere staid, grown-up teas held by most women's groups at this time of the year, was the Christmas festival and bazaar organized by the CWL of Holy Rosary Church at Georges Vanier School on Wednesday evening. The event was noteworthy for the large number of children who attended it, some unaccompanied and some with their parents, thus making the occasion a family affair.

Throngs of children milled about the hall, choosing Christmas gifts from the various booths or sampling the candy and home baked goodies. A special children's room leading off the main hall was a scene of uproarious fun and excitement as the games set up there including "fishing" for gifts proved to be tremendously popular. This room was convened by Mrs. C. Pope.

The Christmas boutique convened by Mrs. C. Chapman included a number of handcrafted items such as decorations and dolls with red gowns made by the students of Georges Vanier School. Another table filled with ingenuously created handicrafts was manned by Mrs. R. Monroe. Presiding over the touch and take table, Mrs. T. Hogan invited guests to choose surprise packages for a small price.

Mrs. F. Bradshaw's candy table included candy apples and [illegible] popcorn. Home baked goodies vanished quickly from the table) convened by Mrs. M. Walters. For the 12th year in succession Mrs. F. Bedard presided over the apron table and did a brisk trade in aprons of all colors and designs.

An innovation this year was the tea room convened by Mrs. J. Richardson, assisted by Mrs. J. Gathard and Mrs. Chevrier. With tables centred by candles surrounded with holly, this proved to be a haven of peace and quiet for the many mothers tired out from the task of keeping track of their children and their purchases.

Perhaps the biggest thrill of the evening for the boys and girls was when Santa arrived in the hall and distributed candy.

The general convener of the bazaar was Mrs. Michael Post who emphasized that it was a joint effort of the whole CWL of which Mrs. Carol Guest is president.

The highlight of the hall decor was a giant poinsettia over the entrance and a Christmas tree in the centre surrounded by gift-wrapped parcels. Tickets were convened by Mrs. V. Gallant.

Family Cooking

By ALICE DENHOFF

Holiday preparations are already under way in many a household, but working on menus for holiday meals and parties doesn't eliminate the need for satisfying day-to-day meals. In many areas of this great broad land, the weather is cold and blustery, which means most cooks a dinner dishes should stick to the pike. The recipes presented here will —but they are pretty sure to please almost anywhere. They are basic, sound crunchy, main dishes. Beautiful celery comes to us from Florida right now. Here, then, is an excellent main course dish:

BRAISED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF with CELERY

3 pounds short ribs of beef, cut into 3-inch pieces
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons shortening
2 cups boiling water
6 medium white onions
5 ribs celery
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
1 tablespoon flour
2 tablespoons cold water

Trim excess fat from meat and discard. Dredge meat in flour mixed with salt. Brown on all sides in shortening in deep skillet or Dutch oven. Add water, cover and simmer two hours or until meat is almost tender. Add onions and cook 10 minutes, covered.

Cut celery into two-inch pieces and add with pepper and thyme leaves. Cover and cook 25 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Remove meat and vegetables to heated platter.

Thicken gravy with flour blended with cold water. Cook one minute. Serve gravy with meat and vegetables. Serves six to eight. A good, healthful, thrifty dish!

Mostly, our commercial soups are marvelous and come in a wide variety, but sometimes it is delightful to prepare a soup to one's very own kitchen, such as this fine:

CREAM OF CELERY SOUP

3 cups diced fresh celery
½ cup chopped onion
1½ cups water
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
4 cups chicken stock
2 cups light cream or milk
2 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Cook celery and onion in boiling, salted water 20 minutes or until very soft. Melt butter in saucepan; blend in flour. Stir in chicken stock and 1½ cups of the cream. Bring soup to a boil, stirring constantly. Add celery and onions.

Thoroughly mix egg yolks with remaining cream and gradually add to soup. Add pepper. Cook only until hot. About five to eight minutes. Do not boil. Serves six.

CELERY SAUTE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced onion
4 cups celery, diagonally sliced
½ cup chicken consomme or stock
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground marjoram
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ cup pignola nuts

Melt butter; saute onions until soft, almost transparent. Add celery and ingredients. Cover, cook over low heat about 15 minutes until celery is crisp-tender. Turn occasionally while cooking. Add pignola nuts and cook two to three minutes longer. Nice with a parsley garnish. Serves four to six with an excellent vegetable dish.

Senior Citizens Hold Bazaar

TWEED — A successful bake sale and bazaar table was held Friday, at Tweed, November 26, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian basement at 2 p.m. by the Senior Citizen's Club No. 399, Tweed. Customers were a plenty as were the goodies, such as bread, buns, tarts, pies, cake, cookies, pickles, fair loaves etc. On the bazaar were handknit mitts, attractive aprons, and other things more on the ornamental side, but all items seemed greatly in demand, and there was little left that was not disposed of.

The Tweed senior citizens boast of a very active club, members are ever eager to help and work both to enlarge their club and to bring in financial aid as well.

At the banquet a beautiful hand made single bed quilt, was donated by Mrs. Irene Genore (a member) and it was sold at the Friday's bazaar along with other items.

The amount they raised financially was most gratifying to the club members to aid in any expenses they may find it necessary to use it for.

Successful Living

Laughing at Good Manners Is Bad Manners

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: One girl tells me thanks for forgiving her books. So I say you're welcome and she laughs. What am I doing or did wrong?

My mother died when I was small and I was raised by my father who was mean and very strict. He taught us things artificially and not what the other people taught theirs.

Are there any books or anybody that I could get help from? I am a misery to myself.

Dear Isolated: You are not the clueless one; your friend is. The proper mannerly response to "Thank you" is not "Your are welcome". In this casual society of ours I expect some of the pseudo-sophisticates pick up the habit that it is just too square to graciously assure a friend of just how welcome he might be to some small service. Which is a great pity.

If you have managed to pick up good manners after being raised by a father who seemed to be setting an example of the opposite, can't let anybody change that.

You can close yourself in even more by reading some of the recommended books on manners and etiquette. I'm sending you my list.

Dear Doris: If as a young child, an individual is always told he is well behaved, could she turn into a withdrawn individual when she grows up?

Could being different from others contribute to this?

Is there any reason why I wasn't meant to be?

It was all too late that I found the one person who was right for. I live in misery.

Dear Doris, but I am [illegible] Could by my side there will be an end to it. — A Sick Person.

Dear Sick Person: The seeds of ill-matched marriage with its attendant discouragements could bring on illness — physical or mental. Or it could increase symptoms which are already there.

If you are living in misery because of a life style which carries with it no daily joys, it is normal that you are depressed. But you can be helped to find strength. This is where the skilled social worker comes into the picture. Talk it all over with one.

Dear Doris: We've been married seven months. What am I to do about having not received a promised wedding gift.

The gift was ready and I was asked to pick it up, but I was already 18 miles on my way to my new town. The lady got my address and said she'd send it. I never received it. Should I say anything to her? — Conundrum.

Dear Conundrum: Blest if I could contain myself in your position. But I prefer to think your friend has good intentions — the kind that pave the road to perdition!

Some people are positively allergic to facing the challenge of packing, wrapping, addressing and mailing a parcel even if it isn't breakable. So it gets put off. Why not write another note telling her not to go packing and mailing; and tell her a date when you will expect in her town to pick it up. This will have your name and save her from the guilt she probably feels every time she looks at your gift.

Doris keeps in contact with knowledgeable consultants in many fields — medicine, law, law, religion, home economics, to name a few. Write to her for the kind of help you need, enclosing a seven-cent-stamped, private reply.

Moores Wants Newfoundland Lt.-Governor to Oust Smallwood

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Lt.-Gov. E. John A. Harnum should use his "undoubted power" to ask for Premier Joseph Smallwood's resignation, Frank Moores, Progressive Conservative leader, said Thursday night.

Mr. Moores, in reiterating his party's claim to victory in the Oct. 30 Newfoundland election, said if Mr. Smallwood's Liberal government refused to resign the lieutenant-governor should "instruct" the premier to call the legislature into session.

But some observers here said the lieutenant-governor was unlikely to act unless it was proven that an emergency existed.

Adding further doubt about the likelihood of any move by Lt.-Gov. Harnum was the presentation of a petition to the Newfoundland Supreme Court by the Liberals, claiming that St. Barbe South, one of 21 seats taken by the Conservatives, was actually left vacant when a recount could not be completed because 185 ballots were missing.

The Liberals won 20 seats in the election.

Mr. Moores said he had informed the lieutenant-governor he was able to form a government based on his 20 confirmed seats and the support of Tom Burgeo, New Labrador Party leader returned in Labrador West.

In a 37-minute speech carried across the province by private radio and television stations and the CBC, Mr. Moores repeated earlier arguments supporting his claim of victory but added emphasis to his interpretation of the lieutenant-governor's role.

"The lieutenant-governor is appointed to deal with situations such as the one we now face.

"It is clear from the authorities that the lieutenant-governor has the power to act now to request the resignation of the government or to inform the government that the house of assembly must be called together now to resolve this situation."

He said if Lt.-Gov. Harnum did not act "our hands are tied."

Mr. Moores' argument was opposed to the Liberal view outlined by Mr. Smallwood Wednesday.

The 70-year-old premier, who plans to resign as party leader in January, said the lieutenant-governor would act only "on the advice of his ministers."

Mr. Smallwood also said his government was legally entitled to remain in office until the St. Barbe South dispute was settled, either through a by-election or a Supreme Court ruling confirming PC candidate Ed Mayo elected.

The premier declined to comment Thursday night.

Improved Docking Planned for Harbor

It could be a good winter for boating on the Bellerille waterfront.

That is, if current plans of the Belleville Harbor Commission materialize.

In recent years the commission has tried to keep pace with the growing popularity of pleasure boating in the Bay of Quinte area by overhauling docking facilities in the harbor.

This year, says Harbor Master Donald Barrett, the commission hopes to make even more space for boatsmen — an effort to meet an unanswered demand through public service facilities.

An early start on the project depends on two factors: (1) Availability of funds; (2) Bleak winter weather. The harbor must be heavily ice-encrusted before work crews can get down to business.

Thus far, the commission which answers to the Federal Dept. of Transport — has been the only group which has moved to provide such docking facilities to any large extent at a time when boating has become a prime Bay-area summer sport.

It made its first move in winter 1964. Up to that time only a scattering of small, weather-beaten docks had served boatsmen for years. Work crews drove metal pilings to support a small network of finger docks in the harbor off Victoria Park. By summer, local boatsmen had 15 more docking spaces.

The same happened in 1965 and produced 28 more spaces.

Now, says Mr. Barrett, if plans come true, the finger-dock facility will be extended even further "to accommodate 39 more boats."

Only problem at the moment, says the harbor master, is that we hope to have funds to do it.

At present, the commission is not certain what its financial position is.

Est "if we're in a position to do it we'll definately be improving facilities to provide the extra docks."

The commission has to provide all the funds to administer its jurisdiction along the waterfront. The money comes mainly from cargo revenues — in Belleville's case primarily on shipments — property-lease, incomes, inclined many of the docks.

"The demand is just unbelievable for docks," says Mr. Barrett. "But the demand has not been met."

Private enterprise, as yet, has not succeeded in filling the need — a major factor probably being that no enterprise seems to possess the necessary "deep pockets."

"There was a private enterprise across the bay that previewed to us plans for establishing a marina in the Rossmore area, and it was our understanding they were going to provide their own docking facilities," says the harbor master.

He said, however, there's been no action on the project and "there's nothing I've heard of that's going to happen in the foreseeable future", he adds.

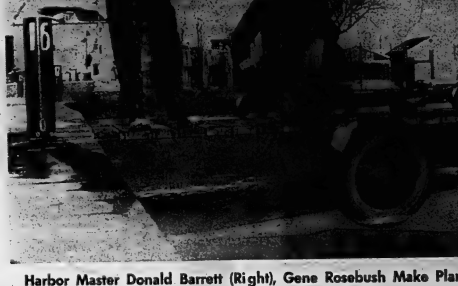
Thus, with boating at a zenith, the commission is the only source apparently interested in some positive action.

"No one that I've heard of is going to provide these accommodations," says Mr. Barrett. "And there's all kinds of demand for facilities for sailing craft, motor launches, outboard - powered boats."

In the 1971 boating season alone close to 3,000 boats rayonized through the Bay Lodge, he notes.

Since there's a fairly "limited total" of visiting craft travel through the bridge — 25 per cent of such boats were registered in the United States — this could mean 2,000 - 2,500 craft were on the Bay of Quinte during the season, the majority of them owned locally.

All of which proves the need is there.



So, if renovation funds are available, the commission will wait for winter to thicken harbor ice, then call in a drilling rig to begin work on the project.

The plans are drilled six-seven feet into the harbor bed and a heavy ice crust is necessary to safely support equipment for such work, says the harbor master.

Kingston Girl Miss Hope

Willemina Johanna Wyngaarden, 21, centre, is Miss Hope for 1972 in the Quinte-Thousand Island district of the Canadian Cancer Society. Miss Wyngaarden, second year nursing student at Kingston General Hospital, defeated Jill Marie Sopher of Belleville, left, and Carol Larvill of Brockville ,for the title. She will compete with 13 other girls for the Ontario crown in January. Her speech to an assembly of nursing students and teachers last night in Napanee dealt with the need for positive action in the fight against cancer.

Trustees to Review Kente School Complex

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County director of education John McNeil now is preparing a special report concerning the financial ability to support the proposed plan.

"Therefore until either the department of education provides the financial support required or economic conditions in Prince Edward County improve to the point where ratepayers can consider support of this or another acceptable plan the Prince Edward County Board of Education is unable to provide the necessary school accommodation to allow each county student to have the benefit of equal educational opportunity," continued the press statement.

The Prince Edward County board of education will hold its regular meeting Monday, Dec. 13.

James Plomer, vice-chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education, said today that he expects trustees "one of these days" will discuss the need for the grade 13 complex.

He predicted that the next two, or three months "should see some reaction" from board members concerning the building project.

Mr. Plomer emphasized that the proposed complex never became a dead issue, but, noted he does not know what hope exists for the project, since the department of education is not making "too much money available for building.

"The big problem is the blockade on funds from the department of education," he said.

Mr. Plomer stressed that there is "a big need for the school" and said the Mildred Corke, Massassaga and Rednerville schools, all in Ameliasburg township, might be considered sub-standard.

"And soffer or later the standard of education in Ameliasburg and the facilities available must be brought up to equal the rest of Ontario," he commented.

The vice-chairman noted a chief point for consideration is the length of time three conditions can be permitted to continue. He suggested the fire marshal possibly could declare the Massassaga school unfit for use.

Mr. Plomer observed that the report now being compiled by director of education John McNeil is prepared annually in connection with charting the growth rate.

Howard McCann Guest Speaker

PICTON (Staff) — Howard McCann RR 1, Brighton, will be the guest speaker for the annual meeting of the Prince Edward Soil and Crop Improvement Association, December 10 in Bloomfield.

Mr. McCann will discuss crop usage in livestock production and reports will be presented concerning projects completed this year.

The meeting which will open at 1.15 p.m., will be held in Bloomfield town hall.

Production Really Booming At Point Anne Cement Plant

POINT ANNE — For an operation expected to expire, Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. is showing signs of remarkably good health.

The plants total shutdown by late 1973 was confirmed by a top company official in Toronto today — denying recent local rumors the phase out would either be delayed or operation has suddenly stepped up production and is operating at full capacity for the first time in quite a while, a plant spokesman says.

Reason is the company anticipates 1973 as a good demand year for its product, says plant superintendent Robert Brennan.

"72, as far as production from Brennan.

this plant is concerned," he added.

To meet the expected demand, the company has now pressed into service its third cement-producing kiln—an installation completed in 1953, but one which has been only sporadically in use since then.

Mr. Brennan said it's been a "fair length of time" since the third kiln had to be used — although offhand he was not sure what year it was last in service.

Production was stepped up in September and the plant has increased its output by about one-third, he said.

Meanitime, the plant workforce has been increased by about a dozen men to more than 170, said the superintendent.

Plans to phase out the plant by Sept. 1973 — and replace its operation with a new complex near Bath, were revealed last January.

Recently, rumors have circulated in the Belleville area that the shutdown would be delayed until 1975, or perhaps completely abandoned, leaving Point Anne still operating indefinitely into the future.

However, such reports were flatly denied this morning from Toronto by Kenneth Bourne, vice-president and manager of the company's Ontario region.

"There's nothing to that," said Mr Bayne bluntly.

He indicated the company had no option but to close the plant by the announced date because of government action.

"We have a ministerial order regarding pollution, etcetera, and we have to close that plant down by Sept. 30, 1973, said Mr. Bayne.

"We've announced that (the new plan at Bath) will be on line by that time," he added.

Mr. Bayne said that Point Anne operation has been a staple of Belleville - area economy and the phaseout — although suspected by some since the $49 - million Bath plant was announced — came as a blow in the area.

(In January, an official estimated its annual payroll at $3 million. Since then a new work contract has been signed and Canada Cement workers remain among the best-paid in the Belleville area. Right now, under the new two - year contract hourly wage range from $3.54 for labor up to $4.44, said Mr. Brennan. Next year, the range increases to $3.80-$4.78, he said).

The company also earlier announced that some of its Point Anne work force would be retained for jobs in the highly - automated Bath operation.

Human Error May Cause Problems

OTTAWA — The computer used by the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Belleville to process claims may be the victim of human error, an MP said here this week.

Questions as to why the UIC has located its computer operations in Belleville were raised at a meeting between parliamentarians and commission officials this week.

The meeting was arranged at the instigation of Wallace Nesbitt (PC-Oxford) who has been critical of the commission's operations for the past couple of years. About a dozen MPs attended the three-hour session with the commission chairman J. M. Desroches, and others.

Mr. Nesbitt said MPs had raised the question as to why the computer was in Belleville quite some distance removed from the major industrial area of southern and south-western Ontario. He said that no answer was forthcoming to this question from the commission or its officials.

The decision to locate it there obviously was not a political one, as the riding is held by a Conservative, Lee Grills, MP Hastings, Mr. Nesbitt commented.

He said the feeling of most of the members of parliament was that the computer too often used as a scapegoat for what were human errors and incompetence on the part of some commission employees.

This is an easy thing to do as the "computer can't talk back," Mr. Nesbitt said. "I personally feel that it may not be properly programmed at times to handle the type of information required."

He said the bulk of the complaints about slow processing of insurance claims and other problems, seemed to reside in Ontario. At one time, when there were local UIC offices in most centres, MP's received few complaints a year from their constituents. In recent months some were getting as many as four a day.

Last week Mr. Grills took tens' complaints about delays in processing claims were a g among the major problems he faced as MP for the Belleville area. In one day alone last week he received four such complaints.

Mr. Desruches told the meeting that in the commission' view the present system was working quite well. But Mr Nesbitt took issue with this contention and it was finally agreed that copies of complaints received by the MP would be forwarded to the commission staff to be checked out.

Municipalities To Get Agenda

Quinte Planning Board, at their regular monthly meeting last night, agreed to forward copies of their agenda and minutes to the nine municipal clerks whose councils are members of the planning board.

It Belleville Mayor J. Russel Scott, voting for the motion said such a move would save a lot of time if all council know what is going on" at planning board.

Aces Sign Two

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston Aces of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league announced the signing Thursday of ex-professionals " Dick Cherry and Dave Gilmour.

Cherry, 34, was captain of Owensboro City Blazers of the Central Hockey League last year and was with Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League for the previous two seasons.

Gilmour, 21, is a graduate of London Knights of the OHA Junior A and played his rookie season last year with Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

The Aces, in seventh place in the eight-team senior circuit, expect to have both players in the lineup this weekend for games against Galt and Woodstock.

Teeple Counts Twice

CORNWALL (CP) — Blair McDonald scored three goals and three other Cornwall players added two each as the Royals scored a 9-4 Quebec Junior A Hockey League win over St. Jerome Alouettes Thursday.

Gerry McGregor, Dave Johnson and Gerry Teeple each added two goals for Cornwall with one of Teeple's matchers coming on a penalty shot at 19:13 of the second period.

Jacques Chiasson, Maurice Desrosiers, Louis Foley and Michel Lefebvre were the Alouettes marksmen.

Restrictions Tightened

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) — The International Ski Federation, in meeting in relation to new warnings by International Olympic Committee president Avery Brundage, tightened its anti-commercialism rules Thursday as the world's top alpine skiers prepared to open the racing season.

On the eve of a women's downhill World Cup race, federation president Marc Hodler sent word that effective immediately no trademarks will be allowed on helmets, goggles, gloves or ski garb.

The move followed new allegations by Brundage this week that "practically all" Alpine skiers fail to meet the Olympic eligibility rule.

Frank Robinson to Dodgers

Army of Baseball Trades Made

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — New York Yankees and Texas Rangers traded the first shot before the crack of dawn and by the time the smoke had cleared there was an army of playing talent swapped Thursday at the winter baseball meetings.

Such illustrious troops as Frank Robinson of Baltimore Orioles and Rich Allen of Los Angeles Dodgers were among 28 players who changed uniforms in eight trades Thursday.

Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said the Orioles were reluctant to trade Robinson previously, although his name had cropped up several times in trade talks in recent years.

"We've been hesitant," admitted Weaver, "but we felt that with our outfield depth we could afford it better now."

Weaver shipped Robinson and pitcher Pete Richert to the Dodgers in a six-player deal.

The Orioles received four relative unknowns—pitchers Doyle Alexander and Bobby D'Ecles, catcher Sergio Robles and outfielder-first baseman Royle Stillman.

The stunning trade prompted an explanation from Weaver.

"I know the names we got are not known now," said Weaver, "But those names will explain themselves in a few years.

"What we've done is make a deal to insure our future."

The Dodgers made the pitch for Robinson while parting with the force-breaking Allen, who moved to Chicago White Sox for pitcher Tommy John and infielder Steve Huntz.

This is the fourth team in four years for Allen, an outfielder-third baseman who hit 234 home runs in eight major league seasons. Personality conflicts forced his move from Philadelphia Phillies to St. Louis Cardinals in 1970.

But manager Chuck Tanner of the White Sox doesn't expect any difficulties from Allen.

"Richie is a wonderful person and a good friend as well," said Tanner.

FRANK ROBINSON

"The White Sox judge Allen on what he does on the field. I know he's going to make an more exciting next year. He's going to make our good hitters better."

The major leagues, silent Wednesday after dealing 15 players in two days Monday and Tuesday, broke loose Thursday as the Yankees and Texas made a three-man deal before the sun rose.

The Yanks acquired infielder Bernie Allen for pitchers Terry Ley and Gary Jones.

It was still early morning when the Rangers made a four-for-four deal with Cleveland Indians—trading Ley, Jones, pitcher Denny Riddleberger and outfielder Del Unser for pitchers Rich Hand and Mike Paul, forced his move from Philadelphia outfielder Roy Foster and catcher Ken Suarez.

These deals followed:

—Texas traded catcher Paul Casanova to Atlanta Braves for catcher Hal King;

—Houston Astros traded first baseman John Mayberry and infielder Dave Groegaard to Kansas City Royals for pitchers Jim York and Lance Clemons;

—Baltimore made the Robinson deal.

—Los Angeles unloaded Allen.

—Chicago White Sox traded infielder Rich McKinney to New York Yankees for pitcher Stan Bahnsen.

—Los Angeles sent catcher Tom Haller to Detroit Tigers for cash and a player to be named at a later date.

The Dodger acquisition of Robinson was the backbreaker, though. The 36-year-old slugger is one of the few men in baseball with more than 500 homers to his credit and is the only player to win the most valuable player award in both the American and National Leagues.

He trade from Cincinnati Reds to the Orioles six years ago has been the talk of baseball since because the so-called "old man" led Baltimore to two World Series victories and four American League pennants.

An MVP winner with the Reds in 1961 and with the Orioles in 1966, Robinson hit .281 for Baltimore last year. His 28 homers gave him 503 in 16 years.

Allen, 29, batted .295 with 23 home runs and 90 runs batted in for the Dodgers last year.

The White Sox gave up a pretty good pitcher in Tom John to get him. The southpaw had a 15-16 mark with Chicago last season and has won 94 games in seven major league seasons.

Bahnsen, 30, a pitcher on the New York staff, had a 14-12 record with a 3.31 earned run average last year.

McKinney, expected to fill a need at third base for the infield-hungry Yankees, hit .271 last season with eight homers and 46 RBI.

Unser, one of the league's better known outfielders, hit .255 with nine homers and 41 RBI in 1971.

Meehan Sets Example As Buffalo Captain

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writers

Assuming captaincy of a National Hockey League club can be a burden at any time. But when that club is floundering, the load is that much more difficult.

Bill Smith discovered it during the 1969-70 season when Buffalo Sabres were permanent playoff outcasts. The pressures of office forced him into an early retirement.

Young Gerry Meehan is faced with the same pressures this year at Buffalo, where the Sabres are firmly entrenched in last place in the new expanded NHL's East Division.

Meehan, named by coach Punch Imlach to replace veteran Floyd Smith earlier this season, responded to the early challenge but has been bunched for more than a month, before his score Thursday night launched Buffalo to a 3-1 win over Los Angeles Kings, tailenders in the West.

Tonight's only game has Chicago Black Hawks at Oakland against California Golden Seals.

Meehan, coming off a 24-goal season for the Montreal Canadiens, was a logical choice for Imlach, who had the 28-year-old Toronto native earlier in his career, when both were with the Leafs.

Meehan's five-wheeling, fisted-slating style was one of the few bright spots in Buffalo's dismal year. He served as an inspirational gap for the veteran-studded Sabres and up-and-coming rookies.

But the goal against Los Angeles, his sixth of the season, was his first since Oct. 30.

Goaltender Roger Crozier registered his first shutout in a Buffalo uniform, facing 31 shots including 14 in a torrid final period.

The Sabres played without veteran winger Dick Duff who announced his retirement after 16 full seasons. The Sabres were the 35-year-old Kirkland Lake, Ont., native's fifth NHL team.

He played previously under Imlach at Toronto and later had stints with New York Rangers, Montreal Canadiens and Los Angeles before moving on to Buffalo in December, 1970.

"One of the NHL's greatest hitting players," said Imlach of Duff at a news conference called Thursday to announce the retirement. The veteran left winger, at 5-foot-9 and 185 pounds, was small by physical standards for the NHL, but made up for his stature with an aggressive brand of hockey.

Imlach said Duff, who performed on six Stanley Cup champion teams—two at Toronto and four at Montreal—was at his best in the post-season action and "was one of the best playoff hockey players I ever coached."

The Flyers and Detroit traded scores by the Wings' Nick Libbett and Bill Clarke at Philadelphia in the second period.

But goalies Joe Daley, in the Detroit nets, and Philadelphia's Doug Favell, were otherwise unbeatable as an evenly-played game that saw Detroit hold a 27-18 edge in shots. Only seven minor penalties were assessed, four to the Flyers.

Sport Briefs

WINNIPEG (CP) — Annis Stukus says he has been looking for a good fight for the last couple of years and appears to have found one that "looks like something a guy can get his teeth into."

Stukus was named general manager Thursday of Winnipeg Jets of the recently-formed World Hockey Association.

"This caught me at a time when I was looking for a fight, and that's what I've got now," he said. "One thing, I'll have only one boss for the first time in my life."

The boss is Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg, owner of the franchise. Hatskin said at a news conference that Stukus will be responsible for the organization and running of the team, promotion, season tickets and public relations.

The league is scheduled to begin play in October, 1972.

Stukus, 57, served a term as general manager of Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League and coached Edmonton Eskimos and British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference.

Hatskin said at the news conference he has talked to four National Hockey League players, including one goaltender.

"The response was better than I thought it would be. . . . Don't be surprised to see a lot of good stars playing the WHA," he said.

Hatskin, a wealthy sports entrepreneur, says he expects to spend $1.75 million to get his operation under way next year.

WILL ADD SEATS

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — Mayor Stephen Juba of Winnipeg says he will ask the city's new 50-member council to guarantee a $1.5 million debenture so work can begin in January on the addition of 2,000 seats and a canopy to Winnipeg Stadium. The additions to the stadium, home of Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference, would raise the seating capacity to 27,353.

Last Minute Goal Saves Belvedere String

Belvedere Hotel staged a last minute comeback to avoid their first loss of the Quinte Hockey League season Thursday night. Bill Goodfellow's goal with only 48 seconds remaining in the game earned a 7-7 split with Skinner Construction, who had managed only one tie in their previous six outings.

Goodfellow's goal was his third of the night for the unbeaten Belvedere, who also got scores from Gerry Jones, Jack Francis, Elmer Cain and Doug Hallam.

For Skinners Doug Jodoin and Phil Meeks each fired two goals while Dennis Ray, Rick Rosebush and Dave Akey notched the others. They drew only three of the game's 11 penalties.

Central Taxi built a 5-2 lead and then held on to edge Reids Dairymen, who scored two goals in the final ten minutes to close the gap.

Paul Fleming, Kevin Allen, Wayne Brown Sr., Ted Schwager and Grant Hagerman connected for the winners. Errol Johnston and Ron Post each potted two goals in a losing effort. Each team drew two minor penalties.

A proposed exhibition game December 16 between the Belleville Quintes and the Quinte League all - stars has been cancelled. Anyone who has already purchased a ticket may obtain their refund from the seller.

Quintes Change Name

The Belleville Quintes will not play tonight (Saturday) ville as previously mentioned. Instead it will be the Belle ville Quintes Hockey Co-Op which talks to the ice against the Oaks. The name change for the Senior A club was announced this morning.

The name change was a result of the share the wealth effort initiated by the Belleville players after receiving the franchise from Ken Murphy, who had been given the right to operate the Belleville team by Bob Temple at the beginning of the season.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the team funds, no matter what size the donation, can do so at Phil Bennett Real Estate, O'Connors Jewel Box or Gerald Joyce Realty Limited. Player representative Lionel Solly cautioned that, "donations should be made at these places rather than to someone canvassing. We have not made any plans as yet for a canvassing effort."

Blair In Hospital

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars general manager Wren Blair will enter a Minneapolis hospital this weekend and will undergo surgery Monday to correct a lung infection.

Blair, 48, will be in hospital for up to 10 days and will require three to four weeks to recuperate, officials said.

Dr. Frank Sidell, his physician, said Blair had bronchiectasis of the right lung and it necessitated removal of the right middle lobe of the lung.

Dr. Sidell said the infection is "an aftermath of an attack of pneumonia he apparently suffered in his youth."

Blair said Thursday he had already started taking antibiotics.

"The doses will be increased," he said. "That's why they want me in the hospital Saturday. They (doctors) don't want to have any flu bugs or colds in me."

The general manager has suffered from the condition for several years and it was one reason why he stepped down from the Minnesota coaching job two years ago when Charlie Burns took over.

"Wren probably should have had the operation at that time," Dr. Sidell said. "But he felt there was too much work piling up for him. I think he feels that things are in good order now and it would be a good time to have the correction."

Polaris... the snowmobile for people who know snowmobiles

There are no tow trucks in the wilderness and mechanics are hard to find. When you head into the bush you must have a snowmobile you can depend on to stop... and start in an instant. It must run safely and efficiently without breaking down. This is why people who know snowmobiles are switching to Polaris. They've tried other makes and have been disappointed. Here are six good sound reasons why experienced snowmobilers are buying Polaris.

ENGINES ... many well-known snowmobiles are equipped with engines that were not initially designed for use in snowmobiles. Polaris engines are designed exclusively for Polaris snowmobiles. They are engineered to operate at relatively low cylinder temperatures in all snow conditions—which guarantees longer life and increases reliability.

CLUTCH ... This is a major weakness on many snowmobiles including some of our high-priced competitors. According to our racing competition, the Polaris Racing Clutch is easily the best in the industry. It's engineered exclusively for Polaris, built for heavy punishment and long belt life. And it's now standard on all our models.

BRAKES ... are essential to your safety, which is why Polaris was the first snowmobile company to develop hydraulic disc brakes. They are now standard on all our models because it's vital that you have stopping control in all conditions. Our "action" size grips make sure you can stop quickly and without fail, with just a gentle squeeze.

TRACK ... a rubber track with tempered steel cleats gives all Polaris snowmobiles superb traction. We will guarantee that a Polaris will outperform any other machine on the market. And it's all due to the track design.

STARTER ... the Polaris starter is one of our greatest features. Our machines will always start with just a couple of pulls (and we mean one or two!) The fact is, our starter is so good that we've stuck with the rope start mechanism. Electric starters, with all the wiring they need aren't necessary on a Polaris. And it makes it even easier for you the starter handle is conveniently placed right on the dash.

SUSPENSION ... the Polaris solid steel power-slide suspension guarantees a smooth comfortable ride on even the roughest conditions. The suspension simply glides over obstacles. This suspension is also very effective on rough terrain. As a result you can drive a Polaris safely at high speeds under all conditions. Ask your friends who drive other makes if they get the kind of ride.

WHAT'S LEFT? A host of other little exclusive things like an all steel gas tank for extra safety, stop lights on most models, an engine cut-off switch right on the handlebar (so you don't have to chase a runaway snowmobile). Of course, don't overlook appearance! Polaris looks as good as it performs. And prices range from $649.00 to $2,000.00 so there's a machine to fit your needs and your budget. So, if you want a better, more dependable snowmobile, follow the lead of other Canadians who know the facts. Go and see your Polaris dealer. A short test drive will convince you that Polaris is the machine for you.

Betting Shops Get No Help

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario government study of off-track betting was told Thursday the study will not benefit the present operators because they soon will be barred from the business.

Lawyer A. C. Finkelstein, representing a group of betting shops, said by the time the inquiry results are assessed and there won't be a single off-track operator in the province who won't have a criminal record as a bookmaker."

The two-day inquiry, before Deputy Attorney-General A. R. Dick, was set up to look into the government's proposal to get into the off-track betting business. Premier William Davis has said he would like the government operation going by the start of the thoroughbred season next spring.

The inquiry, which ended Thursday, was told by Mr. Finkelstein that the "biggest operator in the province is not here (at the hearing)."

"Could it be excuse he's appealing nine months in jail and a fine of $50,000?"

Mr. Finkelstein was representing William Nunnally, who owns shops throughout southern Ontario under the following names:

Golden Circuit Messenger Service, Deluxe Messenger Service, Eastern Messenger Service, Western Messenger Service, Easy Off-Track Betting Shops, Pari Mutuel Messenger Service and Dick's Off-Track Betting.

Mr. Nunnally said he wants to operate as a legal bookmaker rather than transmit bets to the tracks.

He said it was "very difficult to understand" the position of Ontario Jockey Club Ltd., which operates the province's major tracks and which is opposed to messenger services.

The club has complained of a loss in income (which it attributes to bets placed at the shops which never reach the track) while at the same time escorting our messengers off the track and harassing our messengers when they're there.

Lawyer Brian Dunn, representing Adrian Messenger Services and Enterprises Ltd., told the inquiry he could not give any information about the operation of Adrian's 14 shops.

The company was granted an injunction this fall stopping the Jockey club from obstructing its messengers, but its case for damages still is before the courts.

But Mr. Dunn said if the better can be assured that his money gets to the track the main requisites for off-track betting are fulfilled.

Another group, Tote Investors Ltd., called for government licensing of betting shops, which would be linked to a central computer.

It said the computer also would serve the tracks and be operated by an organization chartered for the purpose by the government.

Spokesmen for the unions representing the track employees, who are hired and paid by the day, said off-track betting should be limited if it would mean less work at the tracks.

But if it were permitted, it should be run by the tracks so the employees in the shops could be in the union bargaining group.

Croft Doesn't Want Return To Pros

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Croft of Hamilton realized a life-long ambition this year when he played in the American Basketball Association.

Now that the 6-foot-10 Canadian has been waived out of the ABA, he has no desire to return to professional basketball.

"Since I was a kid I had this dream of signing a pro contract," the 25-year-old player said Thursday night. "And I achieved that last year" when he signed with Kentucky Colonels.

Croft, who attended the University of Tennessee on a basketball scholarship, was originally drafted by Dallas in 1970.

He was traded to Kentucky before the season started but returned to Dallas in a trade. Placed on waivers before the current season started, no other teams claimed him and he returned home.

Croft was in Toronto playing for a semi-pro team, lured as Bobby Croft and his National All-Stars, against the touring Harlem Magicians.

The teams played an exhibition prior to the regularly-scheduled National Basketball Association game between Baltimore Bullets and Buffalo Braves.

Croft laughed off the publicity, admitting he hadn't even met the players before Thursday night's game. The team, actually known as the Reds, began touring with the Magicians this year after their league in the Hartford, Conn., area folded.

"If I can get my amateur standing back," said Croft, "I may try playing basketball in Europe next year. But I'm not sure about it."

Braves Rally

TORONTO (CP) — Buffalo Braves rallied in the fourth quarter on the unerring shooting of 7-foot-1 Elmore Smith to upset Baltimore Bullets 109-105 in National Basketball Association game Thursday night.

The Bullets spotted Buffalo a 10-point lead in the opening two minutes of the game then pulled into a lead they never relinquished until 9:50 was left. Then Smith spent-headed a Buffalo attack in which he scored seven in the Braves' eight-point plunge that put them ahead to stay, 89-75.

Mike Davis paced the winners with 23 points. Walt Hazzard, acting coach in the absence of ailing Coach John McCarthy, scored 22 and Smith 21.

Dill Leads Disney Tourney

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Terry Dill, leading the first round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World Open golf tournament by two strokes over Jack Nicklaus says a back injury four months ago "may be the best thing that ever happened to me."

Dill, a non-winner in 10 years on the pro tour, closed quickly for a seven-under-par 65 and the first-round lead in dark, drizzly weather Thursday.

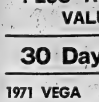
It was only the fourth start in six many months for the 6-foot-3 200, who held a one-stroke lead over fellow Texan Dave Etchebarger, alone in second with a 66 on the 6,934-yard Magnolia course at the Disney World.

Meade Desires Duel

LONDON (AP) — Richard Meade, an Olympic gold medalist whose name has been romantically linked with Princess Anne, has challenged British showjumping star Harvey Smith to a duel—with horses.

Meade threw down the gauntlet after Smith criticized the 31-year-old princess, who is European horse trial champion, as not being good enough for the Olympics.

Meade, 32, a realtor, also suggested a £500 ($1,250) bet on the contest which he said should take place on the Duke of Beaufort's estate next April.



Smith made headlines this week when he said in the Queen's daughter—voted British Sportswoman of the Year after her European triumph was "nowhere near Olympic standard."

Smith later said he had been misinterpreted and that his remarks about the princess were meant to illustrate what he considered the difference between show jumping and three-day horse trials—a combination of dressage, cross country and showjumping in which the princess excels.

Maj. Derek Allhusen, Meade's partner when they won the horse trials gold medal in the Mexico Olympics, has offered to provide Meade's horse for the duel.

Tradeau Admits Government Fails to Create Needed Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau conceded Thursday night that his government has "fallen significantly short of the mark" in creating jobs for Canadians entering the labor force, then hit back at critics who insist the nation is "in a terrible economic slump."

The prime minister cited unemployment as one of two economic problems in which Canada "lagged behind the United States this fall "in a significant way." The other was in the field of merchandise exports.

Mr. Trudeau said in a speech to the Canadian Italian Business and Professional Men's Association of Toronto that unemployment in Canada during September averaged 8.7 per cent of the labor force, compared with 5.8 per-cent in the U.S.

In merchandise exports, Canada "nevertheless did well" in experiencing a 7.7-per-cent increase from September of last year to September, 1971. He didn't quote U.S. figures.

"Canadian government economic policy has been based on the needs of Canada and has been implemented to the extent that foreign ... [illegible] ... limited," Mr. Trudeau told the business representatives of Toronto's 200-strong Italian-Canadian community.

"In only one area has it fallen significantly short of the mark — we have not been able to provide jobs for all of the large numbers of people entering the labor force in recent months."

Mr. Trudeau said the Canadian labor force is expanding at a "rate faster than that in any other industrialized country." Workers, particularly young persons, are entering the labor pool "in unprecedented numbers."

He had harsh words for "commentators" in the news media who seem to think that government should be run "in a way that avoids all hardships and lines" about the national economy.

And Mr. Trudeau offered a defence of his government's policies on the economy, employment and trade, backed up by a fat wad of statistics that he described as "the accepted signs of economic health."

The prime minister noted that industrial production in this country in August increased by 1.6 per cent, while it dropped by 1.3 per cent in the U.S. In September, when the Nixon administration placed its 10-per-cent supplementary duty on imports "giving to its own manufacturers immense advantages" over foreign competitors — including Canada, industrial prodiction here rose a modest .3 per cent and only .2 per cent south of the border.

Canada bettered the U.S. performance in housing starts, held the line on consumer prices and prices generally, and improved retail sales. On the other hand, the Americans have had the advantage of a labor force that is not that of Canada, as well as an unemployment rate traditionally below the Canadian average.

"These indicators are the accepted signs of economic health, the facts upon which economists base their diagnosis of the state of the economy and the way it will move," Mr. Trudeau said. "They are facts which make me optimistic about the Canadian economy."

The prime minister said he is "puzzled" by the availability of these statistics to the opposition parties and "every commentator" in Canada, who "have the gimmick to pay attention to "the current hiccup" economic performance in this country.

"Is there a widespread desire in Canada that government should be run in a way that permits a startling headlines?" asked Mr. Trudeau. "Is there a feeling of disappointment that Canadian governments do not choose to conduct their business and create their policies in postage-stamp colors and dramatic announcements?

"I can't believe so. There is no reluctance on the part of the federal government to make sweeping changes where those are believed necessary. There is, however, is there any inclination to substitute drama for well-considered policy."

Discussing the causes of unemployment, Mr. Trudeau said Canada will have experienced a growth rate in the labor force 39 per cent higher than that of Great Britain, West Germany and Italy combined between 1965 and 1980.

He added that while the unemployment rate increased, the number of employed increased by 21,000 in October, the largest monthly increase in the history of Canada.

"Is this evidence of economic ruination? Is this cause for pessimism? Scarcely," said Mr. Trudeau.

He told the Italian-Canadian businessmen he sensed little willingness to pay low-salaried jobs among them because "you are in a good position to judge the state of Canada's economic health."

"You may even know more about the economy than those commentators who have left the country," he added.

However, he decided to cut short his visit and return to Ottawa early today to attend a morning session of the House, where the government's unemployment insurance bill is before the House.

Earlier Thursday, about 800 persons jammed the basement hall of an Italian restaurant to attend a reception in Mr. Trudeau's honor sponsored by the Federation of Italian-Canadian Associations and Clubs.

He was presented with a federation brief that included demands for retraining older workers, a change in the federal Citizenship Act to allow 15-year-old immigrants who meet residence requirements to become citizens and ideas to further multi-culturalism across the country. Mr. Trudeau promised to study the submissions.

Today, the prime minister cancelled a visit to an education centre for new Canadians, a question-and-answer session with local Liberals, and a reception organized by the Toronto District Liberal Association.

Shoeless Job-seekers Are Called Swindlers

TORONTO (CP) — A job applicant who fails to wear shoes or bathe is a legal swindler, Controller Mel Lastman of the Metropolitan Toronto borough of North York said Thursday.

"The person doesn't want that job. He'd rather go back and collect welfare," he told the last of four public hearings of an advisory committee on group studying welfare recipients.

Mr. Lastman, a self-made millionaire who runs a chain of appliance outlets, recommended that welfare officials be given more discretionary powers to deny welfare to "con artists" who do not want to work.

"These so-called dropouts are actually living off our society as parasites," Mr. Lastman said. "They are no better than those swindlers who commit fraud by false pretences."

He said the present welfare policies entice teen-agers away from home because parents cannot compete with a system willing to pay teen-agers $115 a month to leave home.

Letting Child Pick Own Hand Is Exactly Proper Procedure

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My four-year-old daughter showed a tendency to be left-handed at about two. For a while there was a definite preference; now he uses either hand almost equally well. Probably each letter with his left hand, but has done it more.

He's going to nursery school and uses scissors, crayons, etc., and I see he shifts from one hand to the other.

If encouraged, I believe he would soon be right-handed. His parents have never done any thing one way or the other. They fear some emotional problem might develop from interference. They feel he should just use his hands as he wishes. Could you enlighten us as to the best way to handle this?—Mrs. L.F.

It's true that being forced to do something that just doesn't come naturally can cause unnecessary pressure on a child, and such pressure sometimes result in, or indeed, sometimes result in emotional turbulence.

But be sure, there are some things children need to learn, and there's no great need for trying to make a child right-handed if his brain pattern is such that he uses his left-hand better.

In a word, I'd say the parents were exactly right in this case. Ignore the whole matter. As the boy matures, a dominance for the left (or right) hand will become evident. Most likely, that will be left.

But I had a friend, a surgeon, who was ambidextrous. He could shoot a pistol, tie a knot or do an operation with equal skill with either hand.

And then there are some people who have only certain peculiarities .I know one man who all his life has done everything right-handed except two. He chops wood and deals cards left-handed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You mentioned that arteriosclerosis can be avoided if cholesterol and tryglycerides are kept under control earlier in life through exercise and diet.

What exercises are effective, and what types of food should be avoided?—Mrs. E.S.

I said that exercise and proper diet will HELP—because heredity has some say.

Anyone going to have some arteriosis (hardening of the arteries), it's part of normal aging.

The point is that you cannot prevent it, any more than you can prevent old age." Rather, do what you reasonably can to keep it within reason.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have Still's disease, though not to any serious extent, and have heard its cause quoted as everything from an inferiority complex to gonorrhoea.

I am also in the dark about the cure and progress of this ailment, complications, etc.—D.S.

Still's disease is a form of rheumatoid arthritis affecting children. Its cause is unknown. It has certain characteristics unlike those of rheumatoid arthritis, such as skin eruptions, enlarged lymph glands, and spleen, and some others.

However—and this is the optimistic aspect—it tends to subside spontaneously in about 90 per cent of patients.

Note to M.J.B.: The reason doctors "don't seem to go into detail" about the nature of vitiligo is that nobody knows the cause.

Mr. Trudeau arrived here late Thursday afternoon for a scheduled two-day meet-the-people get-together with Toronto's Italian-speaking community — the only to New York's in the U.S. leg of his tour.

However, he decided to cut short his visit and return to Ottawa early today to attend a morning session of the House, where the government's unemployment insurance bill is before the House.

Earlier Thursday, about 800 persons jammed the basement hall of an Italian restaurant to attend a reception in Mr. Trudeau's honor sponsored by the Federation of Italian-Canadian Associations and Clubs.

He was presented with a federation brief that included demands for retraining older workers, a change in the federal Citizenship Act to allow 15-year-old immigrants who meet residence requirements to become citizens and ideas to further multi-culturalism across the country. Mr. Trudeau promised to study the submissions.

Today, the prime minister cancelled a visit to an education centre for new Canadians, a question-and-answer session with local Liberals, and a reception organized by the Toronto District Liberal Association.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Saturday, December 3

Aries (March 21-April 19). The stalemate in preferential quarters should give you time to judge whether you've got sufficient interest to commit yourself already?

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Someone can be handing you a line, hoping to lull you into a complacent mood, but you're acting you with some really tough proposals. Don't commit yourself yet.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). You're not getting anywhere; savings-wise, counting nickles and dimes, you've time to request "presents to yourself" that are straining the budget.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). It can come as a surprise in one key alliance that it's not you, but the other fellow, who's so super sensitive. Peer out of your shell and see what's bugging him.

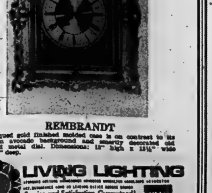
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Loved ones know that you just can't turn them down, so you may be filling the evening hours with some less than agreeable irons. Sometimes your heart's too big.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Those closest to your heart may have to hit you over the head to remind you of their fact today. You're obviously too preoccupied with outside interest to pay much attention otherwise.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Many of your competitors as well as your associates would be shocked to look inside your head and see the doubts and pessimism. Build up your self-confidence.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). It could be best seen whether opponents will nibble at the bait you've tossed into the rumor mill. Try to cover your tracks, though, so gossip isn't traced back.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You could get side-tracked shopping today and play early Santa Claus to yourself, thereby ensuring a less holiday for the folks on your list. Giving is supposed to be better.



Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It is responsible, duty-bound side of you may be respected by others, but unbending qualities aren't likely to be loved. Show the human side of yourself once in a while.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19). A few of your pet superstitions can come home to roost in a big knocking by skeptical associates. But even this tender beating won't change your basic sweetness one bit.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20). The compassionate side of you can be touched off by a sad story, possibly from a complete stranger. It's in the spirit of the season to try to help if you can.

Today's Birthday - Putting yourself first this year when all the good things start to roll in (after June) can create difficulties with partners who've earned a fair share. Don't be greedy.

Quebec Labor Seminar Favors General Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Delegates to the biennial convention of the Quebec Federation of Labor voted in workshops to approve the use of the general strike as legitimate union action, a convention organizer said Thursday.

The weekend vote, however, has no binding effect on the QFL. It was to be submitted for discussion and ratification in a general meeting today.

Fewer than half of the 826 delegates were present at the workshops when the vote was taken. A similar proportion of those who supported it added amendments that QFL headquarters must consult union locals and call an emergency general meeting before calling for a general strike.

One workshop chairman said he interpreted the resolution as simply a statement of principle which did not necessarily commit the QFL to specific general-strike action.

Delegates were also to vote today in a general meeting on whether or not to suspend the Quebec nationalist movement.

In the workshop discussion on the proposed James Bay Campean, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees' local at Hydro-Quebec in Montreal, said: "Lobbying and the other old methods that have been using for the last 50 years haven't worked."

"More powerful methods of pressure should be used to support workers' demands."

Delegate Norman Mergler said he had been repeatedly forced during the convention to come out against issues with which he agreed in principle but cause of the way they were presented.

"If this resolution is passed now, it will encourage people to think that a semi-emergency is really a full-blown emergency. But there is no such emergency now."

There was more agreement in discussion of a proposal that all jobs by QFL-affiliated unions on strike action and acceptance of contracts be agreed upon.

Another proposal, if accepted in plenary session today, will instruct that QFL supports the principle of negotiating contracts together for all workers in a given industry.

Delegates voted Thursday in plenary session to study the possibility of mass participation in a political party and if necessary to create a new party at a later date.

"The resolution does not mean that tomorrow morning the QFL will go out and support any particular party and it doesn't state any time limit," QFL President Louis Laberge told a news conference.

"I believe it was purposely worded to give us enough leeway to make the necessary decisions at the proper time."

Laberge said labor, however, delegates had voted 253 to 138 against most QFL participation in a political party and 330 to 72 against creating a new labor party.

While some spokesman have called for nationalization at the convention, others have deplored this tendency and QFL president Louis Laberge has nevely sidestepped the issue.

He told a news conference Thursday that "some of our people may be separatists."

"But as far as I am concerned, as long as Quebec is not independent, I support either an NDP government in Ottawa or a Trudeau government."

Harry Lankmen of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said in an interview some English-speaking unions in the federation "are very much perturbed that the federation seems to be heading in the direction of nationalism and unilingualism which go hand in hand."

Mr. Lankman was upset by a resolution passed in plenary session Thursday making French the working language of the QFL except in dealings with English-speaking members and ruling out the use of simultaneous translation at future conventions.

After meeting with English speaking delegates the QFL leadership agreed to resubmit the resolution on language today.

Another resolution to be debated today calls for the alliance of QFL workers with members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Quebec Workers Corp. on a minimum social and economic policy.

The three groups have a combined membership of more than 350,000.

Government Guillotine Descends on Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government guillotine dropped Thursday, assuring passage of its massive tax bill by Christmas but leaving Parliament in an uncertain mood.

The House voted 121 to 80 in favor of a motion to close committee-of-the-whole discussion next Wednesday, which would mark 44 days of scrutiny, 33 in item-by-item committee debate.

A similar time limit may be placed on third-reading debate and Commons passage of the 707-page overhaul of the tax laws may come as early as Dec. 12.

Then, while the Senate deals with the bill, the Commons will debate a further tax bill to implement income-tax cuts introduced Oct. 14 by Finance Minister E. J. Benson.

Parliament could be in session Christmas Eve, even with the time limitations, to pass the bills that are designed to come into effect Jan. 1.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen defended the foreclosure, saying all the main points of the massive bill have been debated during "eight solid weeks" of parliamentary time.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said the small pace of debate so far—in which 191 of the 707 pages have been studied—suggested it would have taken another nine months to pass the bill.

"That is too long to wait in indecision in this country on such important matters."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said tax experts were not satisfied with the bill even though the government brought in more than 130 amendments this fall.

More are to be presented before Wednesday on the taxation of cooperatives and credit unions. Those measures have been sharply criticized by MPs of all parties, despite two revisions in October.

"If this bill is passed in its present form, any one engaged in any kind of active life in this country will need a tax expert at his elbow all the time," Mr. Stanfield said.

The 121-to-80 vote found New Democrats Max Saltzman (Yukon-Mackenzie) and Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) voting with Liberals. Opposed were 98 Conservatives, 14 New Democrats and 10 Social Credit members.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 150, Conservative 72, New Democrat 23, Social Credit 13, Independent Liberal 1, Independent 2, Vacant 2.

Moving that the committee stage of the 323-item tax bill, which is four inches thick, be completed next Wednesday, Mr. MacEachen said to postpone discision would be to lend weight to criticisms that Parliament was "incapable of acting effectively and decisively."

Mr. Stanfield, setting the opposition line, said Mr. MacEachen had vastly exaggerated the time the opposition has had to study the bill. It was intricate legislation and with the fall amendments added, no one really understood it.

"Nobody really knows whether this bill is relevant to conditions that have changed substantially since last spring," he added.

Five provinces had asked postponement of its implementation and Parliament had no idea what arrangements would be worked out with provinces on estate taxes and succession duties.

"We do not know what kind of tax jungle is going to arise out of the stubborn persistence of this government in bulling ahead . . ."

NDP Leader David Lewis said another month or two was needed to deal adequately with the bill. The government was arrogant in setting a time limit.

Mr. Lewis said the bill appeared to have been deliberately designed to make it impossible for opposition members to vote without conflict on it.

Lower Citizenship Age Is Requested

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was asked Thursday by members of Toronto's Italian community to consider changes to the Citizenship Act that would allow 18-year-old immigrants who meet residence requirements to become Canadian citizens.

The recommendation was contained in a brief presented to the prime minister by the Federation of Italian-Canadian Associations and Clubs (FACI).

At present, the Citizenship Act stipulates that application for citizenship can be made only by those over 21 years of age, and the FACI brief asked that the act be altered to allow 18-year-olds to apply.

Manitoba Indians Praised

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Thursday the Indians of Manitoba are more likely to advance the cause of native people than are Indians in Alberta.

Mr. Chretien told a luncheon meeting in this Hudson Bay community he preferred the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood's brand of collaboration to the type of confrontation the Alberta Federation of Indians is employing by keeping Indian children out of schools.

Faced with confrontation, "I have no alternative but to say 'to hell with it'."

He said he preferred an Indian-government relationship based on direct contact between the band councils and the federal government without contending with "an Indian bureaucracy."

In spite of struggles and hardships, Mr. Chretien said he believes "Indians have found a new pride and they desire to build a new way of life."

Speaking to businessmen earlier, Mr. Chretien said technology in five years time will make feasible year-round arctic shipping.

He said a breakthrough in mining or oil discoveries would provide the impetus for such shipping.

Stark Elected Club President

PICTON (Staff) — At a recent directors' meeting of the Picton Golf and Country Club, Melvin Stark was elected president for the new year succeeding president Jack Stanning.

Kenneth Fisher will continue as acting secretary until a special committee names a replacement for retiring secretary Harry Holland.

New directors for 1972, chosen by secret ballot, include Roland Connelly, William Duggan, Kenneth Fisher, Ronald Graham, Herbert Seames, Ira Sharpe, Frank Slavin, Melvin Stark, Wilbur Terwilliger and George Ross.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

Tom and Sarah, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♥	Pass
1♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♦	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠AQ96 ♥A8 ♦K75 ♣KJ76
2. ♠AK96 ♥Q8 ♦A8 ♣KJ76
3. ♠AK96 ♥5 ♦AT ♣AKQ86
4. ♠AQJ75 ♥7 ♦4 ♣AKJ96
5. ♠AJ96 ♥KQT ♦4 ♣AJ86

1. Pass. Partner usually has 8 or 9 points and a balanced hand in this sequence. Game prospects are consequently poor and the only real problem is to choose the best part score contract. There is no good reason to think that a suit contract will fare better than notrump, so the proper thing to do is to pass.

2. Two notrump. If partner has his normal quota of 8 or 9 points, you can probably make game. At the same time, it is well to recognize that partner may have rebid a notrump with only 7 points, and you cater to this possibility by bidding only two notrump, which shows 17 or 18 points.

3. Three notrump. It would be wrong to bid three clubs, which would merely urge partner to bid again, and thus forcing him to do so. North will occasionally bid four clubs, and you should be unwilling to run this with a hand so promising for game.

4. Two spades. Partner had no way of knowing up to this point that the previous spade bid was based on a five-card suit. He probably showed a holding of four spades and either four, five or six clubs.

The spade rebid guarantees five spades, since it would obviously be foolish to rebid an unsupported suit with only four of them. Furthermore, it guarantees either five or six clubs, since an opening club bid with five spades and four clubs is almost inconceivable.

5. Three hearts. This is a picture bid that describes your distribution and high-card values at the same time. The diamond shortage is clearly implied, since by now you have bid three suits, and the extra high-card value becomes identified by bidding three hearts instead of two.

Change the king of hearts to the deuce and you would have a proper opening heart bid. The distributional picture would remain the same, but the high-card content would now be in the 13 to 15 point Yeaarvew: Points, almoists.

Canada and Norway Sign Agreement on Fishing

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and Norway have signed fishing and sealing agreements that have lighted.

The agreements were signed July 15 but not tabled in the Commons until Thursday.

The first agreement terminates immediately Norway's special right to fish within Canada's 12-mile East Coast territorial limit, except for the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where seasons will be limited.

Norway also will quit the gulf area, but not until the end of 1974.

The second agreement, a treaty, permits Norway to take seals off Labrador and Newfoundland as close as three miles off the Canadian shore.

Canadian and Norwegian sealers would quit the seal harvest in that area, under the direction of a joint commission that would set conservation limits.

Mr. Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) said the secret sealing treaty would permit Norway to violate Canada's territories, removing marine resources in a way that had not been permitted since the 18th century.

He said he would present a motion today to have the matter debated in the Commons or sent to the House fisheries committee.

Outside the Commons he said the agreement showed that the government had been written off Canada's marine resources and was treating East Coasters like barbarians.

Mr. Davis said the sealing agreement made legitimate what already is taking place, but assured that it would be done according to good conservation practices.

In having Norway sign a treaty with Canada permitting it to take seals as close as three miles off the Canadian shore, Canada had acquired Norway's assent to the 12-mile limit Canada claims on the coast.

Senate Economic Report Is Praised

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Eugene Forsey praised as "a masterpiece" Thursday the report of Senate finance committee on growth, employment and price stability.

He told the Senate the recent report is proof of the value of the upper chamber and its committees and said it is a tribute to the objectivity of senators on the committee who have large business interests.

Senator Forsey (L—Ontario) said everyone has been disquieted that the government's economic policy to check inflation had the "deplorable result" of producing more unemployment.

Until the finance committee's report was made Nov. 18, the general public did not know of any practicable, alternate policy of sparring the economy without increasing inflation.

"These recommendations can be of immense value to government, business and trade unions," Senator Forsey said.

He said he agrees with almost all its recommendations and mentioned especially the committee's strong stand in favor of a floating rate for the dollar on international exchanges.

He also agreed that wage and price controls would be "virtually impossible" to impose for any long periods of time "without revolutionary changes in the way we conduct our affairs."

But he criticized the report for suggesting that there should be a constant search for government activities that might be handed over to the private sector to operate.

Senator Forsey said he cannot envisage this applying to social security programs.

He was also uneasy because the proposal seemed to suggest that the government should nourish "puny" activities until they are big enough to bring in substantial profits to private enterprise.

This was exalting private enterprise "to an unfortunate degree."

U.S. Would Reduce Its UN Contribution

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government said Thursday it would like to reduce its share of the United Nations budget to about one-quarter from the present 31 per cent.

Samuel DePalma, assistant secretary of state said, "our decision to work toward this goal is a matter of principle."

U.S. officials stressed that the setting of the goal has nothing to do with the U.S. defeat in the General Assembly last month when the People's Republic of China was voted in and the Nationalist government of Taiwan expelled. The U.S. had worked hard for a two-China policy.

UN assessments are determined by a complicated formula that takes in many factors, including population, the gross national product and ability to pay.

Auto Cities' Mayors Give Brief to Pepin

OTTAWA (CP) — Mayors of automotive industry cities came away from a meeting with Trade Minister Jean Luc Pepin Thursday without any specific assurance that safeguards in the Canada-United States auto pact will not be eliminated in Washington next week.

The municipal leaders from about 15 auto parts centres, mostly in "southern Ontario, presented Mr. Pepin and Revenue Minister Herb Gray a brief outlining their concern that jobs dependent on auto production will be lost.

The brief called on the government to resist American pressures for a shifting of production to the U.S. from Canada.

"In view of this naturally self-interested approach taken by the U.S. it would seem to us to be reasonable for Canada to take an equally self-interested approach."

The U.S. has said Canada should give up the guarantee in the 1965 free-trade agreement that requires 82 per cent of cars purchased in Canada be produced here. That percentage has been exceeded since the auto pact came into force and that fact is being used by the U.S. as justification for elimination of the guarantee.

The mayors are worried that, if the safeguard is removed, American auto producers will, at the urging of the U.S. government, shift a major part of their operations south.

We call it the Life Center.
BRAND

Your Shoppers Drug Mart store has always carried a wide variety of vitamins, supplements and dietetic foods, some under our own Life brand. Now we've added to our selection of healthful items, and arranged a wide variety of these things in one, easy-to-use section of our stores. We call this section the Life Center.

More and more people are becoming conscious of nutrition, the foods they eat, and physical fitness. This increased concern has led many people to investigate Health Foods.

Health Foods are simply foods produced and processed in a manner that will retain their nutritional values. Natural fertilizers and pesticides are used in growing these foods, and no chemicals are added in their processing. And these Health Foods—from juices to cereals to cookies and puddings—are delicious as well as nutritious. That's one thing you'll find under our new Life Center sign: delicious, nutritious Health Foods.

There are many people who, because of a disease, disorder or allergy, cannot eat some foods. For instance, the diabetic must watch sugar intake carefully. For these people on restricted diets, your Shoppers Drug Mart store includes in the Life Center many dietetic foods.

You'll find foods that are wheat free, sugar free, animal fat free, foods recommended for sodium reduced diets, for carbohydrate reduced diets, and for calorie restricted diets. There are low sodium products and vegetarian foods. And there are substitute foods such as Carob products that look, smell and taste like chocolate, but contain no chocolate.

If you are on a special diet, you may find many foods in our Life Center that your diet will permit. Ask your Shoppers Drug Mart pharmacist. He'll be happy to assist you, and answer any questions.

Included in the selection of Dietetic Foods, you'll find some of the following: sugar-free products: soup mixes, natural fruit juices, rice cakes, peanut butter; salt-free products: mayonnaise, soup mixes, herb flakes and powders, snack items; fat-free products: soya beans, soup mixes, rice cakes; allergy products like wheat and gluten free cereals, bread mixes and cookies; caffeine-free coffee substitutes; chocolate and cocoa substitutes; for low cholesterol diets: cold pressed oils, soya beans, egg replacer, snacks.

Another thing you'll find in the Life Center at your nearby Shoppers Drug Mart is vitamins. You'll find the multi-vitamin type of vitamin, and single vitamins. You'll find both natural and synthetic vitamins. The choice is yours. All of them are priced as low as possible.

You'll also find Food-in-a-Tablet Concentrates. There are things like spinach, yoghurt, beets, and carrots in easy-to-take tablet form, for people who don't like or can't digest vegetables. There are herbal teas, and bonemeal and calcium in tablet form. These supplements can be used to strengthen and balance the nutritional values of the foods you eat.

First and foremost in order to give yourself and your family the benefit of proper nutrition, you must know what it's all about. That's why we've included in our Life Center a lot of easily read and understood information. The more you know, the better prepared you are to look after your own and your family's health.

That's what the new Life Center at your Shoppers Drug Mart store is all about: your Health. And it's also about getting the things you need for health at the lowest possible prices. Look for the Life Center next time you're in the store. Talk to your pharmacist about it, ask him any questions you may have. We put it there for you.

India's Army Stages Invasion of Bengal

Bangla Desh Rule Is Aim

CALCUTTA (AP) — The Indian army and air force struck into East Pakistan today and the military commander reported he meant to force the surrender of 80,000 Pakistani troops in the area and to establish an independent government of Bangla Desh.

Lt.-Gen. Jagjit Singh Aurora said Indian Hunter jets had strafed airports and airstrips, including Dacca, in a bid to knock out the Pakistani air force in East Pakistan.

He said Indian troops and tanks had advanced up to three miles across the border at Boyra, 18mi and near Agartala.

"There has been good fighting," said Aurora. "The Paks have fought well and my chaps have fought well."

The general said he was convinced at possible Chinese intervention. "I cannot afford to let my guard down," he said.

Peking has said several times that it resolutely supports the West Pakistani government and has condemned Indian incursions into Pakistan.

Aurora, a 54-year-old Sikh officer, held a press briefing he thought the morale of the Pakistani forces was good.

"From my knowledge of Yahya Khan I think they will fight to the bitter end," he said. "They know that if they don't they are finished anyway."

The general said he has been told that from now on India is at war and he has been ordered to take all necessary offensive and defensive operations.

"A soldier is always pleased to get the chance to exercise his professional skill," he said. "I should say the task I have been assigned I am capable of undertaking."

Asked if he would attempt to occupy Dacca, the East Pakistan provincial capital, Aurora replied:

"My aim is to make the Pakistani forces surrender and I should like to carry on until then."

The general believed there would be international attempts to stop the fighting before a conclusive end had been reached but he added:

"I think this time we will be given a chance to reach a decision."

"I would not say that it will mean an Indian occupation of East Pakistan. My government wants East Pakistan to have a government representative of the people and that means a government headed by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman."

Pakistan Acknowledges It Is at War With India

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuter) — Pakistan officially acknowledged it was at war with India today and a government spokesman said the army had been ordered to strike deep into India.

In a Friday night briefing in Rawalpindi a government spokesman said the armed forces which had hitherto been forbidden to cross into India.

The army had been ordered to strike as deep as possible as a result of what the spokesman termed "a massive attack on West Pakistan borders."

Quebec PC Fears Civil War Possible

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — A leading Conservative predicts civil war would follow any tough Ottawa action, similar to that during the 1970 October crisis, in the event of a Parti Quebecois victory in the next Quebec election.

Paul-G. Trepanier, vice-president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, cited remarks made by Prime Minister Trudeau in Montreal late last month when Mr. Trudeau said:

"If the population prefers to be governed by a strong hand, we can do it."

Mr. Trepanier, in a statement released Friday, says:

"If, in 1971, Rene Levesque and the Parti Quebecois obtain the majority of seats; if, at this moment, Quebec elects a government with strong measures, Quebec will become a new Bangla Desh, a Biafra, an Ulster. Montreal will become a Londonderry."

"... If the Quebec people decide to separate from Canada, a peaceful solution to the separation must be found. This is essential."

Chinese Action Unlikely

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The chances of China intervening militarily in the Indian subcontinent are considered minimal here despite Peking's close ties with Pakistan.

The main pointers against this course are China's new-look foreign policy and the political situation in Peking where Defence Minister Lin Piao and several army leaders have dropped out of sight since September.

China fought a border war with India in 1962, but Peking stressed then that it was fighting to defend Chinese territory.

Since then, India has signed a 20-year peace and co-operation treaty with the Russians, and Chinese action in the subcontinent would entail the risk of a collision with the Soviet Union, observers say.

In the last few days, Chinese press attacks on India have been less strident and abusive in a bid to knock out the Pakistani air force in East Pakistan.

In Calcutta, Gen. Aurora said Indian Hunter jets had strafed airports and airstrips in a bid to knock out the Pakistani air force in East Pakistan.

Move Helps Rebel Forces

From AP-REUTER

India launched a full-scale military invasion into East Pakistan today to help the Bengali freedom fighters drive out the Pakistani army and establish the nation of Bangla Desh.

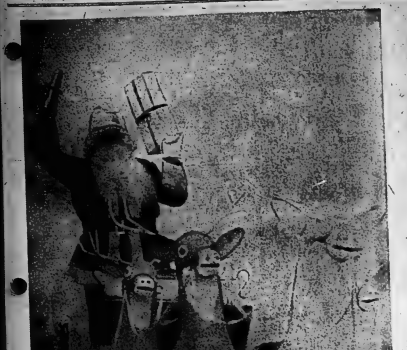
India simultaneously launched air strikes against eight strategic airfields in West Pakistan, including the three major cities of Karachi, Lahore and Rawalpindi, the capital.

Indian forces launched ground as well as air attacks 1,000 miles apart in West and East Pakistan.

India said Pakistan had declared war on India but Indian Foreign Secretary T. N. Kaul said a news conference in New Delhi that India had not yet declared war on Pakistan.

Defence Secretary K. B. Lal told the same news conference that Indian forces attacked Pakistani positions in West Pakistan at midnight Friday night in retaliation for strikes on Indian airfields Friday. The Pakistani air attacks continued through the night, but India said they had been repulsed.

India's capital, New Delhi, and six of East and West Pakistan were blacked out Friday night as a precaution against air attacks. Foreign airlines suspended flights to the two nations and domestic flights were cancelled.



Pakistan said it attacked the airfields in reprisal for Indian threats against West Pakistan soon Friday.

The Indian defence secretary would not say in which sector of the 2,400-mile India-West Pakistan border today's attack was launched, but he denied that India attacked West Pakistani positions Friday.

"No second general would start a war with ground action," he said.

India said "no holds are barred" in the East Pakistani operation, and that Indian troops have been instructed to work "in concert with the liberation forces of Bangla Desh freedom fighters." Bangla Desh, or Bengal Nation, is the name the rebels in East Pakistan have given to the province.

In Calcutta, Gen. Aurora said Indian Hunter jets had strafed airports and airstrips in a bid to knock out the Pakistani air force in East Pakistan.

Santa Finds Welcome Warmest in 17 Years

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

With a spirit warm as a glowing Yuletide log, Santa Claus heartily hailed in the Christmas spirit for Belleville today.

Brimful of bustle and cheer, Bellevillians and their Quinte neighbors reciprocated.

They staged perhaps the biggest, brightest, most glamorous welcoming parade in the 17-year-old history of the event, and formed sidelines of enthusiastic thousands — police expected up to 20,000 in the downtown area — to flank its progress.

The description is no mere hometown hyperbole.

For the first time amid all the fun things, floats, brassy bands and brave-stepping majorettes let Santa's welcoming procession, the event boasted some national celebrities: personalities like last year's Miss Dominion of Canada and Bobby Gimby; award-winning performers like the 75-piece Peterborough Krescendos marching band.

And by the way of bonus — to no one's chagrin — the weather stayed unChristmaslike.

Without a flake of snow, and with temperatures in the mid-30s, the downtown climate could scarcely be called sharp as a reindeer's antlers. Which was all to the benefit of the big parade and its spectators.

As a result, Bellevillians and sightseers from outlying communities began to arrive along the downtown parade route fairly early and eagerly.

The wait just whetted the eagerness so that by the time the parade moved off from its marshalling grounds at Wallbridge Crescent at 10 a.m., expectancy as its height.

But just to ensure interest didn't sag, an advance guard of parade characters moved along the route 20 minutes earlier distributing candy and balloons.

Police anticipated no problems. Deputy chief Harold Reid said about 20,000 people would watch the nobly wel-

Sharp Assured

U.S. Still Outward-looking

WASHINGTON (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp of Canada obtained a "clarification" of U.S. foreign policy Friday, setting the stage for discussions here next Monday between Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon.

After meeting with State Secretary William Rogers for 1½ hours—20 minutes longer than scheduled—Sharp said he was assured that the U.S. "is still outward-looking" despite recent moves that her allies regard as protectionist.

Asked about the climate for the Nixon-Trudeau talks, Sharp said there was a "greater clarification of United States policy, which was essential."

"The purposes of the U.S. are much clearer and therefore there is a better basis for talks."

Referring to the Trudeau-Nixon talks, Sharp said it "will be an important meeting. It will be an opportunity for discussions at the very highest level." However, he declined to describe the meeting as a "breakthrough."

During his meeting with Rogers, Sharp said he "raised questions not only about immediate problems—the economic measures especially—but also about the future direction of United States policy, about which there has been some concern."

Sharp's visit to Washington also included the signing of a comprehensive new extradition treaty between Canada and the U.S.—which covers aircraft hijacking among other offences—and the hanging over of a cheque for nearly $1 million to the Pan American Health Organization which Canada joined Sept. 27.

Asked if he had taken a "conciliatory" approach in his meeting with the U.S. cabinet minister, Sharp replied: "I'm not ever conciliatory with Mr. Rogers. That's not the nature of our relationship. Our talks are always very friendly."

He said both the Canadian and American ministers understand that "neither can take measures which would be of benefit to himself . . . one cannot profit at the other's expense."

He said the talks covered "various irritants in Canadian-American relations."

Firm Pact Unlikely

PM to Talk Generalities

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian government officials are playing down the chances of any firm, long-term trade agreements emerging publicly from talks in Washington Monday, between Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon.

"However, they say, agreements in principle may be reached on trade and economic issues that have been vexing relations between Ottawa and Washington.

In other words, the two leaders may place their political stamps of approval on proposed settlements worked out on some issues in talks between officials during the last month. Or they may agree on ways to break out of deadlocks on other disputes.

These issues and disputes cover trade relations in automotive products, defence material, energy resources and governmental assistance for exporters, plus a range of so-called irritants such as currency exchange, income tax, patent and copyright rules.

Indications stress that the Trudeau-Nixon talks will deal more with the generalities of future relationships than the issues that a measure of agreement on particulars may surface in the end.

That line on the eve of Monday's meetings shows a shift from the understood position earlier in the week.

Mr. Trudeau himself has spoken of his hopes for a "breakthrough" on reporting the irritants and the impression left from questions and answers inside and outside the Commons was that solutions for particular irritants might emerge.

Now, it seems, any agreement on the future of the auto trade pact—a two-year-old irritant—would be a lucky byproduct of the generalized discussions.

As for agreement on trade in energy resources—just lately taken up again between officials after a three-month suspension by Canada—that subject is unlikely to be discussed at all Monday.

Further, it is said, the basic issue of the international exchange values of the U.S. and Canadian dollars is unlikely to be raised at the Nixon-Trudeau discussion.

Excuse me, Mr. Nixon. I'm standing under your foot!

Government Considers Authority Works Plan

The authority winter works action Authority has made application for government approval for a winter works program which would provide a total of 1,400 man days of employment.

Government consideration of the application is to be given today and approval of the project is hoped for early next week.

The authority winter works program would be divided into two categories — one to provide winter employment for authority employees who normally would be laid off and another for certain contract work.

Projects to be carried out by authority employees include road development, picnic and camp area development, nature road layout and clearing, elm tree removal and sign and picnic table construction.

Contract projects would include building repair and construction of storage buildings on conservation area properties and river channel improvement in co-operation with local municipalities.

Trenton Hospital Gets Bequest of $10,000

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton Memorial Hospital became $10,000 richer this week through a bequest from the estate of the late Sherman O. Graham, a former chairman of the hospital board.

The bequest — a first in the history of the 20-year-old medical centre — left in perpetual trust to the hospital's board of governors must be used for purposes of either scientific research or care of patients.

Under terms of the will only recently probated, the principal must be invested. Interest from it will go toward projects determined by the board.

Commenting on the Graham grant Albert Ward, hospital board chairman said today Trenton Memorial is given considerable flexibility as far as what may be done with the money.

"We have already invested it at eight per cent," he stated "but have not decided exactly what should be done with it."

Mr. Ward indicated each year the board will announce the cause for which the Graham bequest will be used, suggesting the sponsorship of nurses-in-training may be appropriate.

Sherman Graham until 1963 had been owner of Trenton's Riverside Dairy. For several years afterwards he was a real estate agent here before his death in 1969.

Active in community life, Mr. Graham was a founding member of Trenton Memorial Hospital, serving as board chairman from 1953 until his death. The hospital's intensive care unit was named in his honor.

Carillon Proposed In Tower

TRENTON (Staff) — When Christmas music fills the air in downtown Trenton next year there is a good chance the sounds will be coming from the highest point on the proposed new parking garage and town offices to be built on the old post office property.

The installation and operation of a carillon in the clock tower of the former federal government premises is to be considered when uses for the vacant space in the tower are being decided, a planner for the town revealed yesterday.

On Monday night, council approved the parking authority's proposal calling for the expenditure of $220,000 on acquiring and improving municipal accommodations in the central business area. It was understood the distinctive cut stone tower is to be preserved as a historic landmark while the main part of the impressive structure disappears in the preparation of the site for construction.

Bridge St. Extension Report to be Tabled

Extension of Bridge Street West to Wallbridge - Loyalist Road will be the subject of a report to be tabled by Quinte Planning Board staff at their first meeting of 1972.

Acting on a request from the Belleville Traffic Committee, planning board was asked to report on the progress of the planned extension. Bell Canada approached city committee regarding future sites for their telephone lines. They were told a report on status of plans for Bridge Street.

Planning director Bert Kenny recalling a 1970 recommendation for the extension, said the future of the new section of road was unclear because it passed through Loyalist College property, the roadway could be designated either private lane or public thoroughfare.

Belleville Alderman Arthur Keegan, a member of the board, said "Loyalist College could never come to its full potential unless Bridge Street was extended to Wallbridge-Loyalist Road."

Quinte Planning Board chairman Jack Bush, Reeve of Sidney Township, through which the extended portion of Bridge Street would be routed, said further plans which could be considered call for construction to Alkens Road.

Mr. Kenny said there has been a "fair bit of work done on" the plans, and a comprehensive report would be tabled in January.

Surplus Likely For Loyalist

The sum is the accumulated amount expected to be left from both the 1970-71 and 1971-72 college years.

But the department of education has offered no suggestions on the disposal of the surplus, beyond indicating it cannot be spent.

Thursday the finance committee of the Loyalist board of governors asked the director of finance to prepare recommendations for the disposal of the surplus.

Suggestions include investing the money in a depreciation fund to be used to replace capital equipment, and investment in a fund with the interest to be used to buy capital equipment as the need for it becomes evident with the institution of new courses.

Parade Marshal in Car Would Rather Walk

Temporarily — and grudgingly, at first.

For Harry has been using those feet for the past 17 years to lead Belleville's annual Santa Claus parade as its parade marshal. His tall, determined figure in a sight well known to parade spectators.

This year, however, the parade committee, fearful he might slip on pavement should the weather be bad, tactfully suggested he ride in a convertible.

"They won out and I had to give in," says Harry.

However, he also scored a point of his own.

The committee suggested he share an automobile with Miss Canada.

But Harry, who has been up front alone in each parade for years, was adamant.

"It didn't appeal to me at all," he says bluntly.

So Harry won round two. He got his own convertible—to ride at the head of the parade in his traditional spot as parade marshal.

And, on second thoughts, he admits, he's just as glad the committee insisted he take a car.

However, parades aside, Harry — who did much marching in World War I — still walks "two to three miles" daily to keep fit.

His feet — which take size 10 shoes — along with the rest of him are "first rate all around" and he expects to participate in many another parade yet.

Election Monday

TWEED (Special) — Nine candidates were nominated for the four council seats in the township of Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham at the nomination meeting held in Flinton late in November. They were Arnold Miller, Edgar Bosley, Claude McArthur, Earl Blackwell, Floyd Marriastie, Mary Ann Tryon, William Head, James McDermott and Ray Bryden.

Mr. McDermott and Mr. Bryden failed to qualify within the specified time, leaving seven candidates in the running.

The election will be held Monday, Dec. 6.

Chair Benn, who has served six terms as reeve of Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham townships, and a former warden of Lennox and Addington County, was returned to office by acclamation for a three-year term at last Friday's nomination held in Flinton. Mr. Benn was unopposed in his bid for office.

Frankford Church Centennial Nears

FRANKFORD (Staff) — Trinity Anglican Church here will be 100 years old in 1976 and the count down has already started.

Rector Charles Staples and his congregation intend to have the premises shining like new well ahead of time as they pitch in and help with the big job of cleaning and redecorating the church's interior. Church women with their group president, Mrs. Carman Mikel, providing leadership take turns giving a hand to the volunteers.

The last time painters grave the inside of the historic place if worship a new look was in 1947. Then the decor was refurbished so it remained the same as the original (1907) decor in appearance.

The project called for a specialist in church decorating and, naturally, Maurice Bell of Stirling was hired. It was like a reunion with an old acquaintance, because the place was one of the first of 158 churches he's been selected to redecorate in 24 years in the business. His team of this job includes brothers Don and Howard Myers, painters, also of Stirling.

church officials and the congregation will sponsor in getting ready to mark the historic place of worship's 104th anniversary in 1976.

Centennial School Band Plans Three-day High School Tour

Beginning Monday morning, the Centennial Secondary School Concert Band will be travelling a 175-mile circuit, performing at five major high schools.

The three-day tour on the road "will give the members of the band some idea of professionalism and responsibility," said Moody Emmerson, the music teacher in charge of the outing.

The first concert to be performed will be Monday morning at Sydenham High School, some 50 miles east of Belleville.

Over the three days, five concerts will be played, each one hour in duration.

"It's a great learning experience for the musicians," said Mr. Emmerson. "They learn to all pull together and get the job done well."

Mr. Emmerson said that many of the schools they would be performing in had excellent bands of their own and this really puts the pressure on the Centennial group.

"They either produce, or they get no reception and an hour long time under those conditions," said Mr. Emmerson.

After Sydenham High School the 42-member band will pack themselves into the two buses to be used for transport, and drive another 50 miles east to Perth.

The same afternoon the band will once again perform a one-hour concert in the Perth Collegiate.

While on tour, the band will stay in a Carleton Place motel.

"We prefer that all band members stay in the same place rather than billeting," said Mr. Emmerson. "One of the most positive parts of the trip is they learn to get along with one another."

On Tuesday, performances will be given in both Smiths Falls and Carleton Place. The tour finishes up Wednesday, with another 60 mile drive to Openogo High School, west of Brockville.

"This is a really tough schedule for an amateur band," said Mr. Emmerson, who will also be a chaperone on the trip. "Even by professional standards it is a rigorous schedule."

Cost of the trip will be assumed by both a band fund floated by record sales of a cut made last year by the group, and individual members.

The music for the tour will range from high school orchestra classics, to contemporary scores, to jig band music.

Feature presentations will include flute, saxophone and trumpet specialties.

Concerts held during the year by the band provide funds for outings such as this, and a concert is to be held Thursday, Dec. 16 at 8 p.m. at the school.

Admission will be 50 cents and in the same show the junior band will perform.

Break-in At P-X

TRENTON (Staff) — Owners of P-X Furniture and Appliances on Highway 33 just outside the town limits were busy this morning tabulating a list of stolen goods following a pre-dawn break-in at the premises.

Police report thieves gained entry to the store by forcing a door at the northeast side of the building about 2 a.m. No estimate of stolen property is available.

Gimby Likes Parades

Bobby Gimby rarely looks back these days.

The reason?

He's too busy leading parades — all of them young-sters.

Bobby, who became famous as any Canadian musician could dream as the author of CA-NA-DA, today repeated his gold zipper role in Belleville's Senate Clean parade — leading 89 happily singing young-sters from Queen Mary public school.

CA-NA-DA became the nation's Centennial Year theme song in 1967 — especially in the youngster's version with Bobby leading them of course.

Since then the pattern has been sustained.

He's paraded with young-sters at Expo 70 in Osaka; he' been in Germany four times and across Canada about 30 times, he estimates.

"I suppose we could say I have done about 150 parades, he adds, "And now Belleville — from what I see this one is going to be as big as any."

His trademark is his Magic Horn — an ordinary horn stretched and bejewelled to give it that extra touch of magical glamour.

It's still the same instrument he produced for the 1967 celebrations — although now he admits it has more dents and is getting "slightly beat up".

It's an extra touch to the inimitable Gimby personality that helps get the kids on his side. Hence, you can spot a Gimby group in any crowded parade. They're with Bobby, they're happy and they show it with their voices.

Even the weather, he claims rarely stops him.

"Anytime I'm out wit chil-ren, the good Lord smiles on us and it never rains," he laughs.

In all the parades he's been in the program has only been washed out once.

"So that's a pretty good av-erage."

Patriotic theme songs did not stop with CA-NA-DA. Since that time he's written the official centennial songs for Manitoba and British Columbia.

And Belleville? The city, after all, has a centennial in 1978. Would he be interested in a song commission from the city?

"I most assuredly would," says Bobby, then quickly adds: But it would involve children.

Santa Greeted

come mat being unrolled for Santa Claus.

Better yet, fewer, if any traffic tie-ups were expected, he said.

Main reason for this is the new Dundas Street Bridge over the Moira River which permits uninterrupted flow of east-west traffic, said the deputy.

The parade, moving down Front Street to Market Square, returning along Pinnacle St. to Station Street — with its stream of color, comedy and sheer Christmas cheer drew happy responses from young-sters and oldsters alike.

There were other responses.

"This sort of parade and the work that went into it we've never had," enthused Frank Foley, chairman of the citizen-group which was the parade's organizational nucleus, as he watched the tangible results of 11 months planning stream by.

(The group held its first of a series of monthly meetings in January, then met weekly for past six weeks, shaping a parade from a collection of voluntary inspiration and labor that went into building floats, mobile exhibits and various personnel requirements.)

Mr. Foley described all the backroom effort as manned by the "beautiful quiet people".

"They just quietly get things done," he said.

But the final word on the big show came, of course at the parade's climax from the jolly gent from the North as all prepared in the first place—Santa Claus.

His reaction? What else. A ringing, jovial "Ho, Ho, Ho!"

Norma Hickey and Littlest Parade Angel Sandra Burley

Parades A Part Of Life For Beauty Contest Queen

Norma Hickey probably gets to meet Santa more than most people.

And she was in Belleville today to do just that — again.

In a way, it's all part of her glamorous appointment.

She substituted for the new Miss Dominion of Canada now in England contesting the Miss World contest.

A big part of her job is participating in all manner of social and community functions — including Santa Claus parades now and then.

This is the second time this year she's participated in a parade with the jolly old gentleman. Two weeks ago in Manitoba she helped himushey in the Christmas spirit.

Norma, a Prince Edward Island native, now is an attractive 19-year-old brunette.

And does she still believe in Santa Claus?

Getting ready to join the parade, Norma however, does not have to stop and think twice about that one.

"Of course," she smiles. "He's magic — isn't he?"

Harry: A Helping Hand from Janet Loynes

Warning by Labor

Urban Growth Must Be Planned

Urban growth, spurred by job-making industrialization may not be as beneficial as it appears, an organized labor spokesman said last night.

Eastern Ontario, including communities like Belleville, may have much at stake if such growth is left unplanned, said Larry Wagg, Canadian Labor Congress education director for Ontario.

Mr. Wagg tossed off the warnings as he prepared final touches to a weekend conference of Eastern Ontario labor councils. Helping him was Reg Loader, vice-president of the host Quinte District Labor Council.

Eastern Ontario cities will become larger and larger and "largeness has always been looked upon as a god that brings about progress," said Mr. Wagg.

But this isn't necessarily so, he says.

"I'd argue that largeness does not always bring about progress. There may be a great deal to be said, for instance, in urban planning in keeping the urban centres smaller," said Mr. Wagg.

Eastern Ontario is mainly a pattern of such centres and these could set the life styles of the future, he indicated.

Evidence of this is an outflow from the metropolitan areas, many of whose citizens are purchasing farms and cottages in Eastern Ontario to "escape the urban crush."

As a result, the region "has a great deal at stake." If its communities "fall for the old idea of progress being that if you have to do is bring in industry and you're going to grow unnecessarily" many problems could be posed.

"What we're going to have to look at in all groups and segments of society is: Does economic growth really mean social growth?

"I seriously question that it does," added Mr. Wagg.

He was not necessarily against job-making industrial settlement, but said such growth must be planned.

"If we're going to look at our future we've got to know where we are, where we're going and why we're going there — which may be the most important question."

Such problems will be scanned at the conference today & tomorrow at the Tops Motel as the CLC aims at inspiring local labor councils to participate in social problems within their own communities. Representatives of 15 councils from Ottawa to Peterborough are participating.

Counted among problems are pollution, environment-control, and the "ordinary day-to-day matters of life in a municipality."

The Quinte council has set such an example for them — supporting candidates in municipal and school board elections, making pronouncements on public issues and — recently — directly opposing the growth of anti-pollution groups in the district.

Mr. Wagg said the councils would be encouraged to coordinate their efforts with community groups working to the same ends.

However, he insisted CLC would be no grey immilence applying pressure from the background to win groups over to its own policies.

"I can assure you our labor councils are very independent in their views and they will face up to their own difficulties with their communities," he said.

Political Sparring

Prime Minister Trudeau is never at home making a set speech. It always sounds as if he is reading a book and Jane piece to a group of six-year-olds and it carries all the impact of that feather duster of Opposition leader Stanfield's earlier days. Today ironically, Mr. Stanfield seems to carry more clout while the P.M. sounds a little lack-lustre.

Anyway there was Mr. Trudeau saying that our gross national product had increased by more than that of the Americans and that jobs were being provided at a greater rate than in the United States. Statistics Canada, he said in effect, had spoken, had done its thing, and hey presto here were these encouraging signs of growth. No mention though of those who were still unemployed or what chances existed of work for them. Unhappily, the lack of warmth that critics say the Prime Minister displays in such circumstances, the concern for statistics rather than the outlining of actual measures to fight unemployment, was projecting itself.

But then, jobs do not grow on trees and nothing is served by creating false hopes. Rather, on such formal occasions it is just that Mr. Trudeau's much-vaunted charisma does not shine through. At the same time however, while the Opposition is talking about "lack of compassion" and that sort of thing, actual concrete suggestions for coping with the problem from that quarter also are conspicuous by their absence.

How much Opposition attacks — on unemployment . . . on tax reform and the like — have influenced an electorate weary of both Government and Opposition remains to be seen. With winter upon us an election will be postponed for this period at least, but after that a vote may not be long delayed. Then and then only will we know for sure what is going on in the national mind.

Hockey Survives

The Belleville Quintes are soldiering on. That is the good news of the last couple of days in the world of local hockey. Hotel owner Ken Murphy has given up ownership of the team but the team members themselves are carrying on — indeed they are busily engaged this weekend with a game against Kingston Aces today which follows last night's face-off in Oakville.

The players are continuing on a co-operative basis with any profits being divided among them at the end of the season. Administration will be in the hands of a five-man steering committee pending establishment of a permanent executive. Thus the extinction of senior hockey competition in this area has been averted and we are happy about that. On every side there is growth in the city, including increased population. We hope this will be reflected in greater support for the Quintes and stronger morale among the players. There had been talk of declining performance and faltering public support, but the Quintes now have an opportunity to make a fresh start.

President's Travels

President Nixon's upcoming parleys around the world must surely place him in the front rank of travelling presidents. But never has any U.S. president contemplated so many personal meetings with world leaders within such a short space of time. The talks will be with Prime Minister Trudeau as well as the leaders of Britain, France, W. Germany, Japan, China and Russia, and the meeting places will include Washington, Peking, Moscow, The Azores, Bermuda and San Clemente (California). And following the last of the round of visits — to Moscow — next May will be the New Hampshire primary. Anyone for a third president? Sure there is the travel, far-off places and all, but what a killing pace!

It's Different

It is still only December but the early mornings are already crisp with an exquisite mantle of frost — on the trees and on the land's surface away to the horizon. The sun plays ethereally on the mist hovering over the bay and the young people are out early awaiting the school bus. Dogs play and at times it is more like January, but it is December.

Bureaucratic Anomalies

Why Some Secrets Are Not Secrets Any More

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is huffy, his cabinet edgy and senior bureaucrats jumpy.

All because the supposedly water-tight security of the Federal Establishment is leaking secrets.

But "leaking" is hardly the word for the way red-labbed confidential information has been flowing from unidentified "sources" like water from a sieve.

The Prime Minister sees these breaches of trust as sign of decaying standards of morality in the civil service.

External Affairs Minister Sharp says the whole system of government would have to be changed if there can be no guarantee of cabinet secrecy and complete confidentiality between ministers and civil servants. Secrecy would become paper; security, hyper.

Conservative House Leader Gerald "Jed" Baldwin claims the party to plug the leaks is to de-classify every last government document that is not specifically designated — for the safety of the state and national security — officially secret.

The public hole in the whole system is that secrecy is relative, with some things more secret than others.

In the strange, strange world of the bureaucracy, information is subject to varying degrees of security unless specifically declared public.

And if it is not released officially as available as public information, it is variously tabbed — and there are the bureaucrese terms for it — "top secret," "secret," "confidential," or "restricted", etc.

The classification holds for 30 years.

And so, stacked, like books in a library, out in a windowless building in a federal enclave of suburban Ottawa are thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands of classified documents.

Enough, reveals Archives Director W. I. Smith, to pack nearly 10 miles of the feet of guarded storage space with secrets.

Every two years he supervises a screening of unnecessary or unwanted documents of various secret classification, and this bush - bush material is fed through shredders, then baled and sold to pulp and paper companies here for recycling.

But more comes in than goes out, so the build-up of stored secrets is an on-going process — a growing government "industry," requiring its own plant.

A bit kooky, what?

But that is bureaucracy.

The industry's "product" — secrets in cold storage — all comes under the Official Secrecy Act.

This Act initially was written as an anti-espionage measure, but the government long has used it for all security matters. It makes it an offence for anyone in government to give any document or information other than to "a person to whom it is in the interest of the state his duty to communicate it."

The catch is that there are literally hundreds of senior civil servants with the authority to tab documents as top secret, secret, confidential or restricted.

And the prevailing practice, said the Royal Commission on Security which investigated the situation two years ago, is to "over-classify".

There is more than the subtle difference between a "secret" — secrets in cold storage — all comes under the Official Secrecy Act.

This Act initially was written as an anti-espionage measure, but the government long has used it for all security matters. It makes it an offence for anyone in government to give any document or information other than to "a person to whom it is in the interest of the state his duty to communicate it."

And the prevailing practice, said the Royal Commission on Security which investigated the situation two years ago, is to "over-classify".

"Either a document is secret or it is not," said the Commission.

And it added that any further distinction — like "top" secret or simply secret, confidential or restricted — "must involve the quite curious concept that partly secret documents may be secret by partly reliable people."

Last time the Official Security Act was used, five-years ago, a young pressman in the Government Printing Bureau was sentenced to 30 months in Kingston Penitentiary for displaying two copies of a budget cocktail chart, classified only as confidential, which he had secretly got aged.

Before and since then, "secrets" of varying classifications have drifted out of "sources" like autumn leaves in the wind.

But when you have 10,000 cubic feet of "secrets" piled up in storage and you are daily receiving new confidences by the documentary pound, what can you expect?

Tattle-tales.

The Burden Of The Taxpayer Today

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I believe the time has come for all top salaried executives to assess just what amount they are costing the taxpayer annually; every person has a cash value as to what amount he or she is worth to their employer.

I read with deep gratitude the wonderful news that there is one Saul Shepherd, a teacher in British Columbia, at the remote city of Creston situated in the Valley of the Sonora who is a given back (mind you!) $1,000 of the salary to the school board, with a letter stating "I believe teachers are in danger of pricing themselves out of a job." Miss Dorothy Shepherd should be immortalized for her courage and fortitude toward halting the impending breakdown of our educational bulldog, which a great part can be attributed to the unbridled salary demands underlining the public image of the personal selfishness on the part of a minority group to gain all they can. Some day there will be a sign on the edifice. (Closed. Out of Funds.)

I often wonder if higher education is a necessity. I realize it is handy to have. The laws of survival are a law, as is one breathes; it is necessary to learn day by day to stimulate the brain.

George Stephenson gave us steam transportation; Guglielmo Marconi, the wireless; Thomas Edison, light, power and heat, also recording sound; Alexander Graham Bell, sound and speech over wires. The Wright brothers, flight.

The classification holds for 30 years.

And so, stacked, like books in a library, out in a windowless building in a federal enclave of suburban Ottawa are thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands of classified documents.

Because the bar had closed, the chap whose room we were in suggested that I might be down and shout my order in to a small hole in the serving board. I did this, and the drinks came up within 15 minutes with the compliments of the management."

Young People's Concern

Law Enforcement Should Have Greater Degree of Firmness

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Now that the local rash of petty thievery and vandalism has reached epidemic proportion, it seems that it is time to stop this juvenile destructive.

Minor burglaries, purse snatching, bottles strategically placed on roads, garbage bags thrown on the streets, and mail boxes overturned, is not just youthful mischief. Many are afraid to leave their homes and cars unattended. Streets are no more than a distant cousin washing from the side-lines.

Individual MPPs and individual party organization have pitched in at various elections. But the provincial organizations of large and the provincial leaders have never thrown their hats in the ring.

This could have been considered routine remarked by the unknowing, as Drew had actually had Frost in office. At the '48 convention which elected Frost, Drew was a most important influence.

What wasn't generally known was that a few days after the convention the two men had a show-down. Drew had expected he would be able to continue to party machine.

And Frost said no. He was now the boss. And the party organization was part of his fief."

There was rumblings between the two men from then on.

Frost did publicly support Diefenbaker in his '57 and '58 elections. But he didn't really give all the support he could. Also, at that point the party organization was at a low point.

With John Robarts there could hardly have been less effort behind Diefenbaker, short of disowning him.

Asgis related in James Johnston's book, The Party's Over, in the 1963 campaign Robarts actually held off his opening for the campaign for a week because the party felt he must be there. He had planned a family holiday, and he wouldn't put it off.

Robarts did publicly back Robert Stanfield in '68, but essentially it was only token effort.

The frustration for the federal people has been that the provincial machine has always been a powerhouse. While they from their Ottawa base, even in best days of office, could never build an effective organization.

The key people in the ridings are provincial. their associations were provincial, with Queen's Park the only source of patronage they got were provincial and this had been their sphere of access for a long time.

It was almost impossible to get them to help out on federal campaigns. Only their provincial captains could get them into high gear.

But if those captains now say Let's Go", the federal campaign will be doing, then a powerful election army will be going to be in the 1972 campaign Robarts actually held off his opening for the campaign for a week because the party felt he must be there. He had planned a family holiday, and he wouldn't put it off.

Eyes on Next Election

Conservatives Gather Their Forces in Ottawa

BY DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
of The Intelligencer

This Sunday night Progressive Conservatives from across Canada will be gathering in Ottawa for their three-day annual meeting. And insofar as Ontario is concerned, and coincidentally the rest of the nation, this meeting could be momentous.

For it will see the first music in a drive by Premier Davis to lead the PCs back to power in Canada.

The meeting will have a touch of history in that for the first time in many years this national gathering of Conservatives will see a full representation of provincial Ontario Tories: led by the premier himself determined, dedicated and raring to go to put his Stanfield-era party back as the government at Ottawa.

And there could be more than a touch of history, for it seems there is better than just a chance Davis can do it.

Davis gave the signal he intended to get active federally shortly after his election victory. He had Hugh Macaulay, his political chief of Staff, call the provincial ridings managers from across Ontario to a meeting in Toronto.

The managers thought they were coming to a victory binge. They weren't. Macaulay told them the purpose was to tell them they were to get into the federal election full out. And they were to start at once.

The next clue came when it was announced there was to be a dinner for the Ontario PC Association, and that Arthur Maloney, recently divorced, was to be replaced by Ross McGregor as the dinner chairman. It also was reported that Davis intended to spend the full three and a half days at the meeting and that the biggest Ontario delegation in years was expected.

The Ontario provincial party for years has been an aloof member of the Conservative family.

For some 30 years, aside from the single exception of Leslie Frost's 1957 election campaign, the provincial party has been a separate entity from the federal party.

Why such costly knowledge for the age of specialists, when all experts and specialists are trained by the manufacturers?

Last Tuesday's paper carried the headline Hastings School Board Halves Top Administrative Staff. Wonderful! We are saving $40,000 a year in economical administration. On page 2, a small space of 4" by 4", announced pay increases for top executives to the amount of several thousand dollars. We require several good Shepherds like Dorothy who will forego a raise to help stem the destiny of inflation — all trades included.

Sell Treasures to Aid Poor Says Traditionalist Cardinal

LONDON (CP) — John Cardinal Heenan, spiritual leader of Britain's six million Roman Catholics, recently startled the synod of bishops in Rome by suggesting the Vatican sell off some of its treasures to help the world's poor.

In fact Cardinal Heenan, though regarded by many progressive-minded British Catholics as a staunch traditionalist, has often proved a controversial figure in his rise to the see of Westminster. Some examples of his flair for the unexpected can be found in the first volume of his autobiography, Not The Whole Truth, published here by Hodder and Stoughton.

The cardinal, who explains his book's title by reminding readers of the discretion imposed on any priest, took the exceptional step, soon after his ordination, of visiting the Soviet Union in disguise to see for himself what conditions were like under Marxism.

This was in 1936, at the height of Stalin's reign of terror, yet Cardinal Heenan noted with an open mind that for the dedicated Communist, spiritual making of a priest, such as emerged vividly from the writings of the mystic Thomas Merton and Pope John's Journal of a Soul.

But as one reviewer observed, for a cardinal to write an autobiography is in itself a curiosity—in the past it was noted, literary-minded princes of the Catholic church have turned their pens to fiction rather than their own lives.

Describing Cardinal Heenan as "one of Britain's outstanding spiritual leaders . . . beaded and respected far outside the ranks of his own communion," Tory MP Norman St. John-Stevas, a leading Catholic intellectual, says an autobiography from such a man is "a major event."

belief was more religious than political in its intensity and that criticism of Stalin to such a man affected him much as criticism of the Pope would an equally dedicated Catholic.

Although the young priest experienced the chilling grip of Stalin's regime, he succeeded in hauled in for photographing an old beggar woman in his cassock, he nevertheless records feeling "a certain nostalgia" for Soviet life when he returned to the blaring commercialism of the West.

Cardinal Heenan, now a benevolent-featured 68, enjoyed a secure and happy childhood as the son of an Irish civil servant in Ilford, in Essex suburban then an Essex rural town but now part of the faceless sprawl of suburban London. He made up his mind to be a priest at the age of 12, though there was a time in his late teens when he was strongly drawn to marriage instead.

He records frankly his clashes with authority in the shape of bishops, but the book gives little insight into the

The present volume takes the Heenan story up to his consecration as Bishop of Leeds in 1951, giving a modest account of the notable part he played as a parish priest in wartime blitz-battered east London. St. John-Stevas says in the suburb of Manor Park the priest's heroism "became a legend in his own time."

If there is a sequel, it may cast some fresh light on the turmoil within the Catholic church in the last decade, perhaps illuminating Cardinal Heenan's thinking behind the generally conservative pronouncements he has made on the great issues like contraception which have split the spiritual subjects of Pope Paul VI.

Church Links Christ, Satan

TORONTO (CP) — The ministers of the Church of the Final Judgment have begun their mission in cities of southern Ontario but their linking of Christ and Satan puzzles many a Christian.

Wearing long black capes, black shoes and with hair flowing to their waists, they are roaming the streets of Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, Oshawa, Windsor and even Montreal.

They preach what they call the Process religion in which the devil is the central figure. Through love, Christ and Satan have resolved their conflicts and are coming together for The End, says Brother Lars, one of the Toronto-based ministers.

"The unity of Christ and Satan will bring about a new beginning, and the end of the world as we know it," he said in an interview.

The sect was founded in Britain eight years ago, and since then chapters have been established in Europe and on this continent in Boston, New Orleans, Chicago and Toronto.

Money comes from selling The Process magazine for $1.75 a copy, running The Cavern coffee house in chapter headquarters and soliciting admission to their services—$1.50 for telepathy-developing circles and 75 cents for midnight meditations.

They also hold what they call Processcomes, described in their pamphlet as "great for self-expression, great for emotional release and great fun."

They meet in Sabbath Assemblies, Saturday nights where they come into contact with "the Great Superbeings of the universe."

But our main work is helping people to reverse the pattern of negativity in their lives by reaching out to help someone in need," said Brother Lars.

The members visit the sick, help drug addicts and run a store and free kitchen for the poor.

The Experts Say

Poisoning Due To Carelessness

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — Don't let your child become a poisoning statistic this year, says the education service of the federal food and drug directorate in its publication Dispatch.

In 1969, there were more than 47,000 poisonings and accidental ingestions and contacts reported by 291 poison control centres across Canada. Children under five years of age accounted for almost 70 per cent of cases recorded.

"Where location was indicated, most of these incidents occurred in the kitchen between the hours of four and six in the evening," the publication says. "Children are hungry at this time and mothers may be unaware of what the youngsters are doing when they are busy preparing a meal.

"In the mornings, the bedroom and bathroom are areas where frequent poisonings and accidental ingestions occur because people leave medication on night tables, bureaus and vanity tops.

"During the day, while mothers are doing their household cleaning tasks, they are often interrupted by a ringing telephone or doorbell and they leave open bottles of furniture polish, drain cleaner or liquid leach where curious little children can easily find them."

Poison control centres in Canada in 1969 reported 1,090 incidents of ingestion of children's headache pills, the majority of cases involving children aged two and three.

To reduce the probability of death or serious illness from such accidents, the food and drug directorate set new regulations in March, 1970, for the packaging of children's headache tablets.

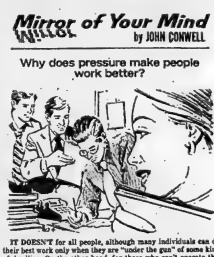
Manufacturers now are required to package this product in quantities not larger than 24 tablets of 1½-grain strength.

Thus a child could only ingest 30 grains by eating the contents of one bottle, an amount not considered likely to cause fatal consequences when eaten by a child of two or three years although the child could become quite ill.

Children often get into medicines other than headache tablets, including tranquillizers, analgesics and sleeping capsules.

"Take every precaution when you have small children in your home and ask your pharmacist to dispense prescriptions for tablets or capsules in a vial with a child-resistant closure," the article says.

"These closures require a certain amount of manual dexterity and strength which is not usually present in children up to the age of four or five years."



The best protection, however, was to keep potentially dangerous items out of reach of children, preferably in a locked storage cupboard.

The article urges parents to make sure that products used outside such as gasoline, pesticides and fertilizers are also kept away from children.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Why does pressure make people work better?

IT DOESN'T for all people, although many individuals can do their best work only when they are "under the gun" of some kind of deadline. On the other hand, for those who can't operate this way, pressure serves as a deterrent. Someone who can do his best just when he is under pressure, however, probably has a problem in getting started, and stress is the only force that will help him overcome his personal inertia.

Will a wife regret marrying an egotist?

NOT USUALLY, if she knew her husband was an egotist before she married him. Actually, his characteristics might be what attracted him to her. Then, too, if the egotist and his wife truly love each other, she could learn to adjust to his ways. Sometimes, too, when a wife with flagging self-confidence marries an egotist, his ebullient attitude might be just what she needs to bolster her self-assurance.

Must parents be right all the time?

NO; nor should a mother and father who know they cannot be right all the time act as if they are always correct. Parents, concerned with more than the immediate moment for their young-ster, should try to establish a "trust fund of trust." When the boy or girl grows up, he or she should be able to say proudly, "My folks may not have been right all the time, but they always knew what they were doing."

Ann Landers

Plain Girl Is Tired Of Playing Role of Beauty

Dear Ann Landers: I am driving 30 miles to mail this letter. I'd die if anyone knew about my problem.

I have been married seven months and my husband has never seen me without makeup. I do my face twice a day—once at noon and again before I go to bed at night. It takes me about 40 minutes—including hair combing. I just learned that I am pregnant and I'm very excited about it. I realize, however, that with a brand new baby I won't have so much time. Also I admit I am getting awfully tired playing the role of the 24-hour beauty. It's darned exhausting.

My problem is, Ann, I look like a totally different person with my makeup off. I hate for my husband to see how plain I really am. Do you have any advice for me?—Afraid To Unmask

Dear Afraid: Something is drastically wrong with your marriage if you are so dependent on cosmetics that you are afraid to face your husband without it. Also, something is drastically wrong with your makeup if it makes you look like a different person.

I hope the new baby will give you the confidence you need to remove your makeup at night and leave it off until or unless you are going somewhere. Also, I suggest that you get professional counseling on the use of makeup. Cosmetics should help to accentuate your best features instead of making you look like a different person.

Dear Ann Landers: We've been married 15 years and have four children. The problem is my parents. They have been coming to our house every Sunday for the last two years when we moved to this neighborhood. My mother takes over the conversation and always manages to get into an argument with my husband. He told me the other day that is a side of it can't blame him.

Gerry works hard six days a week and Sunday is the only day he can relax and enjoy his family. Is it fair that we have to have my folks here every single Sunday? How can I get them across without driving them away forever?—Temple, Texas Wife

Dear Temp: Make plans now for next Sunday. Inform your mother that you'll be away two weeks from that—the same. Two weeks after that get on a new footing. Don't let your mother etc." Your Sundays will never be your own unless you break the cycle. It's a mistake to let anyone assume they have a weekly invitation, unless you really want them that often. Yeah—this goes for parents, too.

Dear Ann Landers: O.K. So a wife is supposed to forgive her husband who cheats in Vietnam. But what does he say to the man's needs being greater than a woman's, you know better. The question is this: If she does likewise, is she to be forgiven too? A yes or a no will do.—The Scarlet Lester

Dear Scarlet: The answer is yes. Thanks for making my Saturday work easy.

Confidential to Marijuana Beat: Sorry, you're wrong. Gene Krupa, one of the greatest drummers of all time said pot did nothing for his musical ability—it only loused him up.

UCW MEETINGS

TRINITY UCW, MADOC

The November meeting of Trinity UCW Hall W was held at the home of Mrs. George White.

Miss A. Adams and Mrs. D. Carman were in charge of the program. The theme of the worship service was hunger. All the members took part in singing, followed by each having a short reading pertaining to the theme. Two Scripture readings, prayer and a hymn closed this portion of the meeting.

The program was a review of the study book. Members were divided into four groups and given paper and other articles to make large posters of the following countries that had been studied earlier — Brazil, Jamaica, Argentine, and Trinidad. These were judged and a prize given to the Brazil group, who had the most material.

A business period followed when plans were made for a tea and bazaar to be held in the near future. Conveners were chosen for the tea table and other tables where articles would be sold.

A committee is to meet later to finalize the plans.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Burris, Mrs. A. Burris thanked Mrs. White and her assistants at the close of the meeting.

Church Groups

WESLEYAN WMS

The November meeting of the Belleville Women's Missionary Society convened in the church parlor under the direction of vice-president Joyce LeRoy, due to the illness of president Nellie Greenwood.

Singing was led by Mrs. Helen Spearman and Mrs. Lena Ellis read the devotional.

The Caribbean area was an interesting study brought by Mrs. Jean Lockie. In addition to the Islands of Cuba, Puerto Rico and Haiti; there on 11 smaller islands, worked out along of 273 National Pesters. Mexico was also mentioned where one veteran missionary couple have labored for 56 years and were recipients of many honors on the anniversary of that occasion. There is a Bible School for the training of national pastors, who now number 70.

A time of prayer was held with several participating, remembering the ill president Nellie Greenwood and secretary Hazel Blakely, also the situation in the Philippines where political unrest and harrassment has meant the closing of seven stronger Wesleyan churches.

The members were reminded to bring their "goodies" for the Christmas dinner for shut-ins to the December meeting. Christmas gifts for two families were discussed. Correspondence secretary Nora Elliott was directed to contact return missionary Miss Bertha Major for a future meeting and also Mrs. Legate for a seminar from the Cancer Society.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Joyce Cooney and Mrs. Helen Spearman.

READ CWL

A talk on cancer was given at the November meeting of Read CWL which followed Mass. The meeting was opened by Father Ferguson.

President Mrs. J. Jordan presided over the business period when reports were given by the various committee chairmen. Members were reminded to send letters to project 1,000 at 77 McLeod St., Ottawa. The date for the Christmas party was set for Dec. 15 and will be convened by Mrs. J. Hanley. A Christmas dance is being sponsored in the Good Pasta Hall on Christmas night.

For the program, the guest speaker was Mrs. E. Logan, Belleville, a member of the Cancer Society who explained the work of the society and told how they help out the needy who need care by supplying dressings, home visiting, nursing care and home education. She emphasized that cancer can be beaten if it is detected in time, and stressed the importance of yearly check-ups for this reason. Two films were shown on cancer.

Mrs. Logan was introduced by Mrs. A. Callaghan and thanked by Mrs. J. Jordan on behalf of those present.

Male Models in Feminine Styles Can Make A Party Hilarious

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Once I heard about a fashion show using men for models with very ridiculous costumes — mostly female. — Looking For Party Ideas

Dear Looking: This could be a really hilarious event. Male models could be dressed in the latest female styles. With the trend to hot pants, knee long side slits and much-fussed-over hair, the sky is the limit.

It does something to human spirits (without the artificial type of stimulant) when we dress up. Sparks those juvenile delights in masquerading. We never lose them.

Dear Doris: I am 56 years old and had a heart attack two years ago. What bothers me is this: Since that happened my sex life has slipped from two or three times a week to about once every two weeks.

What I would like to know is this: Is there any medicine or drug on the market that a man could take to improve an libi? — Alarmed

Dear Alarmed: At 56 I expect you don't run around the block quite as fast as you used to — nor heave a heavy parcel without groaning a little. How many flights of stairs do you have to climb before getting short of breath?

Put the same restrictions upon yourself, in sexual activity as you do in other things — and you will live longer. Your physician is the one who can tell you just how far you can go.

There are drugs which improve heart behavior, but my medical consultant does not prescribe them. Sex is any one drug, directly affecting the sexual function. This, too, is something you should discuss with the physician who knows your particular state of health.

Dear Doris: I have very bad nerves and every time I get nervous I shake all over. I am 15, and sometimes when I take a bad spell I lose my mind and attack the one that has brought on this spell, and one of these persons is my mother.

My mother drinks quite a bit and is always nagging at me, and this bugs me, and I lose my temper and snap at her. Then she always finds some way to back at me. If she doesn't grab me by the hair, she brings up my father's name, and blames me for her mistake.

My mother and father have been separated since I was a four. I see him about once a year. Believe it or not I do love him. When we were living with him we were in luxury, but now I'm living in hell.

My older sister brought me up, since I was seven. My mother was gone for bed stints, and my sister would cook, scrub, and take care of the house. My sister moved to Quebec two months ago, and ever since then I have no one to turn to for help. My family doctor told me I should live with my mother. After Christmas I think I am going to leave my sister — that is if I get the money. I need about $100.

What to call school because of these spells. — Badly Needing Help

Dear Badly: Both you and your mother need the kind of help which will stop you from taking out on each other what the world is doing to you.

Your sister gave you the love you needed — but would it give the spark, the rebellion, the loneliness, if you were with her?

A trained social worker — and you have excellent ones right where you are — will help you sort things out and figure out the right action to take.

Pay a visit today to the Family Service Bureau of Services of Hastings County, 211 Front Street, Belleville.

There is helpful Canadian literature which may shed light on your problem. Ask Doris about it.

SLICK TRICK

If a new home seems like a fish bowl before curtains can be hung, cover window glass with wax paper, taped to the frame. Light comes through, and the windows can be opened and closed.

Indrgt — proof to social ...IRS

TWEED — Mr. R. J. Lesperance, district representative of CNIB Ivor Quinte, St. Lawrence Hall, Kingston, made a visit to Tweed-Hungerford Senior School recently, in his presentation to grades 6, 7 and 8. Mr. Lesperance described the history and the work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

When he was finished he showed a very interesting film on sight and saving starring Jimminy Cricket, put out by Walt Disney Productions.

After the film he answered questions asked by the students about blindness in detail.

Mr. Lesperance left pamphlets for the use of the school.

It's all done in complete confidence–between you and us–in the privacy of your home, and we pledge no salesman will call on you now or ever!

We at Laurier Life believe in making it easier for you to get the basic, cash-value life insurance you need and deserve. We also believe you should pay just one level premium for as long as you need and want the protection. That's why we offer this fine protection for only $4.95 a month–regardless of your age, health or occupation. It's an ideal amount because it's so easy to afford.

Simply complete your Enrollment Form and send with 25¢ for your first month–before the deadline date–and we guarantee to issue you the cash-value life insurance listed for your age.

Growth Life offers you all three of these popular features:

Your family gets immediate protection–every last cent–should fatal accident strike you at home, on the job or anywhere in the world–24 hours a day! That is the feature that covers you for the greatest threat to your family's well-being–an accident when they're completely dependent on you for all their wants and needs!

Your family security is protected if you're not here–protection against death due to all natural causes–"lump benefits" that grow to full protection in three short years! Your coverage increases each year, growing from the first year through the second and third–in full protection for accidents or natural causes every year thereafter for the rest of your life!

You get cash values to use any way you wish or to borrow for emergencies! Once your cash values begin to grow, you have a personal, systematic savings reserve that increases year after year and earns money for you, too! It's like a savings account that builds a "nest egg" you can borrow on or even "cash in" any time you wish!

And it's an emergency fund that's always there when you need cash for any of a hundred and one crises which require ready cash. The money is available to you promptly–without question–at less than today's inflated interest rates!

Growth Life is a realistic, sensible blend of these most-sought-after life insurance features and it's priced so low you can't afford to be without it–particularly if you're one of the thousands of Canadians over 50 who could never get this kind of protection before–at any price!

EMERGENCY CASH BOX

When you need to borrow, cash savings can come to your rescue in emergencies like these:

- UNEXPECTED ILLNESS
- SUDDEN UNEMPLOYMENT
- AN ACCIDENT THAT STRIKES WITHOUT WARNING
- EMERGENCY REPAIRS
- BURGLARIES
- TAXES

Prominent Canadians agree...

"Laurier Life clients benefit when they deal directly with this Canadian company. First, low rates are possible since no medical examination is required and no one will call. Second, premium rates are uniform for all classes of risk. Finally, it is an economic way to increase one's insurance protection from time to time."
–The Honorable Dr. Orville H. Phillips, P.C., D.D.S., Member of the Canadian Senate.

"In offering low-cost life and health insurance by mail, you are rendering a valuable service to thousands of people who have no other opportunity to avail themselves of such protection. It is reassuring to know that policyowners insured by Laurier Life and its affiliates have received more than $10,000,000.00 in claim benefits in the last five years."
–Hon. Lt. Col. J. M. Roy.

Why you need the protection of Growth Life.

You've seen how inflation has taken away a large chunk of your dollar's buying power! Your pension, your savings, your investments, even your life insurance, simply won't do what you intended them to when you first made your plans.

Consider how fast prices have risen in the past five years and you'll see just how little your money will buy today–then consider how much more expensive it will be five, ten, fifteen years from now! That's why you're probably dangerously underinsured at this very moment! That's why you need the extra protection that Growth Life gives you!

Now, extra protection you need at payments you can afford!

To help you afford this extra protection you need, you pay only $4.95 a month–regardless of your age, health or occupation. This gives you the security you want... plus savings that grow as years go by, building a cash reserve to draw on in emergencies.

What's more, if you feel you need even more insurance, Growth Life offers two, three, even four times more cash-value life insurance than is listed! (See chart at upper right for all the details!)

Why your payments are lower than you'd expect.

Doing business directly with you, enrolling thousands of people every year, reduces our overhead costs, lowers our payroll, underwriting and policy issue costs. Without salesmen, interviews, investigations, or examinations, our friendly, direct way of doing business reduces "sales costs"–one of the largest items of expense for all insurance companies–so we can give you the valuable protection you need at a payment you can afford! Even the through our "builder benefit" feature we're able to eliminate excessive early claims costs which would otherwise push up your rates.

We can never cancel your policy!

As long as you pay your premiums we can never cancel your policy. In fact, after your policy has been in force 2 years, it is completely incontestable, guaranteeing you life-long protection. You, of course, can cancel at any time!

Your plan is backed by a Canadian company you can trust...

In addition to all the remarkable benefits and the low cost of this plan, Growth Life offers you something else just as important: the backing of a great company you can trust!

Laurier Life Insurance Company is an established, financially sound, federally and provincially licensed insurance company, managed by highly respected, knowledgeable executives with many long years of insurance experience. Seniors Help Promote Co-Op With Win Over Oaks

OAKVILLE (Special) — They may be new at the promoting game, but the Belleville Quintes Hockey Co-Op came up with the best public relations job possible by handing the Oakville Oaks a 6-3 defeat.

The team which almost folded Tuesday because of indifferent play and had plummeted to sixth place in the league standings by losing eight of their last 10 games, came up with an inspired effort in Oakville.

Earlier in the week one of the Quintes had revealed that "I just wish we didn't have to play Oakville the first game back. They're probably the best team at home in the league." If so, it wasn't apparent last night as the Quintes strafed Oakville goalie Claude Vaillefeer with 46 shots while Steve Rexe was taken on only 29 times.

"It was truly a team effort," noted Belleville coach Gene Poirier. "That's the best we've since beating Galt 8-3 at the first of the year."

Everything was clicking for the Quintes last night including two shorthanded goals and an assist by goalie Steve Rexe.

The Oaks jumped off to a quick 1-0 lead when Chuck Kelly counted after 56 seconds of play but Doug Senior's unassisted marker squared accounts six minutes later. The goal came with Al Ferguson sitting out a hooking penalty.

At the 15.01 mark Senior was fingered for holding the puck and just 49 seconds later Lorne O'Donnell sent Belleville ahead 2-1. Linen a t t

GEORGE GODSON

LORNE O'DONNELL

Godson counted his second goal of the game in the middle period with left winger Ray Johnston making the count 4-1 in Belleville's favor. During the middle 20 minutes the visitors pumped 13 shots at Vaillefeer.

In the third period, Donc MacDonald and Alex "Oak" O'Brien counted for Oakville to reduce the lead to 5-3 before Wayne McConnell put the game virtually out of reach with a score at 15.54.

John McConnell saw limited action in the third period when Ralph Plane was sidelined with a minor injury, picking up an assist, on brother Wayne's goal.

STEVE REXE

Poirier singled out his entire defensive corps of Dave Jones, Doug Potts, Lloyd Bolly, Greg Marchen and Mike Rexe for special mention.

Tonight the Quintes will meet the Kingston Aces in an 8 p.m. game at the Belleville Memorial rena.

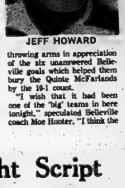
Peter Ackerman Gets Right In The Action During Belleville's 10-1 Win

Fairways Delight Young Fans With 10-1 Pony Night Win



By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

'Twas the night of the pony
And all through the rink
The kiddies were screaming
So loudly you'd think
A bunch of Comanches
Were set on the loose;
They were jamming the building
And making good use
Of programs and spitballs
And boxes and toques,
While kicking and biking
And flailing their dukes.
They've come for a pony
But they'll take a bike
And watching them
One feels a little bit like
That ancient and honored
Comedian lad,
Who quoth,
"People who hate dogs and Kids ain't all bad."

With apologies to parents and poetry lovers, that's more or less how any adult escapees from the annual Belleville Junior "B" Pony Night felt about rubbing shoes (to say nothing of shins, feet and ice cream cones) with 2,500 bundles of mayhem who seemed intent on proving that kids do the darndest things.

Actually, Friday night's gigantic turnout at the Belleville Memorial Arena was remarkably well behaved when you consider the fact that a gathering of approximately 2,500-3,000 youngsters aren't about to sit idly on their hands while the home town Belleville Fairways skate off with a 10-1 victory.

In the final period the Fairways really gave the kids a chance to unlimber their throwing arms in appreciation of the six unanswered Belleville goals which helped them bury the Quinte McFarlands by the 10-1 count.

JEFF HOWARD

"I wish that it had been one of the 'big' teams in here tonight," speculated Belleville coach Moe Hunter, "I think the crowd really helped get us up for the start of this one."

Certainly Jeff Howard, Mark Woodward and Tim Yohn appeared to be up for the contest. The line collected four goals and six assists between them for the night.

Howard was the top triggerman for the winners rapping in three goals while Woodward connected for a goal and three assists and Yohn picked up two helpers. Brian Counter connected twice with single scores going to Rod Palmer, Cliff Jantzach, Dave Hopwood and Dave Smith getting singles. John Mulvihill was the busiest playmaker on the ice collecting no less than five assists.

The score was a good indication of the play as the Fairways held a 56-22 advantage in shots on goal. About the only bright spots for the Picton visitors was the play of goalies Greg Dafoe and Peter Pettingill. Dafoe worked the first period in which his team was outshot 22-4, while Pettingill was almost equally as busy over the final two frames. At the other end of the rink Bob Harriso turned aside 21 drives with Paul Pettingill's second period shot the only one to elude him.

Veteran right winger Terry Meagher made his first appearance of the year for Fairways before retiring midway through the game with ailing ankles. The third year player's skating showed the effects of only one hour of practice time this season, but he still managed several good scoring chances.

The happiest youngster in the rink had to be Reg Trafford who won the Shetland pony in a draw between the second and third periods. Charlotte Hennessey of Belleville and Jeff Mossman of Sarnia, Ont. won bicycles.

The Fairways next game will be Sunday night when they travel to Gananoque to meet the G-Men. A bus will leave the Belleville Memorial Arena at 4.30 p.m. with space available for interested spectators.

Basketball Tourney

Moira Writes Right Script

The Moira Secondary School boys phys-ed staff thought of everything when they organized the first East-West Basketball Tournament — even a script writer.

After all how else could you explain eight teams competing for 54 minutes of basketball with a final score of 86-85? Or who else but a Hollywood writer would have the home team Moira Trojans snap a 58-58 tie in the final section to give their division the victory?

"Everything worked out perfectly," admitted Moira's Hugh Cook, "we hope to hold the tournament again in future years." The competition was arranged so that four teams from eastern division would meet four teams from teams from the western section with total points to count. Each game lasted 16 minutes.

In the first encounter, east Jumped into a slim 16-14 lead as Napanee slipped by Albert College, Trenton the west ahead by seven points in the second game hanging a 25-16 loss on Trenton.

BCIa senior Collegians squared matters at 58-58 with a 26-19 victory over Centennial to set the stage for the final encounter. In that game the host Moira Trojans edged Quinte 29-27 to provide the east with victory.

Moira was chosen as the top team in the tournament, while Neil Dunning of Quinte was named as the tourney's MVP.

'Shall We Dance?'

Doug Duff and Bill Ouderkirk of Napanee District High School aren't really running through a revival of the minuet. What they're actually trying to accomplish is preventing Gari Mutswario of Albert College from getting off a snot in the first East-West high school basketball tournament at Moira last night. Four teams from each division of the Bay of Quinte league battled it out with the East finally taking an 86-85 decision.

Bodies Still on Move In Last Day of Trades

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — After a busy three days of trades involving 42 players, what more could happen at the winter baseball meetings?

More trades, of course.

Baseball's moguls wound up a wacky week of swapping by exchanging 10 players in 10 minutes Friday and capped the most prolific five days of dealing in the sport's history.

The big name in the latest series of deals was Dave Roberts, San Diego's splendid southpaw, who moved to Houston Astros for three minor league players—pitchers Bill Grief and Mark Schaefer and infielder Derrel Thomas.

In other deals—all announced in lightning fashion:

Minnesta Twins sent relief pitcher Tom Hall to Cincinnati Reds for reliever Wayne Granger, then Milwaukee Brewers traded center fielder Jose Cardenal to Chicago Cubs for pitchers Jim Colborn and Earl Stephenson and centre fielder Brock Davis.

The latest binge topped a week of exploding deals in which 53 players traded in or forms 16 15 trades involving 18 teams.

Roberts appeared to be a steal for the Astros, who made another big deal last Monday to highlight the first day's activity.

In Roberts, Houston gets the National League's No. 1 ground-ran-average pitcher. The 27-year-old left-hander ranked behind New York's Tom Seaver with a 2.16 earned-run average and had a 16-17 record for one of the worst clubs in baseball.

"We feel we got one of the best pitchers in baseball," said Spec Richardson, the team's general manager.

The players coveted by the Padres in the four-player deal was Thomas, said manager Preston Gomez, "but our club has long been in the market for a quality infielder."

The switch-hitting Thomas, 20, hit .286 at Oklahoma City in the American Association last season.

Grief was 9-8 with a 1.62 earned-run average and Schaefer had a 3-7 mark and 5.78. both at Oklahoma City.

Granger, one of the key relievers in Cincinnati's 1970 pennant-winning club, has a 4-4 mark with Twins.

The annual meetings concluded Friday as the National and American leagues held a joint session.

Out of that meeting, commissioner Bowie Kuhn promised some new information to the baseball writers, despite being interrupted twice by the week announcements.

The commissioner announced that next year's inter-league trading deadline would be moved up to the last day of the winter meetings instead of the now-recognized moratorium, or 45 days after the season. Kuhn said it was an attempt by baseball to have more deals for publicity purposes although quickly pointing out it wasn't needed this week.

Hazzard Hoops Winner

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Cavaliers, tied 90-90 with Buffalo Braves and with only four seconds remaining in their basketball game, called time out forgetting they didn't have any left.

And, under National Basketball Association rules, when a team does such things, it is slapped with a technical.

So Walt Hazzard calmly stepped to the foul line and shot the penalty basket that gave the Braves a 91-90 victory Friday night and snapped the Cavaliers' winning streak at five games.

In Friday night's other NBA action, Chicago walloped New York Knicks 123-98, Milwaukee Bucks crushed Cincinnati Royals 130-92, Los Angeles Lakers pounded Philadelphia 76ers 141-118, Detroit Pistons edged Houston Rockets 113-112, Seattle SuperSonics beat Baltimore Bullets 117-106 and Portland Trail Blazers overpowered Golden State Warriors 115-107.

In American Basketball Association play, Memphis turned back Utah 111-114 in overtime, New York Nets defeated Carolina 134-122, Virginia Squires upended Indiana Pacers 128-119 in overtime and Kentucky Colonels dumped Dallas Chaparrels 105-91.

Buffalo failed to scored a field goal until midway in the first period and trailed virtually throughout the game before Bob Kauffman, the game's leading scorer with 23 points, tapped in a rebound in the 8 and one situation for the Cavaliers' crucial concolidation.

Cleveland was also hurt by the loss of rookie guard Austin Carr, who relighted the fractured right foot that had kept him out of the team's first 14 games.

The Bulls, spoiling for a return match since losing to New York by a single point last Saturday night, made the most of their visit west on a romp in the third period, opening an unconscionable lead of 97-63.

Kareem Jabbar, Milwaukee's brilliant 7-foot-2 centre, was home with a case of the flu, but the rest of the Bucks bagged the Royals without him. Bob Dandridge led their balanced scoring attack with 22 points.

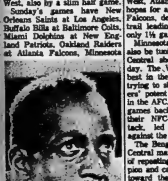
The Lakers, moving within four victories of the all-time NBA winning streak, took No. 18 as they rallied after being down by as many as 17 points in the third period, Jim McMillian, Jerry West and Gail Goodrich combined for 101 points against the "Sers with McMillian hitting seven-high 41.

The Pistons snapped a five-game losing spin by connecting back the Rockets, led by Elvin Hayes' game-high 35 points.

Spencer Haywood scored 35 for the SuperSonics, 24 of them in the second half.

Geoff Petrie and Sidney Wicks combined for 68 points as the Trailblazers overcame a four-point fourth-quarter Warriors rally. A pair of free throws by Petrie and two buckets by Gary Gregor sealed the triumph for Portland.

'49ers Attempt To Hold Lead



By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco '49ers play "hold-on" to Kansas by Chiefs' "catchup" while a raft of other clubs play "tune-up" this weekend in National Football League continues its headlong rush toward the playoffs.

The '49ers, with a half-game lead over Los Angeles Rams in the National Conference West, will be trying to maintain or improve the margin in Monday night's contest.

But San Francisco will be facing a stern challenge from the streaking Chiefs, still hot on the trail of Oakland Raiders, who lead the American Conference West, also by a slim half game.

Sunday's games have New Orleans Saints at Los Angeles, Buffalo Bills at Baltimore Colts, Miami Dolphins at New England Patriots, Oakland Raiders at Atlanta Falcons, Minnesota

VIC WASHINGTON

In today's game, New York Jets, with Joe Namath back in the starting lineup, battled the NFC East-leading Dallas Cowboys.

The '49ers-Chiefs battle promises to be a high-scoring affair between well-balanced clubs. San Francisco's John Brodie will be aiming his serials at Gene Washington while Vic Washington will be teaming with Ken Willard at running back. But Len Dawson will be out to unleash his share of bombs, primarily at Otis Taylor, while Ed Podolak crunches out the ground yardage.

The Rams', hoping to regain the NFC West lead, will be out to avenge their earlier whipping of 34-20 loss to the Saints with, within victory would raise their record to 5-5-2, ensuring them of their best record since entering the league in 1967.

Buffalo finally won a game—the first since Oct. 17—tonight as backs this season and 17 winless games extending through last year—but now faces the AFC's strongest defensive club, the Colts, who lambasted the Bills 42-6 eight weeks ago.

The Dolphins, shooting for their victories in a row, are also looking for a repeat of their earlier meeting with New England, when they racked up their season-high scoring mark in a 41-3 rout of the Patriots seven weeks ago.

The Raiders and Falcons are both coming off losses a week ago and, while Oakland tries to maintain its grip on the AFC West, Atlanta clings to its slim hopes for its six-year title. The Falcons, despite a 5-5-1 record, trail leading San Francisco by only a half game.

Minnesota and Detroit will also be battling up for their NFC Central showdown next Saturday. The Vikings' defence, the best in the conference, will be trying to shut down the Charging' power passing game, best in the AFC, while the Lions, 1½ games back of Minnesota, send their NFC-leading ground attack, led by Steve Owens, against the Eagles.

The Bengals, with a 4-7 AFC Central mark, still harbor hopes of repeating as divisional champion and can take a major step toward that goal by knocking off the leading Browns, who took sole possession of first place last week with a victory over Houston.

The Steelers, who dropped out of a tie with the Browns by losing to Denver, have yet to win on the road this season.

Washington will apparently be without Sonny Jurgensen again, giving Billy Kilmer the task of repeating the Redskins' 36-3 thumping of the Giants in the Giants' first meeting.

Denver shut out San Diego a week ago and now sends its defensive unit against the Packers, who haven't scored a touchdown in two weeks. The Packers send NFC rushing leader John Brockington against the Cards, who climbed out the NFC East cellar last Sunday.

Thorburn Wins

TORONTO (CP) — Cliff Thorburn of Canada, Vancouver Kenny Shea of Dartmouth, N.S., four games to one in Friday's best of the Canada-North American snooker championship.

Thorburn, Western Canada champion, leads the best-of-71 games final 36-15.

Shea's only victory came in the second game on the strength of a 104 break. He was defeated 88-37, Thorburn's victories were 86-46, 101-34, 92-51 and 72-

Webster Retained

NEW YORK (AP) — Alex Webster will remain head coach of New York Giants of the National Football League although no contract signing has taken place, team owner Wellington Mara announced Friday.

Webster's status had been questioned after the Giants were eliminated from this year's race. However, Mara said: "We didn't want to make a big deal out of it, or give the impression that a vote of confidence was needed."

Webster formerly was a star halfback with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Power Play No Guarantee

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The team with the best power play can generally be found near the top of the National Hockey League. Not this season. New York Rangers, the East Division leaders, have capitalized on 21 manpower advantages in 33 games. Minnesota North Star, tops in the West, has five power-play goals in 34 starts.

Incredibly, the team that makes the most effective use of the extra man is 31 points behind the Rangers in the East. The last-place Buffalo Sabres have popped in 27 goals in 25 games while the opposition was shorthanded.

Over a full season, their pace would eclipse the NHL record of 81 power-play goals in 78 games, set two years ago by Boston Bruins when they went on to win the Stanley Cup. So now comes the Sabres are in last place?

Well, last Wednesday night the Rangers took only two penalties against Buffalo and the Sabres scored both times, while killing off three, penalties of their own without damage. But New York won the game 7-2.

The missing ingredient is a master plan for scoring goals while playing an even terms.

The two leading Buffalo marksmen, Richard Martin and Gilbert Perreault, have 28 goals between them, exactly half being scored on power plays, along with four of Eddie Shack's seven.

The Sabres ended a 10-game winless streak Thursday, missing their three power-play opportunities but winning 3-0 over Los Angeles Kings, the western cellar-dwellers.

Mikita Gains Ground

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With only one game scheduled, Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks was the only player among the National Hockey League's top 10 scorers to advance Friday when the Hawks were upset 3-1 by California's Golden Seals.

Mikita earned an assist on the Chicago goal by Darryl Maggs to increase his total to 26 points. He moved into ninth slot, one ahead of Bobby Rousseau of New York Rangers and Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs, who are tied for 10th.

Golden Seals No Longer Western Patsies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

California Golden Seals were the patsies in the National Hockey League last season but it appears they do not intend to be pushed around any longer.

The Seals, responding to their third-largest home attendance this season, outlasted Chicago Black Hawks 2-1 in the only NHL game played Friday night.

The win, their ninth of the season, moved the Seals into third place in the West Division, one point ahead of Pittsburgh Penguins. However, they still have a long way to go to catch the division leaders, first place Minnesota North Stars with 37 points, and the Black Hawks with 34.

The Seals had a dismal record last season when they lost 54 games, most in the team's history. They also allowed the opposition 328 goals in 78 games. In the three previous seasons, the Seals had won 71, lost 149 and tied 68.

But this season, with both goaltenders Gardes, the Seals are looking more respectable. Only six of 39 players who opened the NHL season last year were retained and last month the Seals fired coach Fred Glover and hired Vic Stasiuk.

The Seals also acquired a new goalie in Gilles Meloche, 21, who spent most of last season with Flint, Mich., of the semi-pro International League.

Meloche, one big factor in the Seals' resurgence, was again outstanding Friday night. He allowed the first goal in the game at 7:21 of the opening period when Darryl Maggs scored on a pass from Dennis Hull, but effectively shut off the Hawks for the rest of the game.

California got a goal from Gary Jarrett to even the score and Ernie Hicke scored the winner on a power play on a pass from Gerry Pinder.

There was scoring in the second and third periods. Chicago pulled goalie Tony Esposito in the last minute of the game but the Hawks could not get the equalizer.

Both Chicago and California will be idle in tonight's action which sees New York Rangers at Pittsburgh, Vancouver Canucks at Montreal Canadiens, Buffalo Sabres at St. Louis Blues, Boston Bruins at Toronto Maple Leafs, Los Angeles Kings at Detroit Red Wings and Philadelphia at Minnesota.

Sunday night, Vancouver plays New York, Pittsburgh visits Boston, St. Louis travels to Detroit, Minnesota is at Buffalo, California meets Philadelphia and Los Angeles plays Chicago.

The Bruins will be looking for a win tonight to widen their range of the Rangers and Canadiens, although in third place in the NHL's East, the Bruins are still ahead of the pace they set last season when they finished first.

They were believed to be off to a slow start this season but that is only because of the fast pace set By the Rangers and Canadiens who are four and two points respectively ahead of the third-place Bruins.

"We're not bad," said Boston coach Tom Johnson. "We're not great, we're not right on yet. We have to get a little more consistency."

Only centre Phil Esposito and defenceman Bobby Orr among the Bruins are ahead of last season's scoring output. Esposito, runaway scoring champion, has 18 goals and 23 assists, compared to 15 and 34 at this point last year. Orr has 11 goals and 31 assists, seven points than his 32 on nine goals and 23 assists this time last year.

Ferguson Helps Marlies To Win Over Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros overcame a Kitchener hex Friday night to score a 5-1 victory over the Rangers and take first place in the tight Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series race.

It was Kitchener's first home loss this season after eight wins and a tie. The win put Marlboros, with a game in hand, four points behind the league-leading and idle Oshawa Generals who have 34 points.

Meanwhile, Ottawa 67s, now tied with Kitchener for third place with 29 points, beat 4-1 Peterborough Petes, who are tied with Niagara Falls Flyers for fifth spot,with 27.

The Flyers beat last-place Montreal Junior Canadiens 4-3 while London Knights defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-3.

Paulo Bordeleau paced Marlboros at Kitchener, two goals each. The others were scored by Bill Harris, Dave Gardner and George Ferguson. Kitchener's counter was by Dave Hinkin.

The Petes overcame a 2-1 first-period deficit at Ottawa with Bob Smallwood leading the way with three goals—six ninth, 16th and 11th of the season.

Another goal, the only one of the final period, came when he moved from behind the Mercier net to shove theipuck in the open side.

Dan Lever, who leads the league in goal-getting, scored his 35th of the season for Niagara Falls with other goals by Steve Stoios and Stan Gross.

Goal-scorers for the Junior Habs were Pirman Royer, David Logan and Scott MacPhail.

The Knights broke a 1-1 tie with three goals in two minutes early in the third period at London to beat the Hawks. Two goals 16 seconds apart by 1:32 of the period marked the London breakaway with Paul Nichols and Gord Barrick taking the credit.

Dennis Vervenyet tipped one in at 3:21 when the Knights were shorthanded. Nicholson scored another goal with the others going to Dennis McCord and Wayne Elder.

St. Catharines markers were by Mike Bloom, Tim Jacobs and Gart Larriviere, with his first goal of the season.

Success In Boston

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

They say nothing succeeds like success and if you're a hockey buff in Boston you can prove it by the turnstile count for Friday's American Hockey League game between the local Braves of the eastern and western divisions.

The crowd of 14,344—only 31 short of Boston Garden capacity —awaited the start of the game as the Braves, leaders in the east, shot out Hershey Bears, top team in the west, 3-0.

In other games, Cleveland Barons battled Baltimore Clippers 5-2, Richmond Robins trimmed Rochester Americans 7-1 and Nova Scotia Voyageurs edged Springfield Kings 2-1.

A breakaway goal by Fred O'Donnell in the second period was all the Braves needed to record their 14th consecutive game without defeat on home ice.

It was also the Braves' third victory of the season over the pacesetters in the west. Boston sports a 17-2-3 record compared with Hershey's 13-6-3.

The Braves, a new entry in the league this year, are allied with the workingmen's Iron Brutes of the National Hockey League, and are almost as popular. It marked the third time they have broken the league record for attendance.

As one observer noted: "This is a hockey town, and they're all hockey nuts."

Brad Wells of Melrose is one of those self-confessed hockey addicts. He is a season ticket holder of both the Bruins and Braves.

"It's great hockey," he said. "You see the young kids coming up—the future Bruins. They're one step away. There's no question that I enjoy them as much as the Bruins."

Reynald Comeau scored both goals for the Voyageurs at Springfield. Wayne Rivers' 19th goal of the season broke Nova Scotia goalie Michel Plasse's shutout.

Terriers Trim Barrie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Orillia Terriers swept to within one point of second-place Barrie Flyers in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series Friday night by trimming the Flyers 9-7 in a high-scoring set-to at Barrie.

Orillia now has 21 points, Barrie 22 and the league-leading and East Gwillimbury are away ahead with 32.

Steve DeGorse scored four goals and two assists as fifth-place Woodstock Royals blanked last-place Owen Sound Greenshirts 9-0 while the newly co-op venture Belleville Quintes outshone Oshawa Sachs 5-2.

The Quintes' players decided this week to operate the club after the club's owner quit because of poor attendance at games. Belleville is in sixth place.

At Woodstock Mac Westgate added a goal and three assists for the Royals with single goals coming from Jim' Harris, Dan Mahony, Don Jones and Wayne Weller. Goalie Ron Boomer 38, shut out the Greenshirts.

Orillia got a goal from Gary Jarrett to even the score and Ernie Hicke scored the winner on a power play on a pass from Gerry Pinder.

There was scoring in the second and third periods. Chicago pulled goalie Tony Esposito in the last minute of the game but the Hawks could not get the equalizer.

Both Chicago and California will be idle in tonight's action which sees New York Rangers at Pittsburgh, Vancouver Canucks at Montreal Canadiens, Buffalo Sabres at St. Louis Blues, Boston Bruins at Toronto Maple Leafs, Los Angeles Kings at Detroit Red Wings and Philadelphia at Minnesota.

Sunday night, Vancouver plays New York, Pittsburgh visits Boston, St. Louis travels to Detroit, Minnesota is at Buffalo, California meets Philadelphia and Los Angeles plays Chicago.

Madoc

MADOC — Jack Devolin of Madoc township, was the big winner in the Grey Cup pool on Sunday, having the ticket bearing the 14-11 score in favor of the West. Grand prize for the final score was $100, which Jack took home, but he also received another $75 for having the score at the end of the third quarter. Other winners in the pool were Mrs. Jack Bailey, who won the first quarter prize of $25 while Duncan Campbell of Madoc and Ron DeRoche of Picton split the half time prize of $50.

The Madoc township Couples Club travelled by bus to the Trent Valley country jamboree at Stirling last Saturday night and had a very enjoyable evening.

The Hastings County 4-H awards night was held here recently, with about 150 members marking the completion of a variety of agricultural projects. Neil Reavie of Flinton was valedictorian.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Reid and Gord spent the week-end in Toronto and attended the wedding of their son, David, to Miss Barbara Arnold in St. Simon's Anglican Church.

The Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra, sponsored jointly by the Kiwanis Clubs of Madoc and Tweed will be held in the auditorium of Centre Hastings Secondary School this Sunday.

A number of new books arrived at the Madoc Library this week.

Quite a large number of people from the area attended the warden's banquet held in the Legion Hall in Belleville last weekend at which Warden and Mrs. Ken Smith were hosts.

Turkish Premier Resigns

ANKARA (Reuter) — Turkey was engulfed today in its third major political crisis of the year following surprise resignations Friday, first of 13 cabinet ministers then of Premier Nihat Erim.

Erim announced his decision after a meeting with President Cevdet Sunay and the chiefs of the military general staff, Gen. Memduh Tagmac, to discuss the resignations of half his cabinet.

He said he declined a request from the president that he continue in charge of a caretaker government.

Erim, who has been in office for eight months, offered his resignation only five weeks ago when faced with loss of parliamentary support from the majority Justice party, but was persuaded to carry on by President Sunay, who clearly hailed the only alternative was a military takeover.

Most of the 13 ministers who resigned were non-politician technocrats brought into the non-party government to draw up and implement wide-ranging reforms which the military demanded when they ousted Suleyman Demirel's government last March.

The ministers who resigned protested that the momentum for carrying through these reforms had been lost.

Among the 13 was Foreign Minister Osman Olcay. Olcay's deputy secretary general of NATO who quit that post last month to join the new government.

George Wellman was taken by ambulance to Belleville General Hospital where he underwent surgery.

Several friends attended the funeral of the Gordon McCulloch at Campbellford on Friday afternoon.

Larry Hick has taken up residence in a mobile home at Belleville for the winter months.

Wall Passes for West Berliners Stumbling Block in German Accords

BERLIN (AP) — Prodded by growing political opposition in West Germany, Western negotiators blocked an East German power play to force a quick signing of all German accords on a Berlin agreement.

The East-West German negotiations were to continue today, however, in an attempt to resolve the deadlock over wall passes for West Berliners.

West Berlin negotiator Ulrich Mueller capped a day of four trips to East Berlin and a flight to Bonn by talking until past midnight Friday night with the East German state secretary, Gunter Kohrt.

"It is not over," said a spokesman for Mayor Klaus Schuetz of West Berlin. "They will continue negotiating Saturday."

At issue are the terms of two East-West dialogues:

—Between Egon Bahr of West Germany and East German Michael Kohn on access to Berlin from West Germany. They were said to be ready to sign, but Bahr waiting for agreement on the other level first.

—Between Mueller and Kohrt on the troublesome issue of visits by West Berliners to the East,a stumbling block ever since the Communists built the Berlin wall in 1961. West Berliners have had no wall passes since May, 1956.

Once accord is reached, the way is open for the Big Four's Berlin agreement to be put into effect. It is aimed at easing East-West tensions and promoting freer movement to and from the Communist-encircled West Berlin. The agreement can't go into force until the Germans work out their differences.

Indian and Pakistani Armies Well Trained

By REUTER

India and Pakistan have well-trained, well-equipped troops, battle-tested by actual conflicts—but India's army is more than twice as large as Pakistan's.

Both have received substantial amounts of military equipment from the major world powers and have their army armaments industries. India, in particular, has been expanding her home arms production. In recent years, the Soviet Union has been a major supplier for India, while Pakistan has received substantial shipments of arms from China.

India must keep a large part of its army along its 1,500-mile border with China while Pakistan has to cope with separatist unrest in East Pakistan.

Pope Makes Peace Plea

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul has sent a personal message to the presidents of India and Pakistan urging them to avoid a "bloody trial of strength" and offering the Vatican's help in negotiations, the Vatican said today.

The message, sent in the "last days," called on the leaders to heed "the voice of wise and magnanimous moderation," a Vatican communique said.

Expressing "deep sorrow and profound apprehension" over tension between the two countries, the Pope called for a "generous commitment to reach a just and honorable settlement through negotiations."

The Holy See is "always disposed to offer its collaboration," he said.

Competition Act Is Claimed Misconstrued

SASKATOON (CP) — Many misconceptions and false rumors are arising from the proposed federal Competition Act and the competitive practices tribunal, Pat Mahoney, MP for Calgary and parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said Friday.

Mr. Mahoney, in a paper to a student business seminar presented on his behalf by Senator Sidney Buckwold, said objectives of the act were to eliminate market practices that pervert competition and to strike against oppressive abuses of market power.

It was not intended to interfere with or disrupt business activities that yield a net benefit to competition and, by extension, to the consumer public.

The proposed act would remove certain illegal practices from the criminal law and provide appropriate civil law remedies, he said.

The competitive practices tribunal would examine situations brought before it under civil law. It would have discretionary flexibility to bring expert judgment on economic merits in particular situations, but could not open hearings into specific cases on its own initiative.

He called other complaints against the act and the tribunal "palpable nonsense."

Statements that people could be convicted of a summary evidence or that the rights of parties would be suspended were wrong, he said.

The fact is the act gives all parties a hearing every step and opportunity to present their positions before the tribunal through counsel and considerably greater latitude to call expert witnesses and other evidence than is permitted in criminal court."

Consumer Affairs Minister Fred Peacock has announced that the act will die on the House of

Kosygin Arrives In Jutland

AALBORG, Denmark (Reuter) — Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin arrived at this north Jutland town for the second half of his Danish visit today amid growing speculation that he would cut short his Scandinavian trip and return to Moscow because of the India-Pakistan crisis.

A spokesman for Premier Kosygin's delegation said today that the Soviet Union alone could not solve the India-Pakistan crisis.

The present situation was different from the one prior to Kosygin's talks between India and Pakistan in Tashkent in January, 1966, the spokesman added.

He said: "Because of our friendship treaty with India, we have a greater obligation to-wards India than towards Pakistan. Then you have the development of relations between Pakistan and China and between the Soviet Union and China. Alone, we can do nothing."

A Danish foreign ministry spokesman in north Jutland announced that the Soviet delegation had been asked whether it would cut short the visit to re-store, for instance, relations applied only that they were "watching the situation," he said.

Egypt Asks UN To Oust Israelis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Egypt opened the UN debate on the Middle East by challenging the General Assembly to get Israeli troops out of occupied Arab territories or face Israel cooled for rejection of the demands.

The Arab UN mission said approval of the Egyptian position would maintain the present deadlock and, if anything, increase the danger of renewed hostilities.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, who addressed the 126-nation assembly for one hour Friday, said that Israel had already defied a UN Security Council resolution calling for a troop pullback from lands taken in the 1967 war.

"He said the assembly should "enforcement measures" if it goes back to the November, 1967, council action, which also sought secure and recognized boundaries for Israel.

Riad told the world body that "Israel's policy of territorial expansion" had shattered the efforts of Gunnar V. Jarring, UN special envoy to the Middle East, to get a peace settlement of Middle East problems.

The Israeli UN mission replied that the approval of the Egyptian demands would reinforce the existing deadlock and "would increase the danger of renewed hostilities. . . . It would deal a fatal blow to the Jarring discussions and to the ceasefire."

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, the mission said, will make "a full statement of Israel's position" in the assembly Monday.

Opposition Renews Attacks on Farm Clauses in Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — How rare and pleasant it was to have Prime Minister Trudeau in the Commons listening to a debate on farm problems, said Conservative Stanley Korchinski (Mackenzie) in the House Friday.

"I am not going to listen to you. I am just here," replied the prime minister cheerfully.

As an unprecedented number of cabinet members filled the government benches, opposition MPs renewed their attack on clauses in the tax bill which they said would strike a stunning blow against farmers.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), an Alberta rancher, reiterated his objections to the proposal to tax profits made by farmers on their basic herds—the animals that form the core of their dairy and beef business.

Basic herds now are considered capital assets and are not taxed.

Under the bill, they would be considered part of inventory. When sold, profits would be taxed as income for the farmer.

The unusual number of Liberals in the House was to prevent a recurrence of the opposition victory Wednesday in a quick procedural vote.

The government is determined to ride out the last four days of clause-by-clause study of the 333-clause bill without any more such trouble.

Under a motion passed Thursday over opposition objections, the study—droning on for 27 hours—will stop next Wednesday.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin told the House Friday that because of that "bulldozer" motion, he will boycott future meetings of party House leaders, which have been held to schedule debate on the bill.

In the debate, Mr. Horner said the basic herd concept should be retained to keep Canadian cattlemen competitive with U.S., Australian and New Zealand breeders.

Mr. and Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville), another rancher, also attacked proposals to tax the difference between the depreciated value of a farmer's machinery and the price he actually gets when he sells it.

Under one of the options proposed by the bill, for example, a tractor might depreciate—in accounting terms—by 30 per cent, but have a sale value of 50 per cent of its initial cost. The difference—20 per cent—could be taxed as income.

On the other hand, the farmer would have been able to deduct the higher depreciation each year from his yearly income.

Pat Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, replied in the House that a farmer would only pay tax on the recaptured depreciation if he went out of business.

The profit made on a trade-in for a new tractor would be more than offset by the depreciation allowance on the new machine in the first year.

Opposition spokesmen also criticized the proposal to apply the capital gains tax to farmland.

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) said that while the capital-gains tax principle was sound, farmers and other small businessmen have "special tax problems."

He called for "approval of-a new Democratic amendment that would exempt from the tax farmland that is transferred within a farm family, and exempt earnings from the sale of a farm that are used to buy another farm.

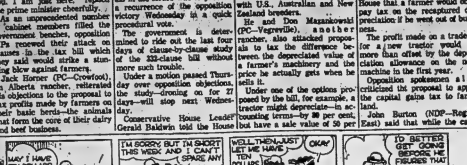
William Knight (NDP—Assiniboia) in his maiden speech in the House, supported Mr. Burton. Mr. Knight won a byelection Nov. 8.

Mr. Korchinski said the proposed tax would discourage farmers' sons from carrying on the family business.

He and Mr. Knight opposed the government's plan to calculate the tax on the last three years' value of the property that is transferred.

Mr. Knight said the value could be inflated by land speculation in the area.

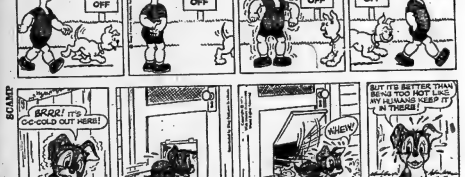
Mr. Korchinski said the farmer could have no certainty what the value would be, or what tax he would have to pay.



Murray McBride (L—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) said farmers across the country are awaiting good farm legislation, and accused the NDP of "sabotaging" the grain stabilization bill.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) replied that the stabilization bill is still on the Commons order paper, and urged Mr. McBride to ask the government why it is not being dealt with. The cause for further debate.

On another economic problem, Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the House there is no way yet to assess the potential impact of recent U.S. protectionist measures.



And cabinet colleagues said Friday Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon will agree at their Washington meeting Monday to make no change in the U.S.-Canada auto pact that would hurt employment in the Canadian auto industry.

The pact, and the safeguards guaranteeing Canada's share of trade in the North American car trade, is one of the issues under negotiation between Canadian and U.S. officials.

Canadian Legislators Briefed on U.S. Policy

WASHINGTON (CP) — Six Canadian legislators wound up a week of briefings on United States agricultural policy and methods Friday, ending the trip on a unique series of exchanges begun quietly this fall.

With a group of more than $25,000 per year from the Donner Canadian Foundation, groups of legislators from Canada are being brought to Washington for up to a week to look in detail into such topics as national parks, transportation and international co-operation.

In return, beginning in mid-January, American congressmen and senators will go to Ottawa for briefer visits to explore such questions as pollution and the Canadian experience with China.

The latest group of Canadians included Senator Gil Molgat, former premier of Manitoba; Liberal leader, MPs Gerry Cobbe (Lac-Portage La Prairie), Cliff Downey (PC—Battle River), Jean-Pierre Morin (PC—Lisgar), and Lorne Rossiide (SC—Richmond) as well as Irving Carlson, a freshman NDP member of the Saskatchewan legislature.

It was typical of such groups that most were backbench members without cabinet links and without easy access to detailed information from the bureaucracy.

Discussing their experience at week's end with a reporter, several of the parliamentarians expressed enthusiasm about the program and the opportunity it gave them for a different view of agriculture.

Downey gave as an example their discussions about U.S. presidential activities, which sometimes open up markets abroad for new products—wheat, in Asia, replacing rice, for instance—and which Canadian businessmen are then able to exploit. He said the Americans did not resent such sales.

"They mentioned the Philippines, where the Canadians have sold wheat in what has been a traditional U.S. market."

Molgat added:

"Because diabetes isn't a wound that "heals": It is a gradual disease. It is true that sometimes in pregnancy, diabetes appears, then seems to disappear at the end of the pregnancy. In such cases, the "temporary" diabetes usually is a sign that the disease will return permanently, sometime later.

Antibiotics Have Eliminated Bulk of Mastoid Operations

By C. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had two mastoid operations in one year. Isn't that quite unusual in this day and age? I am 34.

Even now sometimes my ear feels like it is full of wax, but it isn't. My sense of balance is quite bad at times.

Would you write about mastoids? Would smoking make the condition worse?—Mrs. M.S.

Two mastoid operations may be more than is ordinarily par for the course, but I can't be too surprised, either. It could simply that you had extensive infection that was not completely drained by the first operation.

Mastoid operations are much less common than they were years ago, because the antibiotics manage to control infection in good deal of the time. But not always. It depends on the virulence of the infecting germ, and how much start the infection gets.

The mastoid is that thick bone behind the ear. Thick, but not dense. In fact, it is quite porous inside. With a middle ear infection, the tissues can break down so that the infection can enter that porous part of the bone. When that happens, a bony combat with infection. It isn't easy to get it all out. That's why, years ago, mastoid operations used to be so disfiguring. Today the operation does not leave a big, massive scar behind —but, of course, mastoid infections do still occur, as in your case.

When antibiotics can't do the job (and because the infection is spread through the porous bone, and there isn't enough circulation to carry the antibiotics deep into the area) surgery still is sometimes necessary to drain out the infected material.

If you had a severe middle ear infection as is the likely explanation, it is quite probable that your balance mechanism could be affected. The semicircular canals, which are part of the ear's equipment, give us our sense of balance. Infection can affect them and distort balance.

Excessive smoking can disturb balance, too, but in view of your history, I'd doubt that it is your problem. You could test it out—stop smoking and see if it makes a difference.

The plugged sensation in the ear, if not due to excessive wax or discharge, could very likely be from sear tissue.

To return to the balance problem, if it is too bothersome and doesn't get better, you could check with your doctor about use of medication that is often helpful in such cases.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does a person's stomach actually shrink to a smaller size after fasting? I insist that it does because a person, after dieting for a while, can't consume as much food at one time.

My sister's anatomy teacher says stomachs don't actually shrink. If they don't, why can't a dieter eat as much as a person who has not been fasting?—M.S.

The anatomy teacher is correct; the stomach doesn't shrink —but the successful dieter has learned that he doesn't need as much food as he used to eat, so he settles in volume or calories.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter-in-law tried to tell me that a friend of hers once had diabetes and now is completely healed. Could it be true?—M.S.

The Bidding:
South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Dble	4 ♠	Pass

Opening lead — five of diamonds.

Here is an odd result from a hand played in a team match.

At the first table, South bid 4 spades, West doubled, and North jumped to four spades, which East doubled. West led a diamond and South made the contract with two overtricks. He won, drew trumps, discarded dummy's two hearts on his diamonds, and lost only a club trick. He thus scored 1,130 points.

East's double was decidedly out of order. True, he had some defensive strength, but he should have realized from the bidding that his hand was also very well suited for a heart or club contract.

North's leap to four spades strongly suggested that West had either one spade or none. East could therefore have concluded that West had considerable support for hearts and clubs, and that his hand was highly unsuited for either suit as trump. Instead of doubling he should have bid five hearts or five clubs.

At the second table, North-West bidding raised their cr's. Here South also opened with a spade, but West elevated to pass. Apparently West didn't appreciate his distributional values in choosing to pass. He was probably too point-count oriented and very likely thought he couldn't double with only 11 points.

North bid four spades, and that ended the auction. West led a diamond and again declarer made six, but because he wasn't doubled the score came to only 680 points.

So the East-West pair at this table also fared badly, though they did gain 510 points on the deal.

The outcome at both tables must be regarded as highly reasonable. Here was a case where East-West could easily make a slam in hearts or clubs, yet at neither table was either suit bid.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Aries (March 21-April 19). Despite plans to the contrary, it's likely that you'll spend the day sitting around the house, doing nothing in particular. Evening hours could be more lively.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). A quiet drive in the country, even a walk around the neighborhood, could generate enough excitement to keep you busy for a month. Unusual situations arise travelling.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Though you think you've got your whole week ahead smoothly scheduled, better get ready to use the eraser on the pencil. Finances cause changes.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). This afternoon's trends favor quiet pursuits, so don't swim against the astral tide by getting immersed in complicated schemes and projects. Take a nap instead.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Giving in to a solitary mood, even skipping away from the family, could be a mistake today. When you come home, you'll find you've missed all the fun.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Even the best of friends can disappoint now and then, but your associations are doubtless beyond their control. It could be a matter of family problems that cause them to cancel.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). A parent or relative before you live, or in the neighborhood, may take up a lot of your time. That one short story can drag on for hours.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). It's interesting to trace back the family origins, especially if they involve some fascinating glimpses into customs brought from other shores. Don't let have details confused, however.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The pressure to get accounts, statistics, investments and other financial papers in order may be largely self-imposed You could easily be wrong about deadlines.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Important written partners early that you're not a mind reader. If they have something to say, let them make it plain and simple. This particularly applies to children.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Major cleaning projects to put everything in its place should be considered before proceeding. Sometimes it's easier to find things where they're left, rather than where they belong.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Even the most loving parents some days wish that children were never invented. By supper time, though, youngsters should be back in good graces.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—While you've got your eye this year solely on your financial quincunx, you could be oblivious to wonderful (but non-lucrative) new social connections. Don't worry about money—have some fun instead.

PCs to Range Over Variety Of Problems

OTTAWA (CP) — Foreign investment may be the most controversial item at the Progressive Conservative party's national policy convention starting Sunday.

But the discussion topics cover a broad range in studies launched more than two years ago to establish a platform for the next general election, expected next year.

By the time the last word is spoken Tuesday, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield should have a clearer idea on three main points.

—Renewed muscle in money and party vitality said to be fuelling a Conservative surge of confidence.

—Regeneration of a federal party wing in Quebec, whose weakness is a party drawback.

—Solidifying of dissident party elements, notably on the Prairies where elements loyal to John Diefenbaker still linger away.

Conservative victories in Ontario, Alberta, New Brunswick—and great gains in the still-clouded Newfoundland situation—present a background of enthusiasm for the conference. It was set back from its original October date by the Ontario election.

But convention organizers agree that at least some of the publicity the expected three-day national convention will be muffled by Prime Minister Trudeau's Monday visit to Montreal and Tuesday.

The planning process has been extensive.

National officials in October, 1969, developed a brief outline as a game plan for policy development. A committee under Dalton B. Symons, president of Trent University, began churning out policy papers.

This summer and fall, the papers were distributed to Conservative groups across the country, debated and revised.

Formal voting on a long list of resolutions occurs Tuesday, the last day of the convention. But the shape of the party platform will be largely hammered out in seven hours of committee discussion Monday.

The 1,380 delegates expected at the convention, more than originally anticipated, will divide into three mammoth discussion groups: economic affairs, society and the individual, and Canadian sovereignty and Canadian identity.

Foreign investment preoccupies all Canadian parties right now. Policy papers prepared for the Conservative meeting state baldly that "the existence of Canada as an independent nation is being threatened" by the large extent of foreign investments—especially that from the U.S.

One proposed solution is that "foreign takeovers of Canadian firms in key sectors should be monitored and restricted, although not necessarily disallowed."

Delegates from the Progressive Conservative Youth Federation—who will make up about 30 per cent of all delegates—seem prepared to push for a harder approach to foreign investment.

One proposal to be discussed at a youth meeting today is that the government take measures to re-establish ownership of key economic sectors now dominated by U.S.-owned corporations.

Outgoing President Alan Pope said recently the youth delegates would vote as a bloc for policies decided upon by the youth meeting.

On the other side could be delegations from the Prairies and Western Canada, where foreign investment generally is welcomed.

If the recommendation in the policy paper is adopted by the meeting, it might require some fancy verbal footwork by Mr. Stanfield.

He has rejected the idea of a screening agency to examine and reject new foreign investment. The screening agency was the recommendation in a draft contributed to the Liberal cabinet by Revenue Minister Herb Gray and published in the Canadian Forum and confirmed by a Liberal cabinet document.

There appears to be little difference between the screening agency proposal and the Conservative policy paper call for monitoring and restricting foreign investment.

Another touchy topic is the Conservative party plan to impose a capital gains tax effective Jan. 1. The policy papers accept the concept, but it was rejected by a September 1969 Saskatchewan conference of Prairie Conservatives.

Western spokesmen have argued that the tax would hinder economic growth in underveloped areas.

Most policy papers, however, may cause little dissension.

Minister Would Drop Church Union Efforts

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A member of the 18-country committee that drew up the Principles of Union for the Anglican and United churches in 1925 urged Friday that church union be abandoned.

Rev. D. R. G. Owen of Toronto told the General Commission on Church Union that the problems of the church cannot be solved "by the invention of new structures or by ecclesiastical mergers."

"There is no longer anything that would justify the continuation of the long, expensive and time-consuming efforts to achieve a bilateral organizational union."

Mr. Owen, whose father, Rev. D. T. Owen, started church union talks with a letter to the United Church Observer in 1942, was commenting on a resolution acted to the commission by the national executive council of the Anglican Church of Canada.

The Anglican resolution calls upon the commission to "place greater emphasis upon processes which would enable the churches to grow together, rather than focussing almost total emphasis upon the preparation of the plan."

Friday was the first day of full plenary sessions for the meeting, attended by commissioners from the Anglican, United and Christian (Disciples of Christ) churches.

Instead of continuing to work toward union, the three denominations—the Anglican and United churches should "announce that there now is full mutual recognition and inter-communion on the basis of the Principles of Union."

The submission was read to the meeting by Executive Commissioner Canon Ralph H. Lail over Dr. Owen, unable to attend because of a family illness.

Jobless In U.S. Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government said Friday unemployment went back up to six per cent last month, despite a rise in the total number of working Americans to an all-time high of 84 million.

The government also said its index of wholesale prices edged up a slight .1 per cent, but a Nixon administration spokesman said it actually declined during the three months the price freeze. He said this may be the best evidence that will ever be available about the effects of the freeze.

The number of jobless Americans totaled 4.8 million in November, up by a seasonally adjusted 218,000, mostly young white adults who lost their jobs. When corrected for seasonal variations, the total jobless figure is 5.2 million.

The over-all labor force was swelled by a seasonally-adjusted 300,000, mostly teen-agers and adult women seeking Christmas-time employment.

Over-all, the ratio of job seekers to job holders jumped to six per cent after declining to 5.8 per cent the previous month. The unemployment rate has hovered around six per cent for a year.

Holiday Schedules Mixed Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With Christmas, Boxing and New Year's days falling on weekends this year, about the only thing common to Canadians is that most of them will be off work Dec. 25.

A CrossCanada survey by The Canadian Press shows that business, industry and provincial and municipal governments all have different ways of compensating their employees for the holidays of Christmas and New Year's which both fall on Saturdays, and Boxing Day, which falls on a Sunday.

Major Canadian stock exchanges will be closed for half a day Dec. 24 and will remain closed until Dec. 28. The exchanges will be open Dec. 31 and Jan. 3.

Most Canadian banks will close at 3 p.m. local times Friday, Dec. 24, and will be closed Dec. 27 and Jan. 3, both Mondays. Some banks also plan to close Thursday, Dec. 23.

Most federal employees will be off Dec. 27, Dec. 28 and Jan. 3. Personnel whose jobs require their presence those days will get other compensation.

Ontario government employees will get a four-day holiday starting Dec. 24. They'll also get Dec. 31 off. Toronto municipal employees get the same holidays.

Major Toronto businesses will be closed Dec. 25, Dec. 26, Jan. 1 and Jan. 2.

Can't Teach

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Teachers Federation said Friday that Brian Clow, a Toronto high school teacher suspended after his conviction for possession of marijuana, will not be able to teach until the fall of 1972.

Mr. Clow, 25, was notified of the decision of the federation's executive by registered mail.

Education Minister Robert Welch will make the final decision after considering the federation's report.

Market Gains Biggest of Year

By PETER LESCHNITE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A series of announcements by the federal government which may indicate the Canadian economy is on the road to recovery combined to give prices on major Canadian stock markets their largest one-week advance of the year in active trading this week.

The Toronto stock market's industrial index, a prime indicator of market movement jumped 9.76 points, its sharpest one-week gain of the year, to 271.62.

Early in the week the federal government announced Prime Minister Trudeau would visit Washington Dec. 6 for trade talks with President Nixon.

Then Tuesday said it appears the economic uncertain.y which has been hurting the market in recent months is on the brink of being at least partially resolved and many investors who in the past have remained on the side of the market now are buying issues which are currently underpriced.

The government also announced that Canada's gross national product (GNP) rose 2% per cent during the third quarter of this year and that foreign exchange reserves during the month of November climbed $202.2 million to a record $5.27 billion.

At New York, prices posted one of the strongest advances of the year as Wall Street closed higher for the second consecutive week.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index climbed 8.49 points to 175.21.

Combined volume on the two exchanges was 4.98 million shares, combined with 4.44 million Iso last week.

The Toronto market recorded one of its most active weeks of the year. Total volume was 10.35 million shares, up sharply from 7.46 million last week.

At New York, the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 key blue-chip issues gained 40 points closing Friday at 850.26.

Much of the trading activity came from reports from the Group of Ten meeting—the richest free countries in the world—that the United States might consider devaluing its dollar as much as five per cent over for other major trading nations will put a high value on his currencies.

Volume at New York was 92.81 million shares, compared with 36.97 million last week.

Gold issues continued to lose ground in slow trading this week. The current international monetary crisis has created a highly volatile bullion market with extreme price fluctuations.

The Toronto market's gold index dropped 6.69 points to 145.35.

A renewed interest by U.S. investors in Canadian resources companies helped boost western oil issues sharply higher during the week.

Observers said there has been an increasing number of buy orders for western oil issues from U.S. investors in recent weeks.

At Toronto, the western oil index was up 11.82 points to 201.36.

Trading activity increased in the base metal sector of the market. Analysts termed much of the trading as "bargain-buying" with investors purchasing issues which have been over-sold in recent months.

The Toronto market's base metal index was up 2.44 points to 72.28.

Volume on the Montreal stock during the month of November was 4.7 million shares, down from 5.3 million a year ago.

Value of issues traded totalled 193 million, a drop of $5 million from a year earlier.

The Canadian stock Exchange reported volume during November for totalled 13.3 million shares, compared with 23.2 during the same month in 1970. Value of issues traded fell to $12.6 million from $18.3 million the year before.

At Toronto, total volume during November was 22.2 million, a drop of 28.5 per cent from 31.4 million during the same month last year. Dollar value declined to $207.8 million from $307.7 million in November, 1970.

The Vancouver Stock Exchange reported a total volume of 35 million shares in November, down from 62 million during the same month last year. Value was $22 million, down from $46 million last year.

Trenton Plane Destroyed by Attack on Pakistani Airport

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

A De Havilland Twin Otter from Trenton's 434 Squadron was destroyed on the ground in an early morning raid on Islamabad International Airport, West Pakistan.

Details of the damage are unavailable but one source said today "the plane (valued at $500,000) may well be a complete write-off."

No Canadian military personnel were injured in yesterday's Indian assault on the aerodrome at the Pakistani capital. Canada maintains nine peacekeeper observers, an aircrew of three and ground crew of five along the Indian-Pakistan frontier as part of a United Nations observer group.

No decision has been made to withdraw the contingent from the war-torn area, Military spokesmen said today the servicemen are safe and the Indian attack on the compound with a big red cross on the roof.

The report of the destruction of the Canadian plane remained Canada by other than Canadian military sources and was not confirmed by the department of national defence until late this morning.

Late yesterday another Trenton plane, a 436 Squadron Hercules piloted by Major Ed Stone of Trenton, failed in a bid to evacuate Canadian and British citizens from Dacca, East Pakistan.

The plane on a round-the-world mission was diverted from Bangkok to East Pakistan for the special mission but the crew decided not to take the aircraft into the Dacca field because it was under fire at the time. The Hercules has now returned to Bangkok to resume its regular schedule.

Canadian government officials are now in the process of securing details from the United Nations on the Islamabad raid and the future of the observer group.

PM Visits Nixon

Sweet Reason Faces Its Test

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is heading for Washington today with an olive branch that Canadian officials hope President Nixon will grasp with both hands.

Canadian policy, in the face of aggressive protectionist measures invoked by Washington four months ago, has shifted to a line of sweet reason from moods of anger and frustration early in the fall.

Officials say in hand-wringing privacy that much depends on how the two principals get along. They last met in 1969 and today's meeting was requested by Mr. Trudeau after some show of hesitation.

The Canadian line in late-afternoon talks in the White House —the two leaders in one room, cabinet members and officials in another—will be for co-operation rather than confrontation.

By the time they all get together for a working dinner in the evening, Ottawa officials hope everybody will be pals.

While the discussions were unlikely to get into details of what the Canadians call irritants in Canada-U.S. trade relations, the team from Ottawa will show willingness to negotiate seriously after Christmas for removal of practices that annoy Americans.

First among the offers, implied or explicit, is a readiness to remove or modify protective safeguards for Canada appended to the 1965 auto trade pact. After three years of balking, Canadian government authorities now agree those devices are redundant.

Although they may never be discussed in detail today, the Canadians also are willing to give ground on other irritants.

Nevertheless, the Canadian government has come around to the view that it is in its own interests to give some ground.

The alternative, officials say, would be hardened U.S. protectionist measures, retaliation by other countries and a damaging deterioration of world trade.

Canada, which counts on exports for 20 cents in every dollar of national wealth generated, stands to lose more proportionately than almost any other country.

For example, Canadians are coming around to the view that Canada ought to remove a tariff on imports of U.S. military equipment, as the U.S. has on Canadian imports.

Further, there is a willingness to increase—possibly double — the value of goods Canadian travellers may bring back from the U.S.

The Canadians will also say that they are ready to pursue talks on trade in oil, gas, coal, electricity and water, which Canada suspended in the fall.

At the same time, however, Canada wants genuine give-and-take bargaining to follow the White House talks—on each issue separately—to avoid the politically-dangerous impression that it is getting nothing in return.

Nevertheless, the Canadian government has come around to the view that it is in its own interests to give some ground.

The alternative, officials say, would be hardened U.S. protectionist measures, retaliation by other countries and a damaging deterioration of world trade.

Canada, which counts on exports for 20 cents in every dollar of national wealth generated, stands to lose more proportionately than almost any other country.

South Korea Says North Plans War

SEOUL (AP) — The South Korean government proclaimed a state of emergency today, charging war preparations by North Korea.

President Chung Hee Park said South Korea must "re-posture" its defence arrangements in view of mainland China's admission to the United Nations and uncertainty over the level of future United States support.

A government proclamation informed South Koreans their constitutional freedoms may be restricted and "social unrest that risks the national security will not be tolerated."

The major opposition party, the New Democrats, took issue with Park. A party spokesman said the president's aim appeared to be the security of his government rather than the security of the nation.

Park said North Korea has increased infiltration of armed agents to South Korea and has carried out a massive military buildup of more than 2.5 million troops, including a regular military force of 500,000 men, a militia of 1.4 million and 700,000 youth guards.

He noted that China as a UN member is supporting North Korea's demands for dissolution of the United Nations Command in Korea and the UN Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea.

"We must foresee thorny trials that might come in the path of our national security," he said.

Rebels' Regime Is Recognized

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

India recognized the Bangla Desh rebels as the legal government of East Pakistan today and claimed victory in a major tank battle on the border with West Pakistan.

The Indians also claimed more advances into East Pakistan, while Pakistan reported the capture of 20 Indian border posts in Kashmir.

The tank battle began Saturday night when the Pakistanis sent two brigades of infantry and an armored regiment against Indian defensive positions in southern Kashmir near the West Pakistani border, an Indian spokesman in New Delhi said.

He said the battle raged throughout the weekend and that 37 Chinese-built T-59 tanks were destroyed by the Indian Army.

"Our losses were minor in the fighting," the spokesman added.

He said in East Pakistan Indian forces "are making significant advances and we have captured some territory northeast of Sylhet and south of Comilla."

The two cities are key supply centres for Pakistan's army in the East. Sylhet is 123 miles northeast of Dacca, the East Pakistan capital. Comilla is 50 miles southeast of Dacca.

Reuters news agency said India claims so far to have knocked out 61 Pakistani tanks. The spokesman gave no figure for Indian tank losses.

Earlier, Indian Defence Secretary K. B. Lall reported Indian forces on the eastern border of East Pakistan captured the key rail and communications centre of Akhaura, 60 miles east of Dacca. But Pakistan said the attack on Akhaura was repulsed and insisted its lines along East Pakistan's western borders with India remained firm. It added, however, that "the enemy is dominating" some of East Pakistan.

The fate of India's military operations in East Pakistan, Maj. Gen. J. F. R. Jacob, told a news conference in Calcutta today that there has been heavy fighting around the town of Jessore in the southwest, Hilli in the northwest, and Akhaura.

Jacob said Indian forces were "leaning on the defences" of the heavily-fortified garrison at Jessore. 18 miles east of the border, and that they were a mile from the town.

Jacob said 317 Pakistanis have been killed, 199 wounded and 425 taken prisoner in fighting in East Pakistan so far. He said in Akhaura a battalion of Pakistan's crack frontier force was wiped out.

Jacob described Indian casualties as "light to moderate," but declined to give figures. He also praised the determination of the Pakistani troops and appealed to them to surrender.

Associated Press correspondent Dennis Hevesi reported from the East Pakistani town of Darsana that India poured regiments of troops, tanks and guns across the border and that they met only desultory resistance from steadily-retreating Pakistani forces.

He said Pakistan's rear-guard troops, overwhelmingly outnumbered, apparently gave up wide expanses of border territory virtually without a fight, and that the Indians met really determined resistance only at a few defensive strongpoints.

Indian military spokesmen also reported their troops advancing at many as 15 miles into West Pakistan at a point west of Jaisalmer, which is in the Indian section of Kashmir. But they had not launched a major land invasion of the west.

Meanwhile, Pakistan spokesmen in Rawalpindi reported their forces had taken 20 Indian outposts along the border running through the disputed state of Kashmir and inflicted 400 Indian casualties.

The Pakistanis said their troops had advanced beyond the Indian town of Dewa, along the middle-easterly line dividing Kashmir, and that other units were fighting on the outskirts of Poonch, on the road to the Vale of Kashmir.

Pakistani planes continued strafing attacks against Indian cities, including Agra in central India, site of the Taj Mahal. The Indian government ordered the 318-year-old marble monument draped in jute so the gleaming white pile could not guide Pakistani pilots on night raids on security Air bases.

The Indian spokesman said the Pakistanis continued to bomb Indian military airfields, but "the damage is very light and we have suffered no losses."

One Pakistani B-57 was shot down during an attack on the airfield at Amritsar, he said, bringing the total of Pakistani planes claimed by India to 48. Indian losses remained at 17, the spokesman added.

Russia Blocks UN Call for Ceasefire

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter)— The Security Council planned a final bid today to obtain unanimous agreement on an India-Pakistan ceasefire resolution after the Soviet Union vetoed the second such attempt on 24 hours.

Plans to transfer the problem to the General Assembly, where there is no veto, were held in abeyance while delegates continued consultations on a last-chance draft introduced by Italian Ambassador Piero Vinci.

This would have the 15-nation council call upon the governments concerned forthwith, as a first step, for an immediate ceasefire, leaving other questions — including implicity, withdrawal — until later.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush has been insisting all along that the council must demand withdrawal of forces and a ceasefire.

Rather than have the UN paralyzed, with Russia refusing to permit any ceasefire resolution to go through and the U.S. insisting that ceasefire must be accomplished by withdrawal, members north feel willing to compromise their principles in order to free the assembly, observers said.

Bombs and Bullets Take Toll in Ulster

LONDONDERRY (CP) — British troops shot four guerrillas during a pre-dawn gun battle and rioting in this Northern Ireland city today while in Belfast troops patrolled a tense district after Protestants and Catholics clashed.

The Army said 300 troops taking part in the Londonderry raids on suspected terrorist strongholds came under fire from snipers, shot back and hit three of them.

The soldiers also shot a man with a gasoline bomb during the raids on the Roman Catholic Bogside and Creggan districts, the army said.

Those hit escaped or were dragged away before troops could determine the extent of their casualties, an army spokesman added.

Troops fired rubber bullets and nausea gas to drive back rioters hurling bottles and stones. One soldier was slightly injured by a bottle.

The raid netted a shotgun, five carbines and some ammunition, the army said.

In Belfast, soldiers kept the peace after Protestant and Catholic crowds clashed in the streets, each side blaming the other for a bombing that killed 16 persons.

Troops rushed Sunday to the Dancaire Gardens area in Belfast, where Catholic and Protestant districts meet, and separated crowds, ending stones, battles and shots at each other.

No casualties were reported in the brief clash near the site of a bomb blast Saturday night in a Catholic pub.

That explosion, the worst single terror incident in Ulster's 28-month-old political-religious strife, touched off Catholic suspicions that a long-feared Protestant "backlash" had begun.

Denying this, police and army investigators believe the blast was a mistake by guerrillas of the pro-Catholic Irish Republican Army. But the IRA blamed it on Protestant extremists, and a number of Catholics accepted the IRA version.

A man claiming to represent a Protestant extremist organization phoned a newspaper to say his group had bombed the bar. He said the bar was a hangout for IRA leaders. Police said they had never heard of the Protestant group he mentioned — the Militant Ulster Branch of the Empire Loyalists.

Ulster Prime Minister Brian Faulkner flies to London today for high-level talks as Irish Republic Premier Jack Lynch meets the press—and possibly Prime Minister Edward Heath — elsewhere in the British capital.

But the two Irish leaders have no plans to meet each other on their respective one-day visits.

Children Clear Rubble

Children remove rubble from McGurk's Bar in the Roman Catholic section of Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sunday, as a British soldier is seen in the background. Officials said a 50-pound gelignite bomb exploded in the bar Saturday night, and the death toll has now risen to 16, the largest number of victims in a single incident to date in the Northern Ireland disturbances. Most of the victims died when they were buried under tons of rubble.

School Floats Brighten Parade

By JERRY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's annual Christmas parade is for the youngsters, but many of them aren't content with just looking on.

Saturday's hour-long production, considered the most successful yet, owed a lot of its appeal to floats entered by children themselves, working through their schools.

Four elementary schools, two secondary schools, and Ontario Hydro for the first time did their part to inject colour and music into Saturday's events.

And they did it on a low budget, too, with $10 each from the parade committee and donations of equipment and materials from parents and teachers.

Prince of Wales youngsters depicted the first Canadian Christmas with a Indian theme on all four floors. Like most of the others, the children worked on their final floats three weeks, after school, during recesses and early in the mornings.

"It made the children realize how much work and time is involved in a parade," said their principal. The backdrop for the float will become a divider in the school library as a souvenir of the occasion.

Queen Mary's involvement was different. Of the 30 pupils followed pied piper Bobby Ginsby through the streets.

The troupe of youngsters with Ginsby was a last-minute replacement, as they all had to be from one school," said their principal.

Mr. Ginsby met a record of his selection to teacher Miss Judy Patterson, and she rehearsed the 8-to-10-year-olds every day for five weeks. Some of the selections were sung in unison; others involved pupil soloing.

Mr. Ginsby met the youngsters about a half hour before the parade began, and put them through their paces in a brief rehearsal.

Prince Charles School made a special effort to create a dynamic float with plenty of movement, using the theme Jumpin' Jack. Cub parents volunteered tee services to make all the toy soldiers' costumes, and the youngsters decorated the float themselves.

Park Dale children chose animals of the world for their theme, with each from each continent, including a polar bear symbolizing the north pole and a penguin for the south.

The children made the animals' heads themselves from papier mache and their costumes were made of bold sheets stained by parents. Music was provided by the school's three choirs: primary, intermediate and senior.

The animals' head have been saved for display at the school, "but it lasted such a short time," said teacher Mrs. Carol Moskaluk.

Park Dale will have one permanent souvenir of the occasion—the best school float trophy.

OSD carried off the parade marshal's trophy for their float on UNICEF. It featured a big map of the world globe that impressed all viewers, and 12 children dressed in the costumes of countries of the world.

The junior residence counsellors and the children in the junior school worked together and a ball on their float. The metal framework for the globe was made by the boys in the vocational shop, and the janitors took over to glue bed sheets on the framework for the painted map. The youngsters involved, some 60 to 70 of them, were in the 5 - to - 10 - age group.

Moira Secondary proudly displayed the hovercraft made in their shops, and snow princess Kim Thompson. But a sour note struck after the participants were dismissed at the Post Office and the float was towed back to Bert Bleecker Auditorium. A Moira banner was stolen and the hovercraft jarred loose and fell to the street.

The boys in the shops did a good job of welding, so the craft wasn't damaged, but some of the aluminum sheeting was dented and those aluminum sheets cost $10 apiece, reported a teacher.

Centennial Secondary's band was out in full force on a float to provide music for the parade.

Belleville Idea Warmly Received

LAHR, West Germany — The civic administration of this Black Forest town is now giving serious consideration to a Belleville proposal that the two communities become sister cities.

In an interview last week, Lahr's city manager Adolf Kohler stated "our council has taken this suggestion with very much interest." A decision on the Belleville offer is expected to be made within the next few weeks.

Belleville city council resolved earlier in the year to make the sister cities bid in view of the common connections both Belleville and Lahr share.

For both the Canadian Armed Forces comprise a significant segment of the local economies both having pending Town council vote there on whether to accept a Belleville bid that the two municipalities become sister cities.

Herr Adolf Kohler, city manager of the West German town of Lahr, has been doing research on Belleville recently in preparation for a Canadian military garrisons recovery. Both Belleville and Lahr are situated along principle transportation corridors both are in the 30,000-35,000 population range and expanding.

Herr Kohler already has close attachments with Canada on a personal basis, his son having attended an Ottawa school on scholarship.

He disclosed Lahr's municipal council "feels the program can be realized and that a real partnership can be developed.

"Any exchange," he said, "should not be just for official people but for students and other people too." The city manager expressed particular interest in the development of educational exchanges between the young of both municipalities.

Another driver facing charges is Francis Farrell, 25 of been charged with failing to yield.

Police report he was proceeding south on Charles St. at 11.23 p.m. Saturday, when he hit a car travelling east on Victoria.

The driver, Mrs. Aileen Agnes Boyle, 43 of 336 Bleecker Avenue, was treated for cuts and bruises and released. However, her passenger, Mrs. Signe Orne, 80 of 358 Bleecker was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with possible head injuries. Stake-out Nets Two PICTON, (Staff) — Two Picton youths were apprehended Friday night and charged with breaking and entering following a telephone call to police that Scott's Gift Centre, Main Street, had been entered through a side door.

Picton Police Chief George Hall said Larry Elsworth Ferguson, 18, and Bruce James Stringer, 18, both of Picton have been charged in connection with the incident.

The youths were apprehended through a stake-out organized by Gift Centre Owner Ronald Scott and two fellow employees.

The store had been entered the weekend before when a side door was inadvertently left open at night.

By deliberately leaving the entrance unlocked a second time, two clerks employed by the Gift Centre were able to observe two persons enter the store at 11:45 p.m. Friday. A prompt call to the town police led to the apprehension of the youths two hours' charges of breaking and entering.

Chief Pitt today heartily commended the work of Mr. Scott and his cohorts.

"It was very much appreciated and I deplore people of these things and contacted police immediately so we would be able to get these people."

A break-in at the County Centre this weekend now is under investigation also, said Chief Pitt.

IN MEMORIAM

KNOTT — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away Dec. 6, 1966.
Sadly missed by his loving family, Ida, Ken, Ruth, Jean and Grandchildren.
That only He, the Great Provider, Who sees all our needs and knows our pain,
Can, the hours without her see too clearly
Or measure the depth of the loss we've sustained these each day.

For mother whom we treasured,
Who left us two years ago today
Remembered by daughters Hallie, Dale and Ruth.

AYLESWORTH — In loving memory of Mom, a dear daughter and sister passed away December 6, 1970.
Mom, I think of you always,
In sorrow we now you shalmd.
Your memory is our keepsake,
Our hearts were closed broken,
When God took you away.
Sweet memories are all we have left,
So peacefully free from pain,
You could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.
Sadly remembered by brother Ken.

BELLIS — In loving memory of our sister, Evelyn (Bill) who passed away December 6th, 1969.
Sweet memories, sacred and dear,
When life with loved ones we enjoy,
She speaks in the wind and the rain,
In the flowers and all nature,
Bringer her back to us again.
Sadly missed by brothers, sisters and their families.

HOLOWAY — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather John, who passed away Dec. 6, 1970.
A light is gone from our household,
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon his love has given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven.
Sadly missed by sons, daughters and families.

HOLOWAY — In loving memory of a dear husband and daddy who passed away Dec. 6, 1969.
Sadly missed by wife Ethel,
Lonely is our home without him,
Both so kind, to bear the sorrow,
Always remembered by Ann.

Mobile Village 'Premature'

A request from Murray Township Council to deal with location of a mobile village has been termed "premature" by Bert Kenny, planning director of the Quinte Planning Board.

A letter to the board was received at Thursday night's regular monthly meeting, requesting comments on a proposal by Morris Karten and Karten Metals to establish a 15,000 square foot mobile home village, individual septic services and wells, parking and recreation facilities on a 25-acre parcel of land on Part Lot 11, Concession A in the Township of Murray.

Council expressed concern for the overall impact of such a proposal for their immediate area and for other municipalities forming the Quinte Planning Area.

They asked planning staff to comment on the Karten plan. The Board's employees are required to include mobile home studies in the official plan for the Quinte area.

Mr. Kenny said "the question of mobile homes, villages and parks are of major concern for the whole area, but should be referred to the official study.

No Business Like Snow Business

Although only a light blanket of snow lies on Prince Edward County, snow enthusiasts and winter sportsmen made the most of it last weekend. Several families enjoyed snowmobiling on a snow covered slope on Glenora Road.

Instruments Stolen

A $2,650 musical theft has been reported by Daniel Brown, Apt. 221, 245 Bridge Street West.

Mr. Brown had been storing a large quantity of musical instruments in a camper trailer. Sometime between 12:30 a.m. Sunday and 12:40 p.m. of the same day, a thief or thieves broke into the trailer.

Included in the list of stolen items are seven cymbals, a snare drum, two bass drums, a pair of tom-toms, drum chairs, a microphone, and a lane player.

Tracking Dog Captures Convict

MILLHAVEN (Staff) — A prisoner classified as "very dangerous" returned missing from Millhaven Penitentiary, has been captured.

Thomas William McCauley of Calgary and Edmonton, was found "in bush country near the prison by Belleville OPP tracking dog Sabre, handled by Constable Edward Arthurs.

Constable Arthurs reported McCauley had apparently holed up in a cottage, south of Highway 2 and north of Highway 33, overnight following his Friday escape.

Donald Clarke, director of the prison, said the 34-year-old prisoner forced a lock on the door of the print shop where he works and fled through a service opening in the fence of the new prison.

Police threw up a highway cordon, inspecting every car that passed through the area.

McCauley, serving more than 25 years for a series of crimes including armed robbery, assault, escaping custody and forgery, apparently left a coat under a blanket to look like a sleeping inmate in his cell. Prison officials believe this, plus aid by an accomplice, afforded the prisoner the opportunity to escape.

Rock Opera Here Dec. 11

The Canadian Rock Theatre with its production of Jesus Christ Superstar, after a tour of the United States, will be appearing in Belleville as part of their Canadian tour.

The show will be staged in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium, Saturday, Dec. 11.

Tickets for the afternoon matinee at 2:30 p.m. will be $2.50 a person and tickets for the evening show will be $4.

"The company, composed of many of the cast members of the Toronto production of Hair, has been winning wide acclaim in every city they have visited" said a Toronto theatre critic.

The cast has performed in Hollywood, Las Vegas and Los Angeles and has been called, "a most sensitive cast, never overdoing a beautiful piece of work".

Jesus Christ Superstar is a musical, visual journey of the last days of Christ.

Various organizations have labelled the production as blasphemous, while many ministers have played the recording in their churches.

A minister, reviewing the show for the Las Vegas Review said, "an emotional experience in sound that amazingly made the first 45 minutes seem like 15".

The show will be a combination of Jesus Christ Superstar, Godspell and some original material.

Tickets for both performances are available at Sam the Record Man and Leo Hayward Cameras on the Quinte Mall.

Pair Flee Burning House

ELTON (Staff) — A brother and sister fled to safety Friday as flames engulfed their two-storey frame home at Mount Pleasant.

Bloomfield firefighters rushed to the scene shortly after 8:30 p.m. as the house occupied by David Dennison and his sister Dorothy Dennison was caught up in flames.

The tenant house was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McKinnon.

Bloomfield fire chief Ralph Roiston noted that there was little hope of saving the house but five fighters battled smoke and flames to prevent the fire from spreading to a farm home only seven feet away.

The burning house was also adjacent to Mount Pleasant church hall which was saved from fire through the prompt action of Bloomfield firefighters. A tank truck and a pumper were dispatched to the scene and about 1,500 feet of hose unreeled to reach water in a quarry on a nearby hill.

A Patriot

Creditiste leader Real Caouette is a staunch Canadian. His political views are not everyone's cup of tea, but no one can accuse him of being anything else but a patriot. He is for Canada and for Confederation and for Quebec remaining part of the national whole. And he is a Quebecer.

Given his espousal of these principles Mr. Caouette has no use for the kind of radicalism that means subverting the Government and ultimately overthrowing it violently. He has no use for instance for the demagogue of Montreal labor leader Michel Chartrand and (in recent days) of Quebec Federation of Labor president Louis Laberge.

They speak of revolution, Mr. Caouette points out, but he reminds us that such talk would not be tolerated openly in countries like Cuba or Czechoslovakia. Mr. Caouette believes in the democratic process and we are happy to have such a forceful spokesman in that cause. Too many of our politicians are either unaware of the vocal mouthings of the extreme left wing, or the more subtle left-wing propaganda that comes via the CBC, or else they choose to ignore it. Not so Real Caouette.

Revolutionaries?

When we hear those vociferous groups who call themselves revolutionaries in Canada we wonder, given their kind of lifestyle, just how much they would be capable of if it came to the proverbial bit. Would they take up arms Fidel Castro style, live a life of hardship in the mountain country, always on the move, and fight as they go?

Listen Dr. Jerome Ch'en, considered one of the world's leading experts on Mao Tsetung. He was addressing a University of Toronto workshop session in which James Gibson of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs advocated a course in modern Chinese history in the high schools, and he said Maoist groups here and in the United States seemed to worship the man more than they understand his doctrines.

Then he added: "I think they especially don't understand the principles of Maoist revolutionary discipline. You really can't smoke pot and adopt the sexual attitudes and lifestyle detached from society, and organize a Maoist revolution."

If there is one thing that seems part and parcel of the Communist Chinese society it is a respect for work and discipline. Even executives and professional men must take their place in the ranks of those who labor in the fields. If there are any communists here who have fallen for a life of indolence we have not heard of such. Of course we are not forgetting the excess of the so-called cultural revolution, or the Red Guards and the harassment of British and other foreign diplomatic personnel a few years ago, but today there is no hint of such conduct and in its place we see a giant land whose people for the most part are engaged in satisfying and productive labor. It is a way of life we cannot see our so-called revolutionaries engage in.

Innocents Die

The fundamental ethnic and religious differences of the Indians and Pakistanis — with the refugee problem the catalyst — have led to the current hostilities — have all the ingredient of a brutal confrontation in which the innocent are the principal victims.

It is said that the Pakistani army has been razing villages in the frontier zones so as to give an unrestricted field of fire for its gunners shelling Indian targets. But for the Pakistanis this is nothing new, for it was similar destruction of civilian property that contributed in part to the vast influx of refugees into India.

Now there is word of even greater excesses — of villages ravaged, the menfolk shot and young women raped by Pakistani troops. The survivors reportedly were "lectured" for aiding East Pakistan rebels. The latter are supporters of the imprisoned Sheikh Mujibur Rahman who seeks independence for East Pakistan under the name Bangla Desh. Rahman, the elected leader of East Bengal which forms a large part of East Pakistan, was jailed in the early days of the revolt against the jurisdiction of the central Pakistan government a thousand miles away across Indian territory in West Pakistan.

The pattern is all too familiar in this conflict. As wars go it involves relatively minimal action and a relatively small region of India and Pakistan. But the refugee flow is one of the greatest in history and the concern for human values among the military virtually non-existent. Suddenly one recalls the straying of refugees on the roads of France by Nazi aircraft, not to mention the wanton killing of European people by Nazi today, and the absolute inhumanity of some elements of mankind becomes sickeningly apparent.

Chretien's Statement in House

Status of Canada's Indians Is A Complex Issue

By FARMER TISSINGTON

OTTAWA — Canadian Indians had a day in Parliament last week but it's doubtful if their cause was advanced very far by the unexpected four-hour debate.

It came when the NDP's Indian affairs' critic, Frank Howard, attempted to move a motion for concurrence in a report prepared several months ago by the Commons' committee on Indian affairs. Even the hallowed Commons' question period went by the boards as the full time of a short sitting day, Wednesday, was devoted to the problems of our native population.

The arguments were not new but at least the speeches debate did serve to alert other Canadians to the growing militancy of Indians in Canada. And it also spurred Indian and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien into making the best speech of his parliamentary career.

A quiet man by preference he answer questions in French because he feels his mastery of English is less than first class. Mr. Chretien delivered an impassioned defense of his department's policies and he gave the greater part of it in English. His reward was the longest and loudest period of desk-thumping from Liberal MPs he has been greeted any government speaker for a long time.

Everyone agrees that the Indian problem in Canada is both growing and complex. It also is clearly apparent that the Indians themselves are divided on how to deal with it. Almost all the exact time when Mr. Chretien was speaking, the president of the National Indian Brotherhood, George Manuel, was holding a press conference in the reporters that Indians were rapidly losing confidence in the minister.

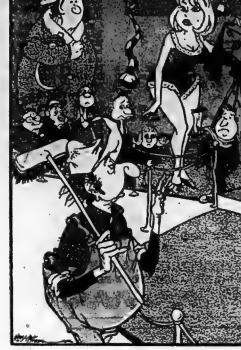
The following day I talked with Canada's only Indian member of Parliament, Len Marchand of Kamloops-Cariboo, to get his reaction to the debate and to the Indian problem generally. As the risk of being branded as a sort of Indian Uncle Tom, Mr. Marchand came out quite firmly for Mr. Chretien and the policies which have been pursued during the past few years to improve the lot of Indian people.

For instance, he rejects completely a recent suggestion from Mr. Manuel that Indians will only be properly represented in Parliament if they alone elect a set number of Indians at each general election. Mr. Manuel based his recommendation on the situation in New Zealand where the native people, the Maoris, elect four of their own number to Parliament.

"This would be tokenism of the worst sort," Mr. Marchand suggests. "It would make other Canadians feel that Indians were not capable of winning election through the normal channels and methods. It would much rather have 264 MPs with at least some knowledge of the Indian problem than a small handful of native people whose chief function would be to speak and vote only on matters of interest to Indian people."

Mr. Marchand was in New Zealand last March and made a point of discussing the Maori situation. He found that Maori opinion is toward getting away from the special status given to them in the Parliament of that country. They believe that if their candidates ran freely in elections in competition with other New Zealanders they might elect as many as eight.

Mr. Marchand thinks that about half a dozen Indian people have contested federal elections in Canada and though he is the only one who has so far succeeded, he considers the day when six or more native Canadians may be sitting in the Commons.



"Indian organizations are becoming much more sophisticated and Parliament is listening to them as never before. We have many competent and articulate leaders and some of them are here. Many more will appear before long," the Kamloops-Cariboo MP believes.

Here are some of the more encouraging things he feels have benefitted Indian people in the past few years: The budget of the department has risen since 1968 from $139 million to $274 million. Of this amount, about 87% per cent is going directly to benefit Indians in educational, health and welfare areas. Many more Indians are being employed directly by federal and provincial governments in jobs of responsibility.

The regional director of the federal department of welfare is an Indian, David Greyeyes. And he does have some of the position by a civil service selection board which included as one of its members, another prominent Indian leader, Harold Cardinal.

"There are no overnight solutions to the complex problem of Indian people," Mr. Marchand emphasizes. "I recall my uncle telling me a few years ago that Indians will have to get away from the habit of looking to the government every time they have a problem. He said we would have to learn to solve our own problems as equals with the white people, and I agree with him."

The solutions are still far off. But with this sort of attitude, and with native leaders of the calibre of Mr. Marchand, there is a great deal of reason for hope.

"Hiya, Smitty!"

Young 'Over-Coddled' Says Outdoors Man

By JO CARSON in The Globe and Mail

There is too much handholding of today's youth when they want to experience the rugged life in the wilderness, Ed Karras, author and school business administrator from Indian Head, Sask., said.

"I feel youngsters are being coddled too much," he a said. They must learn to go out on their own and not at government expense.

"Things are rough in the bush and there has to be a certain amount of self-confidence and skills if one is to survive."

Mr. Karras speaks from experience. He set out for the north of Saskatchewan in 1932 "after I finished Grade 11. You couldn't buy a job."

During the next seven years, Mr. Karras and his bride-to-be came trappers and foraged off the beautiful but at times hostile land.

His book, North to Cree Lake, recalls his long saga. It also has become a lesson in survival lore.

The author describes in detail the work on the trapines and the killing of the animals.

"This was a'l for survival —I don't understand men today taking off in snowmobiles to chase deer in the fawning season. Our meat is lean and young and open, the hunters take off in the machines to run deer foxes for sport — I don't understand it."

Mr. Karras feels that there should be some way of keeping the wilderness for the conservation vehicle but "it is the greatest menace to wildlife today".

The author, who admits to being a hunter, has put the guns and traps aside.

"It is my contribution to conservation. I work on my friends and I have converted a few to using the camera. There's not that much game."

The cruelty of trapping and killing is described frequently in his book.

Today's wanderers in the wilderness will not find the isolation which was the lot of the Karras in the Thirties.

"The choppers drop down with American hunters and fishermen. They have built lodges all over the place and don't mind paying $100 a day to fish and hunt. They ruined their country and now come up here."

Mr. Karras lectures to boys and girls who plan canoe trips into the wilderness. He tells them of the times when a man could spend seven months without seeing another man.

But although the silence has been broken nature's demands on man in this domain are still rigorous.

"When you breathe out a n there is the sound of tearing paper you hear. But the country has fallen below 60 degrees. It is a time to conserve one's energy and wait out the cold."

He is pleased, as a school administrator, that his book has become popular in Indian schools.

"There aren't many books which tell about the way things were for them. What do they know about racing cars and electric stoves?"

Mr. Karras, a spare man who looks as though he belongs in a business suit, is puzzled at the attraction of the wilderness shown by women.

He explains:

"When I came to my hometown of Yellowgrass, the women had read my book. But the men . . . well it probably indicates that there are few pioneers. It takes an oddball to go into uncharted country — to look for a new life in the next range of hills — on his own, without government help."

Editor, The Intelligencer,

It is now two years that the city's Recreation-Arena Committee has been operating the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club at the corner of Queen and Dufferin Streets. This operation has been an unqualified success to date, and the city's involvement in tennis leaves no doubt that this increasingly popular summer sport will continue to flourish.

The past summer has been successful in many regards.

1. The tennis season had a very early start, since the Recreation Department was able to commence preparatory work on the grounds very shortly after the snow and ice had disappeared.

2. Ample opportunity was provided all age groups to play at any time.

3. Tournament participation, both within and outside the city was encouraged by the Recreation Department.

4. Acquisition of a ball-throwing machine proved very helpful to the tennis instructors as well as the younger players.

5. The recreation director, Mr. Lorne Williams, forged an instructional program for these younger members in spite of the late resignation of the senior instructor who decided to work elsewhere. And the program was a success as can be attested by the numbers enrolled in the various age groups.

6. Players were allowed to elect an advisory group to have a voice in the operation of the Club.

7. Steps have already been taken to develop an instructional corps within the city to ensure a ready supply of instructors, both junior and senior, for future seasons.

The late maintenance of the grounds and the en - tous - cas courts throughout the past season deserves commendation.

9. This fall has seen the inauguration of regular indoor tennis at Ben Bleecker Hall and it is to the Recreation Department's credit that this valuable function has been added to tennis program. Having been involved in the organizational and financial problems of tennis in this city for many years prior to 1969, I can assure you that the City's participation resulted not only in the salvation but in a reawakening of interest in this valuable summer sport. The recreation department, under its director Mr. Lorne Williams, is to be congratulated for the outstanding job done the past two summers. The director's enthusiasm has been amplified by his associates in the tennis programs Mrs. Louise Sunvers in 1970 and Mr. Robin Heggie in 1971.

Tennis, one of the more rewarding experiences for all ages is on the upswing in Belleville, primarily as a result of the City's involvement through their well organized Recreation Department, and ably supported by the Recreation - Arena Committee.

My sincere congratulations to all concerned in the improvement of the health and well - being of Belleville's citizens, young and old, and may their talents be put to use in many other recreational areas.

David MacDonald, Conservative MP for Egmont, is the current Commons champion in length of questions during the daily question period.

A recent example:

"In light of the prime minister's answer last week in the House, to the question whether or not the full Gray report plus other studies would be tabled in the House that an announcement might be made within a week or 10 days in view of the fact he then said outside the House that perhaps he would wait until after the annual meeting of the Conservative party before releasing these materials, inasmuch as this suggestion seems to indicate that these materials are available, and since the prime minister might wish to distinguish between the recommendations contained in the Gray report and other reports now available to the government's own decision, would the government give consideration to making them available early enough both for consideration by the people of the country and also . . ."

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux cut off Mr. MacDonald.

Of the other paper, however, Mr. MacDonald got a more brisk written question: How many persons are employed in the Privy Council office and how many of them won their jobs through a civil service competition.

The written reply furnished by Barnett Danson, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau:

"A total of 238 personnel are employed in the Privy Council office. Appointments were made in accordance with the provisions of the Public Service Employment Act. Officer appointments are made, according to merit, by the Public Service Commission through competition or other processes of selection established by the public service or from outside. Support staff positions are filled by the Privy Council office under delegated staffing authority from the Public Service Commission and are subject to audit. New support staff positions are filled from outside the public service,one merit, through referrals by the local Canada Manpower centres, unless the regional director of the Public Service Commission advises that sufficiently qualified candidates available from lay-off lists, latent skills or other talented partmental competitions."

At the request of Henri Laliberte. Social Credit MP for Compton, Statistics Canada and the manpower department have supplied these figures in a Commons reply:

In the week ended Sept. 18, there were 87,000 young people who could not find jobs after leaving school earlier in the year. The number of working married women was 1,581,000. The number employed per cent over the age of 65 was 127,000.

Natural Christmas Trees Gain in Favor

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Christmas tree sales in Prince Edward this year have created job opportunities for more than 2,000 cherubs willing to accept seasonal employment as tree toppers.

Yule trees this winter are being purchased earlier and with greater enthusiasm than usual, according to Vincent Gentile, owner of Vincent's General Store, Bridge Street.

The Christmas forest, surrounding Mr. Gentile's store consists of Scotch pine, spruce and balsam trees, priced at $3 and up.

Before Christmas Day, approximately 1,000 trees will have been brought from Pontypool, north of Bowmanville, and sold to Prince Edward shoppers preparing for the holidays.

Mr. Gentile and his teenage son, John cut their own trees since experience has taught them each customer is seeking "a perfect tree" and good selection is important to sales.

Although Scotch pine trees have remained top sellers because their needles remain on the branches indoors, the spruce is becoming a close runner-up this season.

Mr. Gentile explained that the trend toward spruce trees reflects the buyers' preparations for an old-fashioned Christmas brightened with the traditional spruce tree. He added that trees seem to be selling faster this year as more and more families reject the artificial trees that have become so popular.

"The average family feels that a real tree is a true Christmas tree," he remarked. "An artificial tree would be like an artificial turkey," commented the store owner.

Mr. Gentile noted that "nobody prospers" from the sale of artificial trees, often made in foreign countries, and said that the sale of fresh-cut trees boosts the economy in comparison.

A second tree salesman, Merle Hagerman of RR 1, Picton yesterday predicted he will sell approximately 750 spruce, pine and balsam from his lot near Waring's Corners.

He said that about one half the trees sold is pine while the other is spruce and balsam. Balsam trees are in particular demand with his customers since their needles cling to the branches when the trees are moved indoors.

Mr. Hagerman explained that most of his trees are priced at $5, although some smaller ones do sell for $1.25.

The trees brought to Prince Edward by Mr. Hagerman are cut at Palmer Rapids near Madawaska.

Christmas trees imported from New Brunswick will be sold this year from the Wellington lot of Ross (Paddy) Wight.

Mr. Wight said yesterday he will sell New Brunswick balsams this season as well as Scotch pine and spruce.

He noted that Scotch pines have been best sellers for him in past seasons because they retain their needles indoors owing to special spray treatments.

The spray also makes these trees 90 per cent fire proof, an added safety feature against holiday hazards.

Mr. Wight, who cuts his trees from a 2,000 acre stand of forest near Carrying, said inquiries for Scotch pines were made by some satisfied customers in mid-summer.

He sells most of his yule trees from the Belleville market and expects this year to find buyers for 500 spruce and Scotch pine. Prices begin at $3, and go up depending on the size of the tree.

Bloomfield area farmer George Vincent grows approximately 15 acres of trees in Bloomfield and cuts them as the market demands.

Mr. Vincent reported a few early buyers already have selected trees, mostly for outdoor use, and predicted that in the next two weeks 75 to 80 per cent of the trees he sells will be Scotch pine.

These trees are favorites with customers who plan to haul out the bulky several weeks in advance of Christmas Day. The sellers cling securely to the branches for a minimum of work.

The spruce is a very popular last minute tree among buyers not concerned with keeping it indoors until shortly before Christmas.

Prices on Mr. Vincent's trees range from $2.50 to $10 for a 20-foot spruce ideal for outdoor lighting displays.

Two giant Christmas trees already have been erected in Picton, one at the cenotaph and another at the Armory Mall.

Christmas lights strung from small trees are decorating the dooryards of many Prince Edward homes this week as the holiday spirit enlivens December.

Labor Council Conference

Harry Simon, centre, regional director of organization for the Canadian Labor Congress, met with local labor leaders here for a weekend conference. With him are Ian Reilly, president of the Union Label Trades Department, CLC, and Reg Loucks, (right) Quinte District Labor vice-president.

CLC Spokesman:

Inflation Not Labor's Fault

Inflation can't be laid at the door of labor, a union organizer said yesterday in Belleville.

The inflationary spiral is the result of high taxes and high profits, not high wage settlements, said Harry Simon, regional director of organization for the Ontario region of the Canadian Labor Council.

The federal government's policy of increasing unemployment to fight inflation has left the country with both inflation and unemployment, Mr. Simon told a regional conference of CLC at the Tops Motel on Sunday.

"To prove that wages are not the cause of inflation or of unemployment, the steelworkers have presented a comparison between rates paid on a number of jobs in plants organized by their union in the Hamilton area with rates paid for similar jobs in other parts of Canada. The survey shows that wages in that area are at least 20 per cent less and yet their unemployment rate is amongst the highest in the country."

The presidents of large Canadian corporations receive an average salary of $100,000 annually and last year about half these presidents got 11 per cent salary increases.

"Compare this with the average wage increase of 7 to 8 per cent for a worker receiving $100 a week and you can then judge who is responsible for the increase in the cost of living," said Mr. Simon.

But the labor movement is strongly opposed to wage controls, Mr. Simon asserted. If wages were controlled, interest rates, rents doctors' fees and every other service would also have to be controlled. And price controls would require an inspector in every business establishment and a policeman in every store.

Mr. Simon proposed three measures to stop inflation and increase employment.

"Stop the foreign takeover of our economy. We have become a branch plant economy depending on decisions made by people in foreign countries as to whether our workers will have jobs or be thrown into the ranks of the unemployed.

"Control interest rates. Increase old age pensions, lower taxes for low income groups, eliminate the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials, build more low cost housing for low income groups, provide a $2.50 minimum hourly wage."

Mr. Simon's third proposal was a four-day week.

"Why can we not now begin negotiating for a four-day week, eight hours a day, with the same take home pay?" he asked.

This, he said, could create more than one million new jobs by 1975 or 1976.

The labor leader called for a positive reaction to change on the part of CLC members.

The union movement, he said, is failing to make adjustments to keep up with a rapidly evolving technology.

"We still have 120 national and international unions when half this number would suffice," he said.

Since the end of World War II, 90 per cent of new jobs created have been in the so-called services and white collar industries, but only about 8 per cent of white collar workers in private businesses and industries are organized.

"Unless the labor movement is prepared to accept the challenge and do an effective organizing job among these workers, we will continue to lose out not only in numbers, but in prestige and influence," Mr. Simon declared.

Local Couple Mark 65th Anniversary

For the first time in 140 years a 65th wedding anniversary was celebrated at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday. To help Mr. and Mrs. Chester Adams of 13 Johnson Street commemorate their marriage which took place 65 years ago on December 4, the Loyal group of the Women's Guild held a gala party at the church.

Attended by 160 guests from here and from many distant points, the party was marked by outstanding decor with yellow and white as the color scheme. Taking the place of honor at the centre of the main table was the white anniversary cake flanked by flowers and candelabra. The small tables were centred with white flowers.

Tea was poured by Mrs. A. L. Sutherland, Mrs. W. H. Walker and two nieces of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Robert Rollins and Mrs. Hazel Masterson. Serving refreshments were Mrs. Leon Collins and Mrs. Doreen Bateman, grandchildren, Mrs. Jack Winstanley and Mrs. L. Grills, nieces and Mrs. Ivan Rollins.

The guest book was looked after by two great grandchildren, Cheryl Bateman and Janet Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams were the happy recipients of a boutonniere and corsage of red roses from their great grandchildren, a money tree from their nieces and nephews, a chime clock from members of the family, and innumerable floral arrangements from nieces and nephews and from St. Andrew's Guild and the Loyal Group.

In addition to many other gifts they received letters of congratulation from the Queen and Mayor Dr. Russell Scott, a scroll from the province of Ontario and messages from William Davis, Robert Stanfield, Lee Grills, Dr. R. Potter, Prime Minister Trudeau and the Progressive Conservative Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams were married in Grayville, Manitoba and spent the first seven years of their married life farming there. Later they lived in Uxbridge for four years before moving to Thornsburg where they resided for 29 years. They have been living in Belleville for the past 25 years.

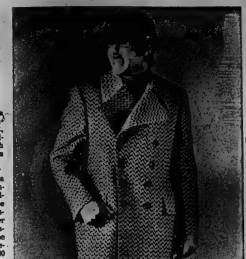
Canada-U. S. Relations Topic Discussed At Study Guild

"Can Canada survive another century as a neighbor of the USA?" asked Mrs. H. C. Seldon in introducing the topic for discussion at the November meeting of the Women's Study Guild. Each member wrote down her opinion, and, following presentation of the program was asked how she had voted.



The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Reynolds, who was assisted by co-hostesses Mrs. O. B. Ragsdale and Mrs. Hans Wien in serving lunch. Many gifts were brought for the mental health patients in hospitals at Christmas time. Mrs. George Mayhew presented an excellent devotional service and based her talk on the desirable qualities of friendly neighbors.

Mrs. Seldon traced briefly the history and parallel development of the USA and Canada from the founding of Jamestown in 1607, and of Quebec in 1608, to the present time. She pointed out that the crossing of the country by Alexander Mackenzie in 1793 was a forerunner of the idea of Canada spanning the continent, and gave some of the historical facts of the long and harsh struggle in making Canada a nation.

Following the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, there was a period of a single North American economy, but this ended with the outbreak of the Civil War. In 1867 the provinces of Canada united in order to ward off the powerful pressures of its neighbor to the south. References are frequently made of the 4,000 miles of unprotected border, but it was noted that following Confederation, the USA replaced its forts with high tariffs. Using the book Neighbors Taken for Granted which contains articles written by three Canadians and three Americans, Mrs. Seldon read expressions of opinion from these well-known authors. She concluded that although the two countries are traditionally friendly neighbors, when one country is overwhelmingly powerful, problems and tensions are certain to arise.

Mrs. Charlotte Lockyer in conducting the topic, referred to an interview with John Kenneth Galbraith, world famous economist, which was published in Weekend Magazine during Canada's Centennial Year. The questions and answers aroused spirited discussion among the members. Quotations from a speech given by Mr. Galbraith on Oct. 23 to a club in Toronto presented his thoughts on the effect of the U.S. surcharge on the Canadian economy, thus leading the discussion to the most recent developments between the two countries.

In conclusion, Mrs. Seldon posed the question raised by Peter Hutchison in July Maclean's magazine—"How much are Canadians prepared to pay in work, money, goods and above all, in wisdom for the privilege of being a Canadian?"

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can marriage cure insomnia?

NOT UNLESS being married solves the major problem that has been plaguing the insomniac. And yet, marriage could be a therapeutic step for someone who suffers from insomnia. A girl, for instance, who can't sleep will struggle along by herself with her difficulty. If she ever marries, though, she might be impelled to seek professional help, since she wouldn't want her husband to be kept awake, too, by her insomnia.

Is a deep voice more sincere than a shrill one?

OF COURSE NOT. Only the person speaking, whether his voice is deep-toned or shrill, determines how sincere he is. Many people, however, do measure credibility by whether a person's voice rings true or not, and the deeper the voice, the more they are apt to believe what they are told. Perhaps this fallacy originates with the misconception that the deeper a person's voice is the closer it comes from that "source of truth"—the heart.

Are decisions hard for everybody?

NO, it depends upon the decision and the decision maker. A baby is hungry, he decides he wants to eat; simple, eh? Now, you're low man where you work, you stuff the suggestion box with ideas. You wonder why the boss doesn't snap up your reconnaissations, right? Perhaps you might be a bit slower offering them if you had to accept the responsibility and the consequences should any of your suggestions or decisions prove to be a bust

Retirement Groups Hold Autumn Tea

TWEED — An interesting and successful autumn tea and bake sale was held November 30, by the combined St. Andrew's Women's Group and the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church Tweed, in the church basement.

These are two small groups, and a team effort was most evident, and displayed and it was deemed a great success.

The parish hall was very graciously greeted at the door by president Mrs. Roy Hall and by Mrs. E. Hawken. The tables were attractively arranged and the tiny cookies and delicate sandwiches were enjoyed by all. There was a large array of foods for sale as well which included buns, bread, jellies, pastries, pies and cakes, as well as homemade candy.

The conveners for this event were Mrs. Art Bachellier and Mrs. Laird Morton.

The tea and bake sale was held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. These combined groups only meet once a month, and hold their meetings alternately, which works out satisfactorily for all the members.

Delinquency High

SASKATOON (CP) — More than 50 per cent of juvenile delinquency in the city occurs with children from one-parent homes, Vivian Fisher of the Saskatoon One Parent Group told a meeting on poverty here.

"Life is made for married people," she said. Even schools were oriented toward children with two parents, and children from one-parent homes tended to be left out of many activities.

She urged school organizations and churches to make special efforts to include children with only one parent in social activities.

The One Parent Group in Saskatoon is composed mainly of mothers who are raising children in a fatherless home, she said. Most of the group are on welfare.

Steaming Hot Soup for Winter Days

By ALICE BENDOFF

Soup's appeal rises in ratio to falling winter temperatures. Hot, steaming bowls of soup for lunch or supper hit that cold spot with delicious warmth. Try a mixed vegetable soup seasoned with garlic, tomato, basil and Spanish stuffed olives, or a hearty fish chowder, the latter an excellent main dish, too.

VEGETABLE SOUP STEW
2½ quarts water
2 cups diced carrots
1 cup diced potatoes
1 cup sliced onions
1½ cups fresh cut green beans or 1 (9-ounce) package frozen green beans
2½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon saffron
½ cup broken spaghetti
1 cup pimiento-stuffed olives, halved or sliced
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) red kidney beans, drained
2 to 4 cloves garlic, crushed
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

¼ cup tomato paste
1 tablespoon dried basil
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil

Bring water to boil in kettle. Add carrots, potatoes and onions. Cover and cook 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are just tender. Stir in spaghetti, olives; cook until spaghetti is tender. Stir occasionally. Add kidney beans and heat to serving temperature.

Meanwhile, blend remaining ingredients in large serving bowl or soup tureen. Gradually add 1 cup of soup, stirring rapidly. Pour in remaining soup. Recipe is for about 3½ quarts. This excellent soup is main-course with hot, buttered French bread.

HEARTY FISH CHOWDER
¼ cup olive oil
1 cup chopped onion
1 medium carrot, sliced
2 cups beef bouillon or stock
1 large potato, cut in 1-inch cubes
1 bay leaf, crushed
2 cups milk
1 pound fresh or frozen cod fillets
1 pound fresh fish fingers, thawed, cooked and deboned
1 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Heat oil. Add onions and carrots; chill until tender. Add next three ingredients. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, 20 minutes. Add milk and cod. Cover and cook 10 to 15 minutes longer or until potato is tender. Add shrimp and olives; heat to serving temperature. Remove from heat and add lemon juice. Serves six to eight with an exceptionally flavorful chowder.

SPANISH KIDNEY BEAN SOUP
1 pound dried kidney beans
2 quarts water
¼ pound bacon, diced
2 medium onions, chopped
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon vinegar
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
¼ cup chopped pimiento-stuffed olives

Wash beans and water; bring to boil. Boil two minutes; remove from heat. Cover and let stand one hour. Meanwhile, combine bacon and onions; brown lightly. Drain off all but two tablespoons drippings; add to beans along with garlic and vinegar and one teaspoon salt. Bring to boil, then cover and cook over low heat one hour, or until beans are very tender. If necessary, add more water. Stir occasionally during cooking. Mix in olives; simmer five minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves six.

Successful Living

A Policeman's Job Is Not A Social One

By DORIS CLARK

You don't usually think of a policeman as being helpless: at least I don't. But the 60ber night Inspector Burd of the Hamilton Police Force said it simply wasn't fair to expect a policeman to stop a man from beating his wife!

Oh, sure, he can be called in an emergency, walk in on a situation and, if he's lucky, prevent any more damage than has already been done on one specific occasion.

If the woman wants to she can even haul her abusive husband into court to be given the warning of his life about never, never letting the same thing happen again.

But it will happen. Just as long as two people who are living with each other do not have sufficient self-control or maturity or love for one another to prevent it, these forces-losing, word and fist-slinging adversaries will go at it again and again.

So Inspector Burd consigns it and them to the social workers! He says policemen were not hired to settle disputes in domestic relations. Social workers make a career of helping people get along with one another; or providing them with an out. Communication and a periodical recap on how things are going are often what's needed.

If the cap fits, and you'd like to read my previous blasts, its which are the soul secret of getting that way, keeping that way

I'll send you my leaflets: (1) Simple Reducing Diet and (2) Low Calorie Menus and Recipes (each 20 cents). Then I'll expect a weekly report which includes a loss of one or two pounds.

Takes patience, time, will power. You've got them all. And you're also a prisoner of a longer, healthier life once you've shaped up.

Dear Doris: I am enclosing a sample of the floss-length dress that I will be wearing at my wedding.

Tell me, is it necessary for the bride to wear a veil or is an arrangement of flowers and jewelry acceptable? If I must wear a veil, what color would you suggest?

Marjie

Dear Marjie: A soft chiffon print in pastel fall colors (lilac, your bridesmaids' flower bouquets, and an artistic cluster of tiny fall flowers) seems made to go together. Either that, or a hat of matching material would be lovely.

The only time a veil should be worn is when the wedding is formal and the wedding gown is traditional white. The veil is never any color but white.

There's always something to do about which you're not sure. A letter to Doris, a Canadian social worker, is a step in the right direction.

IODE Holds Yule Party

The December meeting of the Argyll Chapter IODE took the form of a Christmas party held in the Officers' Mess, Belleville Armories which was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The Chapter was host to the Senior Citizens of No. 3 Turnbull St. that continuing a tradition which was started when No. 3 was first built.

The Regent Mrs. H. Kokesh welcomed everyone and invited the guests to a tasty buffet which was followed by an evening of cards and fellowship. Each guest returned home with a Christmas box of assorted cookies made by the members.

W. James expressed the appreciation of the guests for the evening. Gifts were given to the residents and a draw conducted to shut-ins at Christmas time.

The Chapter is looking forward to a busy winter program which includes the Fantasy Ball on Saturday January 29, 1972.

Ann Landers

Parents' Influence Should Be Foremost

Dear Ann Landers: We have two adorable grandchildren. They mean the world to us. But we have such a poor relationship with their parents (both professionals with superb educations) that we have given up visiting the children in their home. Added, to that problem, when the youngsters come to see us there is always a scene when their parents come to pick them up. They don't want to leave.

My daughter-in-law is beautiful and talented, but her looks and brilliance are badly overshadowed by her miserable disposition. She has completely dominated our son, the way her mother has dominated her father. The girl's parents want nothing to do with her. She cannot get along with anyone. Our grandchildren are. I'm afraid, going to be ruined by this impossible, ill-tempered woman.

From time to time, my husband and I have had to come up with considerable money to save their poorly-selected investments. Instead of gratitude we get abuse. We would not bail them out if we weren't concerned about our darling grandchildren. We feel an obligation to protect their future. Please, Ann, tell us how to maintain a good relationship with our grandchildren in view of the obstacles. My husband and I are —Bewildered In Cleveland

Dear B.: It's a mess. I can smell it all the way to Chicago. My advice is to avoid conflict with your son and his wife even if it means biting your tongue. Don't criticize them, don't make any suggestions, don't try to train their children, and don't try to save their "poorly-selected" investments. Get over the idea that you can raise these children. You can't. Their parents are going to be the major influence in their lives, not you and your husband. Just give them plenty of love and affection whenever you have the opportunity and enjoy them.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 13 and have a problem I need help with right away. I know you are busy so I will come right to the point although I could write a book on what I have gone through with my crazy mother. She has been married and divorced three times in the last nine years. You wouldn't believe the screwballs she picks for husbands. After her last divorce she swore on a Bible that she wasn't going to look at another man for at least five years.

Yesterday she told me she is going to get married again. The guy she picked this time makes the last lunatic look good. I told her if she marries him I am going to pack up and go live with my grandmother. I nearly flunked last year because I couldn't get a night's sleep with all the yelling, fighting and drinking in the house. Mom's current boyfriend is a lush and has Roman hands and Russian fingers, if you know what I mean. Do I have a right to make his decision even if I am a minor? My grandmother is a lovely person. Grandpa died three years ago. She is lonely and she wants me. Whose permission do I need? —Three Strikes Is Out

Dear Three: If your mother refuses to give you permission, your grandmother should talk to the judge who granted your mother custody when she divorced your father. Good luck, dear.

Top Candidate for Cancer Virus Found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Medical scientists here have discovered what they say "appears to be most likely candidate yet" for a human cancer virus.

If their conclusions are proven correct by experiments now under way, the scientists' discovery would become a powerful new tool in the search for the dread disease's cause and a possible cure. It would be important new evidence supporting the still-unproven idea that each person is born with the seeds of cancer and that a cancer virus particle helps "turn on" the disease.

The discovery by doctors at Los Angeles Children's Hospital, the University of Southern California and the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., is certain to fuel further a quiet but intense controversy that has grown out of the search for a human cancer virus.

The Los Angeles group's findings are to be published in the Dec. 22 issue of Nature, the British scientific journal. The article will come five months after researchers at the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex., announced in July they had found the first human cancer virus.

But National Cancer Institute scientists who studied the M.D. Anderson findings published a paper in Nature in September claiming the virus is from a mouse and not a human virus.

Dr. Elizabeth S. Priori of M.D. Anderson Hospital said in a telephone interview she remains convinced her group's virus is not a mouse virus but that it may share some common properties with mouse virus. She said an article would be published "any day now" in Nature reporting studies with an electron microscope that show the M.D. Anderson virus is different from mouse virus.

The M.D. Anderson candidate is known as the ESP virus, after Dr. Priori's initials.

Dr. John B. Moloney, head of the National Cancer Institute's special virus program, confirmed the latest report of a possible virus, saying it indeed is a "candidate" for a human cancer virus.

In yet another study, a Georgetown University medical research team reported Sunday what it said was the first long-term maintenance in culture of a human malignant tumor in which large amounts of virus have appeared.

"It is the first time a C-Type (cancer) virus has been observed in the primary tumor before culture and in the cell line after extended culture," Dr. Sarah Stewart, Georgetown pathology professor, told a news conference.

"We have a good share of the evidence to prove that we have a human virus and not one accidentally interjected from animals."

Although virus particles have been discovered in human malignancies before, Dr. Stewart said they have been unstable and have not been in sufficient quantity to work with.

"Our virus is growing in tissue culture," she said. "We now have the means to produce the virus in sufficient quantity to isolate, purify and work with it."

Dr. Moloney said:

"This is a very interesting finding by Dr. Stewart but she has an awful lot of control work to do. It must be determined whether the virus is human, certainly whether it is a causative factor in certain human tumors.

"She must develop certain controls to determine whether the virus particle is indeed human. . . .

Canadians Make Breakthrough in First World Cup Ski Race

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (CP) — Eight thousand spectators saw the first World Cup ski race of the year Sunday with a predictable win for Switzerland and a strong breakthrough for Canada into the top 10 of world downhill specialists.

Led by 23-year-old Bernard Russi, last year's world downhill champion, with a time of 1:55.91, the Swiss team placed three of its members in the top four. The sweep was only interrupted by second-place Heinzer of Austria.

The top Canadian was 19-year-old Jim Hunter from Calgary, ninth with a time of 1:55.91. His showing was a significant achievement.

"I was really hoping to finish in the first five," Hunter said.

"In practice Saturday I was fourth best behind the Swiss. But the Europeans seem to be able to pour on extra speed for the race.

"I am learning this row and I'll produce a win before the end of the year."

Alpine program director Al Raine from Montreal said this was the first time that a member of both the men's and the women's Canadian teams had finished in the top 10 in the first World Cup competition of the season.

"Hunter is the best 18-year-old in world competition today," Raine said. "We've broken a psychological barrier with his placing, and now the teams will go into the next race with a lot more confidence."

In the women's downhill Friday, Betsy Clifford, 18 of Ottawa finished eighth.

"It was my best downhill ever," Betsy said. Her time was 1:09.58, just three seconds slower than the winning time of Annemarie Proell of Austria.

Betsy won two World Cup slalom events last season, but was unable until now to compete effectively for the World Cup over-all medal because of low placings in the downhill events.

Judy Crawford of Toronto finished 17th Friday in a run that, the 20-year-old coach said, was pointless.

Diane Culver, 19 of Montreal finished 38th out of 100 competitors. Ginny Honeyman, 18 also of Montreal, was 47th.

"These young skiers haven't had the experience on a tough, fast downhill course before," Raine said. "They just need a few more races to get the feel of it."

In the men's downhill, 17-year-old Reto Barrington of Calgary was 27th in a field of 83 racers. Barrington still has stitches in his head from a bad fall last week.

Paul Johnson, 19 of Toronto finished 47th. Russell Goodman, 18 and Aldan Ballantyne, 20 both of Montreal, were 58th and 60th respectively. All three went off course into soft powder snow, costing them valuable seconds.

Doug Woodcock of Oshawa was disqualified when he went off course on the final leg.

Cats Topples Oaks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stung by a 7-4 upset victory at the hands of Orillia Terriers Saturday night, first-place Galt Hornets went on a scoring rampage and hammered Oakville Oaks 11-4 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game in Galt Sunday.

In another game at Kingston, Woodstock Royals scored a 4-3 overtime victory over the Aces and in other Saturday action, Kingston whipped the Quinte 9-3 in Belleville and visiting Barrie Flyers beat Owen Sound Greenshirts 5-3.

Galt, which leads second-place Barrie by 9 points, got two-goal performances by Bruce Reiter, Ron Hengerl and Skeeter Teal with singles going to Dave Cressman, Moe Calland, John Beechey, Gary Brennan and Vance Miller.

Sonny Pennington made 24 saves behind a stingy Galt defence to register a shutout.

At Kingston, Pete Darcy's goal at the 38-second mark of sudden-death overtime gave Woodstock the victory. It was his first goal since tipping with the Royals last week.

Steve DeGurse, Dennis Jones and defenceman Lloyd McKee got the other goals for Woodstock, who trailed 3-1 early in the third period.

Charlie Convery, Bob Clayton and Dave Gilmour scored the Kingston goals before 1,668 fans.

In Orillia, Jon Weeks scored twice to lead Terriers to their upset 7-4 victory. Al Osborne scored twice for Terriers who outshot Galt 38 to 29.

Generals in Command

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Niagara Gorals jumped to a 3-0 first-period lead then went on to beat Hamilton Red Wings 6-3 and maintain their hold on first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league Sunday.

In other games, the visiting Toronto Marlboros edged Peterborough 6-5, Ottawa 67s scored a 6-3 home-ice victory over Kitchener Rangers, Montreal and Niagara Falls tied 3-3 in Montreal and St. Catharines and London played to a 4-4 sawoff at St. Catharines.

Six players shared in the scoring in Oshawa's victory over ninth-place Hamilton at Oshawa. They were Jack Lynch, Nelson Pyatt, Bob Ferguson, Walt Johnson, Steve West and Mike Amodeo. Ed Gilbert, Jim Kaleff and Terry Ryan got the Hamilton goals, as the Generals outshot the Wings 44-26.

At Peterborough, Marlboros rallied for two third-period goals to maintain their lead on second place, one point ahead of Ottawa.

Billy Harris' 20th goal of the season proved to be the winner for Marlies. Ivee Stasi scored twice with singles going to Marty Howe, Dave Gardner, George Ferguson and Harris.

Shades of Beliveau

One Sabre Cuts Up Stars

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Punch Imlach scratched his head and recalled the last time a rookie scored three goals in the same game he got his first in the National Hockey League.

The reason for the flashback was rookie Craig Ramsaye's three goals Sunday night against Minnesota North Stars, the only goals scored by Buffalo Sabres in their 3-1 win over the North Stars.

"I can remember only one other rookie getting a hat trick the night he scored his first NHL goal," Imlach, the Sabre coach, recalled. "That was Jean Beliveau, a long time ago."

Beliveau was the Montreal Canadiens star centre who retired from the Canadiens June 1, 1971, after scoring 1,219 points in regular-season play, including 507 goals.

He was an amateur with Quebec Aces in the Quebec Senior Hockey League before he was given two tryouts by the Canadiens. However, according to the NHL Guide, Beliveau scored his three goals in his second tryout when he got five goals in three games, including three in one game and two in another.

In the first tryout in the 1950-51 season, he scored one goal and an assist in one of two games.

Imlach, who coached Beliveau in Quebec City, would like to think that the same illustrious career awaits Ramsay. Buffalo's second choice in the NHL's amateur draft last June after starring for Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

"It was great to see the kid get three goals," Imlach said of Ramsay, recently called up from Cincinnati Swords of the American League. "Ramsay's was a genuine hat trick too — three straight goals."

In other NHL games Sunday, New York Rangers downed Vancouver Canucks 8-3, Boston Bruins beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, Chicago Black Hawks blanked Los Angeles Kings 7-0, St. Louis Blues edged Detroit Red Wings 2-1 and Philadelphia Flyers shut out California Golden Seals 2-0.

Saturday night, the Canadiens routed the Canucks 7-0, the North Stars edged the Flyers 2-1, the Bruins defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 5-3, and the Red Wings dumped the Kings 5-1, the Blues beat the Sabres 5-1 and the Penguins stopped the Rangers 4-2.

Buffalo's win, the second in three games after snapping a 10-game losing streak, also broke a nine-game undefeated streak for the North Stars, leaders in the West Division.

The North Stars scored first in the fifth minute of the opening period, but goalie Roger Crozier shut them out the rest of the way. Two of Ramsay's goals came on his only two shots in the first period while he got the third in the final.

The Rangers, after their upset loss Saturday to the Penguins, rebounded Sunday against the Canucks as the high-scoring line of Rod Gilbert, Jean Ratelle and Vic Hadfield each scored a goal.

The Gilbert-Ratelle-Hadfield line has accounted for at least one goal in 22 of the Rangers' 25 games and has a total of 53 goals and 74 assists.

The Canucks, who had 13 goals scored on them in their two weekend games, could only muster 19 shots Sunday on New York goalie Gilles Villemure, But Dale Tallon, Wayne Connelly and Ron Stewart got goals against him.

Ken Hodge, off to a slow start after scoring 43 goals last season, paced the Bruins with two goals against the Penguins. Phil Esposito picked up three points on a goal and two assists and he now has 44 points, tops in the NHL scoring race.

Ken Schinkel and Keith McCreary were the scorers for Pittsburgh. The Boston win moved the Bruins into a tie for second place with the Canadiens, two points behind the first-place Rangers. Ironically, the Bruins are ahead of their pace last season when they amassed a record 121 points.

Chicago broke a two-game losing streak with its win over the Kings, who have lost 21 of their 27 games, tying one. Bobby Hull and rookie Darryl Maggs each scored two goals for the Hawks, as goalie Gary Smith recorded his second shutout.

A fight between two of the Blues' Plager brothers and some fans behind the St. Louis bench marked the game at Detroit. Bob and Barclay Plager were involved in the brawl which ended when police intervened and removed the spectators. In between, Garry Unger, with his sixth goal in as many games, and Jim Roberts scored to deflate the Red Wings. Tim Ecclestone, a former St. Louis player, scored for Detroit.

At Philadelphia, Larry Keenan scored and Jimmy Johnson scored power-play goals within a 48-second span to give the Flyers their shutout victory over the Golden Seals. Gary Dornhoefer got the other goal for the Flyers who snapped a seven-goal winless streak.

Crystal Palace Shines Through Stormy English Soccer Scene

LONDON (CP) — Struggling Crystal Palace provided the major upset in a stormy English League soccer program Saturday when it handed champion City, Derby County hammered out a 3-1 win in its vital top-of-the-table clash at home to Manchester United a 6-1 thrashing.

Nottingham Forest 3-2 to stretch its lead to five points, Derby's triumph enabled it to slip into second place on goal average.

Manchester City's three England forwards Francis Lee, Colin Bell and Mike Summerbee, and Derby's Kevin Hector had their names taken in a hectic clash on a day when at least a dozen Division I players were booked.

The matches left Manchester United well clear at the top of Division I with 31 points, while Derby County, Manchester City and Leeds United were bunched together with 27 points in second place.

Palace, which has been languishing at the foot of Division I, seemed to have an improbable task against a Sheffield United side good enough to slam seven goals past Ipswich last week.

But goals by John Hughes and Tony Taylor, John McCormick and an own goal by Len Badger saw it through to its first triumph of the season. Bill Dearden netted for Sheffield United for whom a disastrous day was capped by the booking of skipper Eddie Colquhoun.

Five players were booked in the Manchester City match when Derby's John McGovern also had his name taken towards the end.

But there was no stopping Francis Lee scored City's only goal from a second-half penalty.

Manchester United was lucky to snatch both points against Nottingham Forest which had not won at Old Trafford for 10 years.

Goals by Scottish international Denis Law, returning after an ankle injury, and Brian Kidd gave United a 2-1 half-time lead which was quickly increased by a second goal by Kidd.

But Forest fought back when substitute Martin O'Neill added to an earlier goal by Peter Cormack and the Nottingham club twice went near to equalizing in the closing minutes.

There was plenty of action too in the Second Division on a day when a total of 41 players were booked and two sent off in 64 English League matches.

Norwich, with a 1-0 win agay to Swindon Town, increased its lead in the Second Division to two points over Millwall when the London side could manage only a single point from a draw at home to Burnley.

The two main contenders for the Scottish League Division II title both scored easy home victories. Clydebank Celtic beating Kilmarnock 5-1 and Aberdeen whipping Ayr United by the same margin.

Celtic still leads the standings by one point from Dundee which was toppled from the top spot by Hearts a week before.

Aberdeen scored four second against Ayr with two goals in a nine-minute first-half spell. The first resulted from an error by Ayr fullback Murphy who tried to clear centre-forward Miller but turned the ball just under the crossbar.

Davis Robb made it 2-0 in the 23rd minute with an acutely-angled shot and Ayr's misery in Aberdeen side was worth every goal as it went on to complete its 5-1 thrashing.

For Celtic, Jimmy Johnston and Kenny Dalglish each netted twice, with the fifth goal coming from Dixie Deans.

Four of the Celtic goals came in the second half with Kilmarnock managing to reply only once with a 25-yard drive from Mathie.

But Hibernian and Hearts, third and fourth in the table, maintained the pressure on the leaders with a 2-0 win away in St. Johnstone and a 3-2 triumph at home to Dundee United, respectively.

Rams' Ellison Sin to Saints

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Rams running back Willie Ellison started things off in grand style against New Orleans Saints Sunday.

The five-year veteran raced 80 yards for a touchdown early in the first quarter and then rushed 197 yards in 26 carries for a National Football League record.

"It took a lot of extra effort and stamina. It's the happiest day of my life," the 209-pound Ellison said after the Rams ended New Orleans 45-28.

Ellison's performance stole attention from a 105-yard kickoff return by Travis Williams and three touchdown tosses by Roman Gabriel.

He broke the standard of 243 yards set by Gale Gilchrist of Buffalo against the New York Jets on Dec. 12, 1963 in the American Football League and the mark of 237 yards established twice by former Cleveland standout Jim Brown.

"Just about everybody told me at halftime that I would get the record," he said. "The line did a tremendous job of blocking and Gabriel did a great job of selecting plays against the New Orleans defense."

In other contests Sunday, San Diego Chargers upset Minnesota Vikings 16-14, Boston England Patriots stunned Miami Dolphins 34-13, Philadelphia Eagles edged Detroit Lions 23-20, Cleveland Browns nipped Cincinnati Bengals 31-27, Atlanta Falcons defeated Oakland Raiders 24-13, Houston Oilers swamped Pittsburgh Steelers 29-3, Washington Redskins crushed New York Giants 23-7, Denver Broncos downed Chicago Bears 6-3, Green Bay Packers and St. Louis Cardinals battled to a 16-16 tie and Baltimore Colts blanked Buffalo Bills 24-0.

In Saturday's game, Dallas Cowboys rearmed over New York Jets 22-10.

San Francisco 49ers entertain Kansas City Chiefs in tonight's televised game.

The Dolphins' setback spoiled the record of the undefeated Conference's East Division title and moved them into a showdown with the Colts.

Minnesota's unexpected loss dropped them into a tie with the National Conference's Central Division crown.

Quarterback Jim Hadl led his team 63 yards in seven plays to set up the go-ahead touchdown as the Chargers bounced from behind to reel off 20 points in the final quarter. With the Steelers' upset over the Lions, Minnesota could have secured the Central Division laurels by winning.

Several Miami miscues and precious penalties by rookie Jim Plunkett snapped the Dolphins eight-game victory streak.

Mercury Morris took the opening kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown to give Miami an early lead, but Plunkett then fumbled eight straight passes to set up a touchdown. Plunkett, who celebrated his 24th birthday Sunday, completed 16 of 23 passes for 223 yards.

Leroy Kelly plunged four yards with 1:48 remaining as the Browns averted the AFC-Central Division title, which they will retain even if they lose their final two games.

Norm Bulaich's one-yard lunge capping a 78-yard march broke a scoreless tie in the third period and veteran Johnny Unitas then fired a five-yarder to Ray Perkins for his first scoring pass of the season.

The Falcons intercepted Daryle Lamonica three times and recovered three fumbles in handing the Raiders their second straight loss. Atlanta also suffered five turnovers but sealed the win after Oakland couldn't score after grabbing a fumble on the Atlanta four.

Washington staggered four interceptions in the first half and Larry Brown scored twice while picking up 129 yards. New York's touchdown came when Otto Brown recovered a blocked punt in the end zone.

The Oilers' rigid defence turned three Terry Bradshaw interception mistakes into points as safety John Charles made his fourth and fifth interceptions and defensive tackle Leo Brooks pilfered another.

Pete Liske hit Kent Kramer with a five-yard pass in the final minute as the Eagles came from behind to ruin Detroit's NFC Central Division playoff aspirations. Moments before Liske's scoring pass, the Lions went ahead 20-16 on quarterback Greg Landry's five-yard sneak.

Lakers Unbeatable...with West

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers are unbeatable with Jerry West in the lineup. Without him, they are less than a .500 club.

West, one of the National Basketball Association's all-time leading scorers, has played in 21 games this season—and the Lakers have won them all. He missed five games, and Los Angeles won only two of them.

The streaking Lakers, led by West and Happy Hairston with 22 points apiece, reeled off their 17th consecutive victory Sunday night, trouncing Portland Trail-blazers 123-107.

They now are only three short of the league record of 20 victories in a row, set last season by Milwaukee Bucks.

The Lakers could tie the Bucks' record by beating Houston Rockets Wednesday, Golden State Warriors Thursday and Phoenix Suns Friday, and they could surpass the mark with a victory over Atlanta Hawks next Sunday.

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, Phoenix stretched its winning streak to seven, routing Golden State 130-97, and Seattle SuperSonics defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 99-91.

In the American Basketball Association, it was: Memphis 117, Virginia 113, and Denver 118, Pittsburgh 114.

The Lakers, in handing Portland its 21st setback in 25 games, took an early 19-10 lead on the shooting of West and Gail Goodrich, who finished with 20 points, and never relinquished it. With Chamberlain contributing 27 points and 17 rebounds for los Angeles.

Gary Gregor topped Portland with 25 points.

Phoenix overpowered Golden State by outscoring the Warriors 66-32 in the second half.

Seattle dissipated a 12-point lead and fell behind Cleveland 84-81 with 5¼ minutes remaining, before storming back to overtake the Cavaliers.

In the NBA Saturday night, it was: Milwaukee 108, Chicago 105; Boston 117, Houston 107; New York 120, Buffalo 90; Atlanta 128, Philadelphia 109; Detroit 108, Cincinnati 98, and Phoenix 128, Golden State 82.

Watson on the Ropes

TORONTO (CP) — Whipper Billy Watson has been subduing wrestling villains such as Gene Kiniski, The Sheik and Killer Brower for more than 30 years. Now he faces a new challenge, possibly his toughest.

WHIPPER WATSON

Watson, 55, was struck by an automobile last Tuesday while putting a fireplace screen into the trunk of his car. His left leg was mangled, and he is encased in a cast from toe to groin. More than three hours of surgery were needed.

Doctors at Northwestern Hospital are saying little about Watson's condition, but it seems probable that his wrestling career is finished.

The hospital has forbidden phone calls and visits, except those from relatives and close associates. Otherwise it would be swamped with visitors, since Watson has made thousands of friends over the years.

His "good guy" image in the ring has been enhanced by his community endeavors and his celebrity work, particularly on behalf of crippled children.

"He always came across as a fine person and he did it work because that was really him," Promoter Frank Tunney said in a weekend interview. "He had dignity even when he was being provoked. One thing about the ring was too much trouble. The last autograph had to be signed, the last stik kid had to be visited. That kind of thoughtfulness was the secret of his success."

A native of Toronto, Watson, whose actual name is Billy Potts, made his first hometown wrestling appearance at Maple Leaf Gardens in September, 1940.

Cuba Triple Winners

HAVANA (Reuter) — Cuba beat Colombia 6-0 Saturday night to become world amateur baseball champions for the third consecutive year.

Colombia qualified for the final when the organizers tossed out its loss to Mexico on the grounds that three of the Mexican players had taken part in professional baseball.

Canada finished up a poor series with a 9-1 loss to Puerto Rico. In other games Saturday, Italy beat Dutch Antilles 9-2, Mexico downed the Dominican Republic 5-1 and Panama beat Nicaragua 7-3.

Drubbed 9-3 by Aces

Seniors Hurt Ones They Love Most

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

As the lyrics to an old song go, "You always hurt the one you love..." and the Belleville Co-Ops did just that Saturday night.

The players had to feel sincere appreciation for the 794 fans who paid their way into the Belleville Memorial Arena Saturday to support the Quinte in their City Cup game under the new co - operative system.

However it was the 794 faithful, rather than the hundreds more who refused to demonstrate a belief that senior hockey can continue in this city, who suffered most as Belleville lost a 9-3 decision to the Kingston Aces.

Contrary to some recent drubbings which the Bellevilleans earned fully as merit, play in the contest was closer than the score would indicate. The home team was outshot only 44-36, but were unable to finish off their plays with the consistency of the Aces.

Much of the blame for the lop - sided margin must be layed at the feet of coach Steve Reze, normally the bulwark of the Belleville defence. "I just couldn't get my legs moving out there and I wasn't thinking", explained the Belleville goalie. "I just hope I don't come up with another performance like that one."

The Aces further complicated Reze's off night by keeping their shots low to the ice, since those were the kind that the Belleville goalie was having consistent difficulty with.

Player personnel was also altered from the last meeting between the two teams with Kingston adding the services of Dick Cherry and Dave Gilmour, while Belleville was minus the services of Ralph Plane and Paul Ferraro.

Plane suffered a back injury in Friday's win over Oakville and was under heavy sedation, which prevented him from even attending the game, much less playing. Ferraro, a solid first - year centre, has been forced to quit the club when a job promotion made it impossible for him to keep up both work and hockey commitments.

There were a couple of bright spots in the generally dismal play of all Belleville players. Reargaurd Greg Marchen came up with the hitting knack that he appeared to have lost in recent weeks, giving his best effort in some time and centre George Godson was a standout, hitting goalies, working the power play as well as taking his regular shift.

Peter Kennedy clicked for two first period goals to lamp the visitors into a 2-0 lead before Godson's sliding shot with just one second left on the clock slipped past a surprised Mike Lovell.

The Aces scored three times in the second frame with Wayne McConnell a goal keeping Belleville within 3-2 range. The right winger was set up in front of the net on a bouncing pass from Doug Senior.

Lorne Chiarelli, playing his usual quietly efficient game, counted a power play goal in the last period but it was far from enough as King. ston corrected for four more scores. "Conditioning made a big difference in that game," remarked Belleville coach Gene Poirier after the game.

The Quinte Cup play - off mates penalty while Kingston was charged seven times including a misconduct and game misconduct to Bob Olajos for protesting McConnell's goal too zealously. 6 pt. to come

Three-Cornered Play

Defenceman Doug Putts, goalie Steve Reze and left winger John McConnell form a defensive triangle for the Belleville Quintes Hockey Co-ops in Saturday's loss to the Kingston Aces. The visitors recorded their second win in five games against Belleville this season with a 9-3 victory.

Juveniles Have Easiest Weekend

Seven proved to be a lucky number for the Belleville Kinsmen bantams Saturday but the local OMHA team's luck ran out following Sat-

The Kinsmen stopped Picton 7-2 in their first weekend bout, but then dropped a 3-1 squeaker to Oshawa Sunday.

Rick Barbeau rapped in three goals against Picton with Rick Collins adding two and singles going to Mark Foster and Roger Collins. In Sunday's loss, Mike Taylor scored the only goal on a pass from Bobby Thompson.

The Western Tire Juveniles whipped through two weekend exhibition games with little trouble as they downed Picton 5-0 Saturday and Oshawa 8-3 in their Sunday bout.

John Bowen counted twice in the win over Picton with Kevin Joubert picking up a goal and two assists. Other scorers were Russ Herrington, Brian Rubbis, A. Wilson and Rob Foster.

In Sunday's win it was Rick Meagher scoring the way with two goals and four assists. Andrew Western netted two goals while Dennis Cone notched a goal and two helpers. Also scoring for Western were Rumbles, Taylor and Richardson.

The Blake Kerr Imperials also experienced little weekend difficulty stopping Point Anne 9-0 and the Kingston Rotary Kinsmen 5-1 in their two encounters.

Peter Smirke scored three times and assisted on four more markers in the win over Point Anne, while John Masterson pulled the scoring trigger four times. Other goals went to Mike Watt and Darcieal Brown, while the shutout was split between Gary Wallace and Bob Moore.

In the win over Kingston, the "Imperials" scoring was shared by Mark Coates, Smirke, Brown, Paul Ackerman and Andy Ricketts. Defencemen Wally Dainard and David Flesch, along with forward Mike Watt each collected two assists.

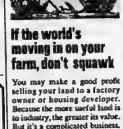
Rollins peewees kept the Belleville ball rolling by blanking Napanee 9-0 and following up with a 10-2 defeat of the Kingston Minor Peewees.

Scoring against Napanee were Jeff Kiger with three goals John Jianopoulos with two and one each from Andy Bowers, Ricky Sprague and Dave McBride. The shutout went to Terry Thompson and Bruce Hamilton.

Randy Hutchinson led the way Sunday for Rollins by counting a hat trick while Gow and Mike Bennett were providing two goal support. Lupenette, Gary Frederick and Bobby Crawford accounted for the other scores.

Towers novices made it a clean sweep with an 11-0 Saturday drubbing of the Peterborough minors and a 5-1 win over Stirling the next day.

Mark Crawford triggered four goals against Peterborough while Darrell Coleman and Steve Mofina were good for two each. Other goal-getters for Belleville were Rick Cartwright, Bob Hedge and Tim Scales. Shawn Hennessey assisted on four goals while Donald Cook and Garth Scully split the shutout.



Against Stirling the scoring was divided evenly among Hedge, Scully, Crawford, Mofina and Andy Plane. The lone Stirling scorer was Mark Vandervoort.

The Wilson Concrete tykes made it Quinte's weekend OMHA performance to an outstanding 11-1-1 record as they battled Napanee to a 3-3 draw. McLeod scored the lone Belleville goal.

Meanwhile, the Esso Car Wash peewee B team polished off Wellington 3-2 Sunday after dropping a 4-4 loss to Marmora Saturday.

Dan Duffy scored twice and Alan Kurelsky once Sunday to offset a pair of goals by Wellington's Terry Greer.

Saturday, Craig Killian's "three-goal performance paced the Marmora peewees to their win over Belleville, who got two each from Pat Wilson, Tim Coates, Mike McDonald and Duffy.

FAIR WAYS

Fairways Like New Faces

GANANOQUE (Special) — The Eastern Ontario Junior B league's expansion program certainly won't draw any criticism from the Belleville Fairways after this weekend.

The Belleville B's downed Gananoque by a 9-1 count Sunday night to give them a 19-2 edge over the two new league entries in a pair of weekend games. Picton were 10-1 victims of the Fairways Friday night.

Our team played well. They were skating very well," acknowledged coach Moe Hunter of the Gananoque w in. "The Woodward line came up with another strong game."

Right winger Tim Flint provided the scoring punch f or Belleville's top forward combination by slapping in two goals to help the visitors to an 8-0 lead at the end of two periods.

Port-sider Jeff Howard made it four goals in two games when he opened the game's scoring at 5.39 of the first period, while centre Mark Woodward was foiled on several good scoring chances.

The Fairways held a wide territorial edge as they combined goalie Pete Rountree with 43 shots, while Bob Harrison was called upon only 22 times. The Belleville goalie did come up with several key saves on good scoring chances by the G-Men.

Brian Coates opened in a goal and three assists for his night's work, while Belleville' third line centre Rod Palmer capped a strong game by scoring his team's only third period goal.

Defensive standout Doug Perry paired what proved to be the winning goal at 15.51 of the first period with Palmer and Cliff Janitsch drawing assists.

Other Belleville scorers included Dave Smith with a pair of counters and Dave Horwood with a single goal.

Bill Truesdell was the only Gananoque marksman to hit age scoresheet, beating Harrison at 1.39 of the final period.

The losers drew nine of the game's 17 penalties with Truesdell and McCarney of Nolan and Belleville's Flint and Kevin Dockrill drawing fighting majors.

Allen Tricks No-Stars

Brian Allen's hat trick scoring effort led the Good Guys to a 4-1 Northern Electric hockey win Sunday.

Allen counted three times to provide the margin of victory in the Good Guys win over the No Stars. Dwight Rathwell scored the other goal for the winners with Edgar Perry drawing two assists.

For the No Stars it was Ray Baldwin, Bill Jamieson and Les Sager each scoring once with Dave Putman pacing up two assists.

Four goals by Rick Rosebrugh led the Dukes to a 6-1 win over the Hornets. Mark Mouffawi and Bill Carson counted the other Dukes' markers while Jim Haggarty scored the lone goal for the Hornets.

Finish Seemed Fitting

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — The BCI junior girls' basketball team brought their season to a logical conclusion Saturday by winning the Central Ontario Secondary School championship.

Before Saturday's COSSA meet at Peterborough's Crestwood Collegiate, the BCI girls had won 11 Bay of Quinte regular season and playoff games.

A 42-34 win over Peterborough's Thomas A. Stewart and a 37-34 verdict over Oshawa O'Neill sent the BCI team home with the Bay of Quinte's first senior girls' COSSA hoop title since Trenton toured the trick in 1961. It marked BCI's first-ever senior girls' COSSA basketball crown.

Deborah Kerr paced the winners in their first game with nine points, while Marilee Jones contributed eight and Hilary Dady and Angela Murray six each.

A big 15-point performance by Dorothy Lefaive sparked the BCI girls in the championship game against Oshawa. Dianne Kerr pitched in eight points, while Merilee Jones and Carol Dobly scored seven each, and Deborah Kerr six.

Peppy PCs Face 260 Vote-oriented Resolutions

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives from across Canada, appearing to be in a peppy mood, today wade into some 260 resolutions that will give the party food for thought as it prepares for the next general election.

Meanwhile, the mood of the convention, being attended by more than 1,500 delegates, is clearly pre-election. With record public opinion polls showing an increase in Conservative strength, and a general election expected next year, the next campaign seems to be the main corridor gossip among delegates.

This strong pre-election mood got a strong boost late Sunday when Premier William Davis unexpectedly pledged the Ontario party machine to support Mr. Stanfield in any forthcoming election.

To long, loud applause, Mr. Davis stepped on to a platform at an after-hours party for convention workers and, pointing to Mr. Stanfield, said:

"Whenever it comes, Ontario will be with you and we'll do as well federally as we have provincially."

He was referring to the October provincial general election which returned the Conservatives to power at Queen's Park with 78 members compared with 39 for the Liberals and 18 New Democrats.

And, from the convention platform Sunday, Nathan Nurgitz, president of the party association, said "the campaign '72" as far as this convention is concerned.

"We can win the next election," Party Leader Robert Stanfield told the delegates Sunday night during a question-and-answer session.

He had said this before, but his re-statement was greeted with thunderous applause.

The convention today gets down to its main task of tackling those 260 resolutions, all based on a series of policy papers drawn up by national committees. These papers had been distributed during the last six months for study by local associations.

While Mr. Stanfield and his parliamentary caucus will not be bound by any of the decisions, they are designed "to assist the leader and caucus of the party by ascertaining the opinion of delegates on the points raised."

Under the arrangements of the convention, whereby delegates are divided into different groups, they will have less than four minutes to spend on each resolution if they are to deal with all 260. In previous policy conventions, many of the resolutions were held over for future decisions.

After the day-long policy discussions today, the convention will be addressed by Mr. Stanfield, who is expected to again emphasize the possibility of winning the next election.

"I'll just won't happen," he told the delegates Sunday. "I have my job, and you have your job. We must work."

Meanwhile, delegates Sunday cleared up a series of internal matters—reading committee reports and approving minor changes to the party constitution.

The convention atmosphere was provided by the five campaigners seeking the association presidency.

As the meetings were going on, their supporters were slogging in the hallways, plastering posters on hotel walls, and recruiting newly-arrived delegates with buttons and stickers.

Lion Matthews, a London, Ont., candidate who has his own construction business, had his supporters decked out in yellow hard hats.

Other candidates are Roy Devell of Calgary, John Pallett of Mississauga, Ont., James Bazkie of Renfrew, Ont., Dr. Fred Mousseline, mayor of Malawa, Ont., and Hugues Dandurand, an economist from Montreal.

Peking Paper Assails Russia

HONK KONG (Reuter)—The Peking People's Daily accused the Soviet Union today openly siding with India to wage war, reported.

The newspaper said: "Since the invasion of Pakistan, social imperialism has been operating on the side of India and brought pressure on Pakistan to yield to India."

Young PCs Want Legal Pot and Easy Abortion

OTTAWA (CP) — The youth wing of the Progressive Conservative party took a few hesitant steps beyond the policies of the senior party at a weekend convention, but otherwise stuck to the party line.

The young Conservatives passed resolutions calling for legalized marijuana, fewer restrictions on abortion and a form of guaranteed annual income.

But in each case a strong and vocal minority opposed the moves.

The proposals were among 27 resolutions rammed through a two-hour policy session Saturday. Organizers said about 500 persons had registered at the Progressive Conservative Youth Federation annual meeting, but no more than 250 were visible at any one time and only about 150 voted on the resolutions.

Conservative MPs participated in most of the policy discussion groups and in many cases played the major role in drafting resolutions.

The two-day convention ended Sunday with the election of new officers. Len Domino, a 21-year-old University of Windsor student, defeated two other candidates to take the presidency, succeeding Allan Pope, 28, of Sudbury, Ont.

Hugh Segal, 21, former University of Ottawa student president, and Pierre Listeau of Quebec City were elected vice-presidents.

As the youth convention, held in the drab basement rooms and sparsely-furnished assembly hall of a local church, drew to a close, the senior party was opening a three-day policy convention in the luxurious Chateau Laurier.

Mr. Domino said the 150 youth delegates at the senior sessions will try to form a united voice but were not bound to any particular policies. Officials expect about 2,000 persons—1,200 of them voting delegates—at the senior convention.

NATO Unlikely to Buy European Parley Plans

LONDON (CP) — NATO countries at their semi-annual ministerial meeting opening in Brussels Wednesday are unlikely to buy the Warsaw pact countries' proposals for a "European security conference" until the Berlin problem is on its way to settlement.

Canada is known to feel this way, and apparently single most of the Western nations that will be taking part in the three-day meeting.

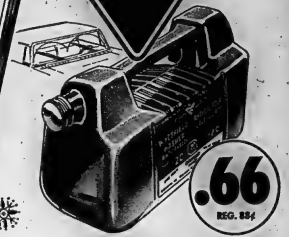
"We want to see satisfactory progress on the Berlin talks before going into a 'security' conference," a British foreign office spokesman said. "Quite a lot of progress has been made but the question of whether it is enough will be raised at Brussels."

A Canadian source said Canada is "very unlikely" to go for the Iron Curtain-inspired security conference until the Berlin situation is settled.

The Canadian view has been set out officially as favoring a "properly prepared" conference, meaning one with a foundation that will give it solid hope of easing the cold war rather than providing a propaganda vehicle for the Warsaw pact countries.

Up to now Nato has been cool on the conference, though it recently designated its former secretary-general, Manlio Brosio of Italy, to hold exploratory talks with the East on it.

Brosio was hoping to see the Russians in Moscow on Nov. 15 but that date passed without any acceptance from the Russians. One of the questions to be taken up at the NATO conference is whether, and when Brosio will be received by the Russians.



Canada promoted the appointment of a special envoy at the last meeting of the NATO ministers in Lisbon earlier this year, and will have a special interest in Brosio's mission.

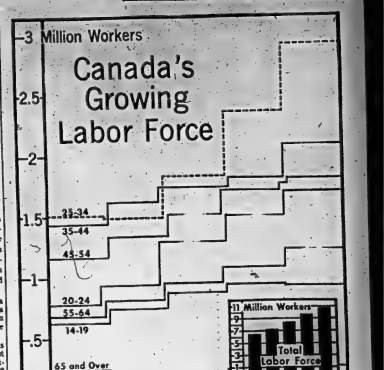
Missing Hikers Locate Rescuers



JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Nineteen persons reported missing earlier in the day, eight of them provincial policemen, have been located by search and rescue teams, a provincial police spokesman said.

The spokesman said two of a group of 11 students on a camping expedition, missing since Sunday, came out of the bush and said they would lead rescuers to their group as well as the eight policemen located nearby.

The policemen were part of a 50-member team that was called into action Sunday when the students, all teenagers, were first reported missing.

The group, all described as experienced campers, set out Friday night for a week-end expedition in the Laurentians, 40 miles north of Montreal. The group, all from the Montreal area, included two girls.

Police said that they are approached when the group failed to make a rendezvous by early Sunday morning.

Growing Labor Force

Chart shows the increasing growth of Canada's labor force, especially those between the ages of 25-34 and 45-54 as part of the post-Second World War baby boom. In the next five years, young - marrieds with heavy demands for housing, furnishings and other durables, and urban services will also be the biggest group looking for jobs. The Economic Council of Canada, in its report released Monday, says creating jobs for them will be a formidable challenge for the country. (CP Newsmap)

Three Die In Manila Kidnapping

MANILA (AP) — A construction foreman held a dozen terrified hostages in his former employer's apartment for 48 hours before his taunts to police were answered here Sunday with bullets.

Basilio Marcelo and three companions fell dead, and seven other persons were wounded. One of three killed was Marcelo's brother, Primo.

The only casualty among the hostages was the former employer, a Chinese businessman, whose scalp was grazed by a bullet and throat cut slightly by a meat cleaver.

Most NDP Resolutions Passed on to Hierarchy

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's New Democratic Party has finished its first convention since it took over the government more than five months ago, and there still is a mountain of unfinished work to do before the next session of the legislature.

About 410 resolutions passed through a series of closed panel discussions, but only 12 were approved by the convention. Most of the remainder were tabled for study by the party hierarchy.

The meeting, attended by more than 1,000 delegates and guests, began Friday on an insurgent note when the Waffle splinter group circulated an unsigned statement saying they were fed up with the way the party is run.

The "grass roots" people should be controlling the party, the Waffle said, not the civil servants in Premier Allan Blakeney's government which took over from the Liberals after the June election.

This brought "no comment" from Premier Blakeney, in an angry rebuttal from the national party leader, David Lewis.

"No small group in the party speaks for the party," he said. "It is important that the people of Saskatchewan and Canada know that."

Mr. Lewis said the federal government pumps "$1 in the form of loans into major corporations, many of them foreign-owned, for research and development, while it is miserly to western farmers.

Former national leader T. C. Douglas said ordinary workers still will bear the heaviest burden of taxation under legislation now before the Commons.

"We will never have a square deal in Canada until we do, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, what the people of Saskatchewan and Manitoba have done within their provincial boundaries"—elect NDP governments.

Among resolutions passed Sunday was one asking the provincial government not to enact legislation which would have formed a new farm organization.

Only 58 of 813 voting delegates were against the resolution which said the proposed United Farmers of Saskatchewan would reduce the effectiveness of the National Farmers' Union.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial and gold issues climbed sharply higher as all sectors of the Toronto stock market posted advances in active mid-morning trading today.

Analysts attribute the strong advance to investor speculation regarding the trade talks to be held between Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon later today.

The industrial index was ahead 1.32 to 179.15 and golds 2.04 to 143.37. Base metals were up .13 to 77.40 and western oils 25 to 202.79.

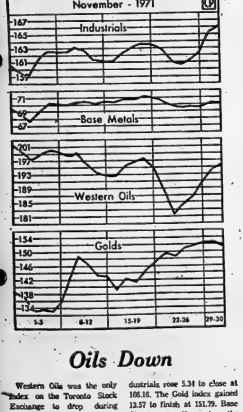
Volume by 11 a.m. was 700,000 shares, up from 541,000 at the same time Friday.

Advances outnumbered declines on the three-to-one, 180 to 65 with 161 issues unchanged.

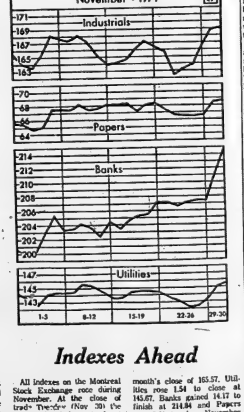
Pipeline, industrial mining, merchandising, real estate and general manufacturing issues posted broad advances as 11 of the industrial index's 17, subgroups moved higher.

Banking, oil refining and food processing issues edged fractionally lower.

Nova Scotia Light and Power was up 2¾ to $12½. The Nova Scotia government has offered shareholders $13 a share, in all takeover bid.



Falconbridge was up 1¾ to $59¾. MacLean Hunter 1½ to $18, Sherritt ¾ to $13, Inco ¾ to $36¾, Supertest 30% to $12½ and Geopitre Products ½ to $10¾.



Oils Down

Western Oils was the only index on the Toronto Stock Exchange to drop during November. It fell 6.20, to close Nov. 30 at 196.26. Industrials rose 5.34 to close at 166.16. The Gold index gained 12.57 to finish at 151.79. Base Metals rose .69 to close the month at 70.12 (CP Newsmap)

Indexes Ahead

All indexes on the Montreal Stock Exchange rose during November. At the close of trading Tuesday (Nov 30) the industrials index stood at 168.17, up 3.09 from last month's close of 165.57. Utilities rose 1.54 to close at 145.67. Banks gained 14.17 to finish at 214.84 and Papers rose 2.81 to close November at 68.71. (CP Newsmap)

Volkswagen Closes Plants Due to Strike

STUTTGART (Reuter) — Volkswagen, Europe's biggest auto-maker, plans to cease production in six plants today as West Germany's crippling strike of metal workers goes into its third week.

Works mediation commission set up to bring about a speedy settlement of the wage dispute ended its 14th successive day of bargaining Sunday night without agreement, said the chairman, Georg Wannagat.

The commission has until Tuesday to find a compromise and get 360,000 employers in the key industrial region of southwest Germany back to work. If it fails it remains only for the government to step in.

But whether there is agreement or not, Volkswagen has said it will be compelled to halt production for lack of vital parts normally produced in the strike-hit area.

Stoppage at Volkswagen will make another 180,000 workers idle. The six plants have a capacity of 6,500 vehicles a day.

The metal workers union, which has a national membership of 2.3 million workers, is demanding a basic wage increase of 7.3 per cent plus a guaranteed 40 per cent of a 13th month's wages. The employers have offered a six-per-cent rise and a guarantee of only 30 per cent of the 13th month.

Meanwhile Opel Motors, a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Motors, plans to stop production Wednesday.

Four plants in Daimler Benz (Mercedes) have been at a standstill for more than a week and the company plans further reductions in other plants in the next few days.

GM Prepares to Implement Recall of Millions of Chevs

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors prepared Sunday to implement the largest recall in United States automotive industry history — callback of nearly 6.7-million Chevrolets for installation of an inexpensive restraint to counter the effects of a possibly defective engine mount.

In a letter to the national highway traffic safety administration, which had warned car owners of the possible defect in October, GM said it would pay for installation of the restraints.

Industry observers felt the after-all price tag at between $25 million and $37 million. Federal officials said the rebuttal cable itself would cost less than $1 and the total cost per car, including labor, would average $5.

GM said the recall would begin in late February, once Chevrolet dealerships were supplied with the restraint devices.

The recall takes in 1965-through-1968 Chevrolet Chevrolets and Novas, 1967-through-1968 Camaros and some light trucks.

The Chevrolets involved are all equipped with V-8 engines. GM said the recalled cars include 2,000 Camaros, Corvettes or any six-cylinder models.

A company spokesman said GM will notify the car owners [illegible] to eliminate as soon as possible.

GM has been under pressure in recent weeks from several fronts, including the safety advocate and auto-safety critic Ralph Nader, to correct the engine-mount problem.

An administration spokesman said "we're delighted" about the recall. But, he added the agency is disturbed by what he said was GM's "misleading" statement which makes it seem like this is not a statutory safety-defect notification action.

Convention Ends

Quebec Labor Body Plans Studies

MONTREAL (CP) — As the biennial convention of the Quebec Federation of Labor ended Saturday, President Louis Laberge told delegates its work will continue for the next two years.

This will involve discussion in QFL affiliates and locals about the resolutions the convention passed and about an economic analysis of the Quebec economy from the socialist point of view prepared by QFL researchers and distributed under the title of "The state, instrument of our oppression."

It will also include meetings of leaders of the QFL, the Quebec Teachers Corp. and the Confederation of National Trade Unions to establish permanent ties for a common labor front to fight social and political issues.

The meeting will begin Dec. 14.

Members have also been told the QFL has organizational weaknesses and been asked to do something about them.

Among politically-oriented resolutions passed at the convention were:

—A study of possible mass participation in a political party and if necessary the creation of a new party;

—Removal from the QFL charter of a statute allying the group with the New Democratic Party but continued support of the party on the federal level;

—Supporting of Quebec's right to self-determination, including the right to proclaim its own sovereignty as long as it meets the needs of workers, and the withdrawal of QFL objections to separatism.

The convention endorsed the principle of a general strike, to be called for a specified period of time, wherever the QFL is faced with a major problem requiring mass pressure.

Such a strike, however, could be called only after members had been consulted and should have, if possible, the support of other labor organizations.

Delegates agreed that contract negotiations should be conducted by industrial sector rather than single bargaining units and that the secret ballot should be used in all QFL votes to strike or accept collective agreements.

Mr. Laberge and general secretary Fernand Daoust were re-elected by acclamation by the 900 delegates.

Wednesday's Session on Tax Bill Could Turn Into Marathon

OTTAWA (CP) — The government tax bill, its life span before the Commons already limited, is back in the House today.

For two things, Prime Minister Trudeau is going to be in Washington for talks with President Richard Nixon about Canada-U.S. economic relations, and Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield will be involved in the first big day of the party's national convention here.

For another, since the government moved Thursday to impose its guillotine rule—a step that by itself provoked some heavy debate—the opposition means seems to have been dissipated.

The action to close off debate on clause-by-clause study of the bill becomes final Wednesday.

If Friday's debate could be taken as an indicator, the Commons scene is likely to remain relatively quiet until Wednesday, when the opposition has the chance to force individual votes on all clauses of the bill if it desires.

A formal vote on every clause could turn the usually-short Wednesday sitting into a marathon. Only a third of the bill's 322 clauses have been passed so far.

The debate-limit rule provides that every question needed to dispose of clause-by-clause study be put that evening.

The bill's provision's to establish a capital gains tax in Canada for the first time were discussed Friday and are up again today.

But the party positions on this one are well known and not expected to change.

Conservatives want some modification regarding farm property and the basic cattle herd on dairy and beef farms. New Democrats have complained that the half-rate tax for capital gains should be boosted to the full rate, making the stock market speculator liable to the same tax bite that the workingman pays on his salary.

Prior to the debate, Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said he would not go to any other meetings of party House leaders on how debate on the bill should be handled.

He said the government's use of a closure device made the idea of such meetings a farce.

The only realistic alternative subject of the debate was that Prime Minister Trudeau, obviously stung by a Conservative snap vote defeat in the Commons Wednesday, returned early from a visit to Toronto and had the whips on through out Friday.

The Commons was replete with cabinet ministers and lesser Liberals all day in an obvious move to ensure there was no repeat of the defeat, on a procedural issue only, of the Liberal majority.

So even if public interest flagged until Wednesday, the Liberal whips are expected to ensure that Liberal attendance does not.

Difficulties in Canada Keep Ministers at Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Domestic difficulties are keeping at least two federal ministers close to home rather than on extended trips to a series of NATO conferences in Brussels.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has delayed his trip until Wednesday and Defence Minister Donald Macdonald will not leave until Tuesday for their NATO appearances.

Both had planned on leaving Sunday for the conference.

Mr. Macdonald, in an interview Sunday, said he was delaying his trip because "so many ministers will be off for the next day or two. It was decided I'd better stick around."

He was referring to Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister Benson and Trade Minister Pepin all leaving Canada for Washington and economic discussions with President Nixon.

He also was referring to the sudden need for the cabinet to make a good showing in the House of Commons following invoking of a rule to limit debate on the government tax bill.

It became evident Friday that the government wanted as strong a cabinet showing in the Commons as possible when it said Mr. Sharp decided on the delay partly because Mr. Trudeau was to be in Washington and partly because of the testiness of current House debate.

Mr. Macdonald will address the NATO defence-planning council Wednesday and Mr. Sharp will address the meeting of NATO ministers Thursday.

Ear Wax Natural Secretion, One Can Soften It with Oil

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Lately wax has been accumulating in my ears. Could it be nerves? Or age? (I am 64.) I know it is dangerous to dig wax out of the ears as I have seen people do. What could I use with a syringe to get it out?—C.S.T.

You're right about not digging wax with hairpins, toothpicks and other dangerous implements. Ear specialists spent a fair amount of time treating such injuries as perforated ear drums or scratched, infected ear canals.

Even blunt instruments can push the wax farther in, until there's a solid, impacted mass of it against the ear drum.

Ear wax (cerumen is the technical name) is a natural, protective secretion that protects the tender lining of the ear canal. Some folks produce more of it than others, so discovering some wax in the ear is no reason to worry.

Excessive formation, however, can result from infection in the ear canal (from fungus, germs, or irritant, dust) and calls for treatment other than just removing the wax. Likewise, what is thought to be wax may sometimes actually be hardened discharge from a diseased ear canal or perforated ear drum.

So long as an open passage remains in the ear canal, hearing will not be impaired, but if wax plugs the entire diameter of the canal, then hearing will be less acute. And if the wax is pushed against the ear drum, ear aches and other discomforts result. In some cases, impacted wax can cause a chronic cough. It is the result of what is called a nerve reflex.

So stay sensible as you now are, and do not try to go poking things in the ear. To be safe, I'd have your doctor (or an ear specialist) take a look to see that there's nothing really wrong in your ears.

If you insist on trying to remove wax, instead of letting it work out naturally, the safest way is to put a few drops of mineral oil or olive oil in the ear canal (to soften the wax).

After allowing time for the softening, use a small syringe (infant rectal syringe or similar) to irrigate the canal to wash out the wax. You can use a warm solution of baking soda or weak salt solution. But use the syringe only as a means of squirting a stream into the ear and letting it run out. Do not let the nose of the syringe close the ear canal and thus exert force in the canal. That can force the wax deeper instead of removing it.

For more complete removal of the wax, if necessary, it's simple to have your doctor do it two or three times a year. Some folks do. He can see what he is doing, and has proper instruments, so it is done both quickly and safely.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I was about 20 I had a spot on one lung which the doctor termed TB. I never broke down, coughed or had sputum or temperature.

Now I am 53 and always had checkups and x-rays. I have scars but the tuberculin skin test has always been negative. Why?—Mrs. L.E.

My guess would be that the TB wasn't TB, but might have been sinkoplasmosis which, 30-odd years ago, was often mistaken for tuberculosis. They are difficult to tell apart by x-ray, but these days a skin test for histoplasmosis is available and settles the uncertainty.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	2♥	Pass
3♣	Pass	4♥	Pass
6♥

Opening lead — five of diamonds.

This extraordinary hand was played in England by the British star, Ewart Kempson. He got to six hearts, which would ordinarily have been a laydown, but when he won the opening diamond lead and led a trump to the king, West showed out, discarding a diamond.

At this point making the slam seemed impossible, but Kempson managed the affair remarkably well and came home with the contract.

He first cashed the A-K of spades, then the ace of hearts and king of diamonds, and followed all this by leading the queen of diamonds, which he ruffed in dummy! Next, after ruffing a spade, he played a trump to the queen, producing this position:

Now Kempson led the eight of hearts and West, who could not afford to part with the high spade, discarded a club. Dummy's spade, having served its purpose, was now discarded as East won the trump with the jack.

East could do no better than return a low club. South followed low, and West did exceedingly well by playing the eight instead of the jack.

But Kempson was not to be denied. He won the eight with the nine and received the queen, simultaneously pinning East's king and West's jack as the slam came rolling home.

Five Dynamite Bombs Explode in Montreal During Weekend

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are investigating the explosion of five dynamite bombs in the city during the weekend. The blasts caused heavy property damage but no injuries.

A sixth bombing attempt near Thursday Saturday night failed when the bomb was buried into a field and did not explode.

Sunday night, two bombs exploded within 30 minutes of each other at two post offices in suburban Westmount.

Saturday, one bomb exploded at an east-end post office and, within 20 minutes, another one exploded at the east-end offices of an upholstering firm involved in a labor dispute for the last three months.

A bomb Friday night demolished the late-model car of an executive of a beverage company involved in a labor dispute for 18 months.

The first bomb Sunday blew in a metal loading door at the back of a Westmount post office sub-station and punched holes in several parked cars.

Westmount police then checked the other post office in their area several blocks away and found another bomb.

They called for a dismantling squad but the device exploded before the team arrived, causing some damage to windows.

The first bomb demolished a postal truck Saturday in the east-end station. The bomb, placed under the vehicle, ripped out large chunks of the motor and blew a large hole in the truck's roof. Windows of other trucks in the garage were shattered.

The second explosion occurred outside the east-end offices of Remi Carrier Inc., an upholstering firm where 30 workers are on strike.

In Friday night's explosion, Lucien Lacasse, 41, an executive with Lucky Ore Beverage Co. was escorting an employee to her front door in suburban Laval when an explosion ripped apart his car.

Lemieux Acquitted By Bar

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Robert Lemieux was acquitted of all charges brought against him for lack of proof Saturday when he appeared before the Quebec Bar Association's disciplinary committee.

Mr. Lemieux, 30 who has defended several suspected members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, faced nine charges relating to his actions during the first trial of Claude Morency. Morency faced charges related to terrorist activities when he first appeared in court in September and October of last year.

Mr. Lemieux, defending Morency at the time, was accused of inciting his client to insult the presiding judge and was himself accused of using abusive language against the Bench.

The Colony Won't Be Hash House

NEW YORK (AP) — The Colony, one of New York's most fashionable restaurants, closed Sunday because of what its owner, Gene Cavallero, called "unrealistic" union terms for keeping it open.

"Rather than turn the Colony into a hash house, I prefer to close," he said. The terms were not disclosed.

For 50 years, the Colony attracted the world famous.

Greek shipowner Stavros Niarchos once gave Cavallero a yacht as a tip.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor had the Colony cater her food when in New York hospitals; otherwise she ate there. Jacqueline Kennedy and Aristotle Onassis did their courting in the Colony, and news of their impending marriage broke from there.

Cavallero was the first to admit that his way of doing things didn't suit everybody. Actress Joan Crawford, for instance, always brought her own vodka. Carol Channing always brought her own organic food in thermos flasks —the Colony supplied the plates.

President Nixon, a devotee of the Colony, was one of the few guests allowed to bring his dog into the main dining room.

For the rest of the world's dog owners, the Colony had a special dog's dining room where the pampered canines relaxed on satin cushions while eating from silver plates.

Convicts Find Play Outlet For Emotions

KINGSTON (CP) — Fourteen prisoners at Collin's Bay penitentiary acted in a play during the weekend that drew capacity audiences here.

The play One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, was based on a novel by Ken Kesey about life in a hospital for the mentally ill and the preservation of individuality in the face of manipulation by power in the hands of the chief nurse.

Ric Kelly, a prisoner actor, said the play was an emotional outlet, that was not violent.

Santa Robbed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Santa Claus swooped down in a helicopter Saturday at a local shopping centre and was greeted immediately by a crowd of about 600 youngsters who knocked him down and trampled his goodie-bag.

"I thought I was going to be killed," said Lee Caren after he was rescued by police. "They broke down the barriers and rushed me. I got knocked to the ground and couldn't even move.

While Santa was on the ground, the children took most of the candy from his bag and also most of the pampered ping-pong balls that were good for merchandise in the shopping centre stores.

After he was rescued, police protected Caren while he threw what was left to the mob of children.

Hercules Again Unable to Land On Dacca Trip

BANGKOK (CP) — A Canadian C-130 aircraft, which was attacked and set afire as it flew to Dacca airport in East Pakistan during a so-called ceasefire, landed safely today on its return to Bangkok, the capital of Thailand.

At first it was believed the Canadian Hercules transport had been hit by fighter planes —an allegation strongly denied by India.

But in Dacca today, United Nations officials said an Indian warship fired on and possibly hit the plane. The officials said the Canadian aircraft, called in by the UN to help in the evacuation of foreign personnel, was fired at off Chittagong where the Indian navy has one aircraft carrier and a number of destroyers blockading the port. But at the UN headquarters in New York, it was reported that fighter planes did the damage.

(A Canadian military spokesman at Trenton today denied the Hercules had been set upon "by any aircraft, hostile or otherwise.")

The Canadian plane was due over Dacca at 10:30 a.m. local time today. It was due to make a pass over the airstrip to see if it was usable after Monday's Indian bombing which left two large craters. But it returned to Bangkok sometime after.

(Canadian military sources, in contact with the aircraft at Bangkok, report the Hercules was not damaged during today's bid to land at Dacca.

Soviet Craft Lands on Mars

MOSCOW (AP) — An unmanned Soviet space capsule has become the first manmade vehicle to land safely on Mars, Tass reported today.

The capsule soft-landed last Thursday by parachute from the Mars 3 satellite and radioed signals to earth via the mother ship, the Soviet news agency said.

It said Mars 3, launched in May, reached its destination after a flight of 188 days.

Jobless Number Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — The chill winds of approaching winter pushed the jobless total up to 503,000 last month, a sharp increase for the month but about average for this time of year, Statistics Canada reported today.

As expected because of the season, there were sharply fewer jobs available in agriculture and construction. And while employment in the trade industries improved, there were more layoffs in manufacturing.

The 503,000 without jobs at mid-November compared with 447,000 at mid-October and 478,000 at mid-November last year. An estimated 46,000 workers left the labor market in November this year, reducing the total labor force to 8.65 million from nearly 8.7 million in October.

Terrorist Bomb Starts Big Blaze

BELFAST (CP) — A woman Salvation Army worker was killed and more than 600 workers are jobless today in the aftermath of a terror bombing that ignited Belfast's worst fire in many years, destroying an entire block of buildings in the city centre.

The Associated Press said it was the worst fire in a decade. Reuter said it was believed to be the biggest since the wartime German blitz against Northern Ireland's capital city.

Security authorities blamed the Irish Republican Army for the explosion which blasted a hole ripped into a six-floor carpet factory.

Two gunmen, one with a pistol, one with a machine-gun, gave workers 10 minutes to evacuate the Victorian building while they planted their explosives.

A ferocious blaze followed the explosion. The factory was destroyed and damage was estimated at upward of $1 million.

A wall adjoining the Salvation Army hostel collapsed, crushing to death Mamie Thompson who with her colleagues was looking after catering facilities for firemen, British troops and police fighting the flames. Five other Salvation Army workers, including Mrs. Thompson's husband Samuel, 61, were injured.

Pakistan Army Defends Town

CALCUTTA (AP) — Indian troops captured today the Pakistan army's cantonment air field in Jessore, an important army headquarters, but fierce fighting is going on for the East Pakistan town itself a military spokesman reported.

Both All-India radio and United News of India put out reports that Jessore had fallen.

An Indian military spokesman in Calcutta had claimed earlier today that Indian troops had smashed their way through Jessore's defences and were fighting to clear the Pakistani troops from the area. The town was the Pakistan army's main headquarters in the western part of East Pakistan.

United News also said that Moulvi Bazar, an East Pakistani town on the main road between Sylhet and Comilla in the eastern sector of the province, had been taken by Indian troops.

Both Sylhet and Comilla also are key army centres for the Pakistanis.

"The hard outer core of Pakistan's defences in the Maimi have been smashed, and our progress now should be much more rapid," said Maj-Gen. F. R. Jacob, the chief of staff for India's eastern command.

Jacob said Indian advances are continuing on all fronts in East Pakistan, and wide areas now are under the control either of Indian troops or the Mukti Bahini, the East Pakistani guerrillas fighting for independence.

The general said the Pakistani army's communications in the eastern province have been smashed and it has no hope of getting reinforcements. However, he refused to predict when Indian forces would occupy Dacca, the capital.

Kashmir Drive Launched

From AP-REUTER

India said today that it had the Pakistani army on the run in East Pakistan. But India admitted that the Pakistani army had launched a major offensive on Indian lines on the other side of India in Kashmir and fierce fighting was going on in the Chamb area.

A spokesman in New Dehli said the Pakistanis had attacked with two divisions of infantry backed by three regiments of armor and had captured the town of Mandalan.

"There has been very heavy fighting in this area," the spokesman said, "Fighting is still going on and we are regrouping our forces."

A Pakistani spokesman in Rawalpindi said the Pakistani forces were advancing rapidly in Kashmir.

The Chamb sector is in southwestern Kashmir between the Indian city of Jammu, and Sialkot in West Pakistan. It is ideal for tank manoeuvres and was the scene of heavy fighting in the 1965 war between India and Pakistan for the still-disputed territory of Kashmir.

The Indian spokesman said Pakistani forces have put heavy pressure on the Chamb sector and Poonch to the north since last Wednesday.

"Their main activity has been in these two sectors of Jammu and Kashmir," he said, "and they have repeatedly tried to capture Chamb."

Ceasefire Plea Up to Assembly

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — After three nights of meetings, the Security Council found itself unable even to issue a simple call for a ceasefire in the Indian sub-continent Monday night and passed the matter over to the 131-country General Assembly.

Deputies Appointed For Super-ministers

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government appointed four men Monday to serve as deputy ministers to new superministers to be appointed early next year in a reorganization of the cabinet.

Premier William Davis told a news conference the new ministers will have the sole responsibility of co-ordinating policy among a group of related departments.

He said a minister will not hold direct responsibility for administering any department within a group.

One group to be formed will deal with social development and will include the functions of the health, social services and education departments.

Dr. D. T. Wright, chairman of the commitee on university affairs, will be deputy minister of the social development group, Mr. Davis said.

Another new group will deal with environment and resource development, and will include matters related to industrial development and trade, agriculture, labor, natural resources, transportation and communications.

The deputy minister in this group will be Keith Reynolds, now deputy minister in the department of the prime minister.

The third policy area will include matters relating to justice, consumer affairs and correctional services and will have as its deputy minister Rendall Dick, now deputy attorney-general.

J. D. Fleck will become chief executive officer to the premier, a post equivalent to that now held by Dr. Reynolds.

Mr. Fleck is the executive director of the committee on government productivity, the body that recommended the reorganization.

Nixon's Statement 'Fantastic'

Trudeau Says U.S. Still Loves Us

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today President Nixon has made the "fantastically new statement" that the United States respects Canada's political and economic identity.

He said at a news conference that Mr. Nixon had said some things to him unequalled by any other president.

They represented a "breakthrough" in Canada-U.S. relations, Mr. Trudeau said.

Mr. Trudeau said no final conclusions were reached on specific economic problems though "another step" had been taken in "overall progress" on these matters.

There had been brief discussions with the premiers about negotiations, now lasting many months, to revise the USA auto production agreement. But those details were being handled at official and ministerial levels.

Mr. Trudeau said it is obvious that the 10 per-cent U.S. import surcharge, imposed with other trade-restricting measures Aug. 15, is temporary, as the U.S. had stated earlier.

Canada has estimated this surcharge affects perhaps up to $3 billion worth of annual exports to the U.S. north about $11 billion.

The main message from Mr. Nixon had been: "We don't want to gobble you up."

"We don't necessarily feel that there has to be a surplus with you (Canada)."

Trudeau said he hopes the United States will remove its 10-per-cent surcharge on imports after the Dec. 17 meeting of the Group of Ten here.

He said such removal is linked closely with readjustment of currencies sought by the U.S.

Mr Trudeau added at a news conference that he understands from U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally that the U.S. will be anxious and willing to remove the surcharge once realignment of currencies is achieved.

There had been a lot of questioning in Canada, particularly since August, about whether the U.S. had "stopped loving us."

The atmosphere in Canada toward the U.S. had apparently deteriorated and he had come to Washington to see whether any fence-mending was needed.

Mr. Trudeau said Mr. Nixon had given him a "true expression of friendship."

The U.S. had no desire to intervene in Canadian affairs and had deep respect for Canadians' wish to orient their political and economic destiny in their own way.

Mr. Trudeau said he had asked the president whether the U.S. always wanted to have a surplus trade balance with Canada.

The president had replied no, that Canada was in the same economic position as the U.S. had been before the First World War—dependent on foreign capital.

This had been an ungrudging and "fantastically new statement" by the president.

Mr. Trudeau said that in many cases Canada would welcome U.S. capital.

In other cases, Canada would want to do things "in our own way."

The "real breakthrough" of his visit was the U.S. recognition that Canada had the free dom to do just that.

Council to Reconsider Service Station Request

City council is going to take a slightly longer look at the request of Texaco Canada Ltd. for permission to erect a gasoline service station at the corner of Sidney and College Streets.

Some weeks ago the oil company requested zoning changes to allow oil station construction at two city locations — one at the corner of Bridge and Herchimer and the other at Sidney and College.

The request for the first location was turned down while the city's subordinate planning committee held a public hearing on the College street side.

The result was that the committee's action against a Quinte planning staff report and recommended that the oil company request be turned down.

Yesterday, however, an area supervisor for the oil company said there had been discrepancies in the subordinate planning committee hearing.

He said that an objecting petition bearing 56 names had been tabled at the meeting, but later investigation had shown that only 19 of the objectors lived within a 400-foot radius of the site.

The oil company had taken up a later petition bearing 97 names in favor of the gas station. Four people had signed both the objecting and favoring petitions.

The company spokesman decided claims that the oil station would be a traffic hazard and said that building setback requirements would actually increase visibility.

The area already had considerable commercial activity, the committee was told by the proposed new Sidney Street bridge indicated increased traffic on the route was expected.

The increased traffic would warrant construction of the service station, it was claimed.

On recommendation of Alderman Gerald Joyce the matter was referred back to the subordinate planning committee for clarification of information.

ters found that our aircraft were not operating over Cuba at the time of the attack.

A UN spokesman said on Monday that India and Pakistan had agreed to a four-hour cessation of hostilities in and around Dacca airport to permit evacuation of 69 UN personnel and 230 consular personnel and their families.

An attempt to evacuate them Monday fell through when two Indian MiGs allegedly bombed and strafed the airport as the evacuees waited at the airport. No one was hurt. India denied it was responsible for the attack.

Secretary-General U Thant expressed deep regret and anger to Canada Monday for invading the aircraft. The aggression attack was expressed in a statement read on Thant's behalf in the General Assembly after Canada and Pakistan made charges and counter-charges in the Security Council Monday night over the reason for the failure of the first attempt with India denying charges that she had attacked the Dacca airfield and Canada a ceasefire called to permit the evacuation.

The Canadian plane, commanded by Maj. E. H. Stone of Trenton, Ont., was on a routine round-trip taking Christmas supplies to Canadian observer forces. It landed in Dacca Saturday and the UN made a rush request through the Canadian mission in New York to be allowed to use it for evacuation of UN personnel and consular officials and their dependents.

The Canadian government agreed and a pre-arranged flight of Christmas supplies remaining in the plane were unloaded in Bangkok to permit the evacuation process.

Firemen's Raise OK

Belleville city firemen have been granted salary increases of 5 per cent over a two-year contract.

The new agreement, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, has been under negotiation for the past several weeks and it was approved yesterday by city council.

The new contract provides for four salary increases over the two - year period, two each in 1971 and 1972.

Effective the first of January this year, the pay of a fourth year fireman is increased from $8,500 to $8,910 with a second increase to $9,- 345 on July 1 this year.

Next January a fourth year fireman's pay will go to $9,810 and in July next year to $10,- 331.

By way of comparison, the pay of a first class constable on the city police force is $10,- 000 this year and will increase to $10,900 in 1972.

The starting salary of a probationary fireman now is $8,- 082 and in two stages will increase to $8,972 in July next year.

The salary schedule is based on a 6 per cent increase January 1971, 5 per cent in July this year, 5 per cent next January and 4 per cent next July.

The pay of a captain instructor with the department will increase to $11,231 effective next July.

The contract also gives firemen one additional statutory holiday — Remembrance Day — the same as now received by other city unions.

Sharpe Remarks Deseronto Mayor

DESERONTO (Staff) — Incumbent Deseronto Mayor James W. Sharpe swept the polls here last night to win his first contested election over former councillor Mrs. Dorothy McCullough.

From the very first, Mayor Sharpe's victory was apparent, ending in a total of 670 votes to Mrs. McCullough's count of 134.

In the two previous elections which led to his four-year term in office, Deseronto's mayor claimed his chair by acclamation.

This year, councillor Mrs. McCullough resigned her position on council, with one year of her term left to serve, in order to contest the mayoralty.

"I was happy to get the opposition and very pleased to get the results," Mayor Sharpe told The Intelligencer following his return to office.

Commenting on this, his first and successful contested election, he stated, "I guess this proved something anyway."

Asked if there were any plans for Deseronto's future, Mayor Sharpe indicated attempts would be made to reduce the present mill rate. "But, I don't know if this will be possible at present," he added.

With installation of sewers to nearly to town residents, the re-elected official said financial assistance for the town was of utmost importance and would attempt to seek aid to help pay for the new mains.

As well as general improvements for the town to the residents, he insisted that pursual of any industrial or business prospects would be done as long as it doesn't "cost the town any money."

Mrs. McCullough expressed disappointment at the results, but said she would continue to work for the best interests of Deseronto.

"I am feeling somewhat like Mrs. (Golda) Meir in a canyon of your peyer Monday night. President Nixon offered her a toy airplane and was looking for something a little bigger. That is the way I feel about the number of votes I pulled," she said.

"Democracy is not served by acclamation. I was happy to offer the election as advertised. I have enjoyed my experience on council during the two years I served where I have served the town to the best of my ability.

"Everyone knows my civic concern has been for the progress of the town of Deseronto."

Mrs. McCullough offered sincere thanks to her supporters and congratulations to the new council.

Because of the town's staggered voting system, only four seats were open for election this year . . . one more than usual because of Mrs. McCullough's resignation.

Elected to a regular two-year session were incumbent councillor Edgar Gordanier, who led the polls with 384 votes, and newcomers James McVicker, with 322 votes and John Mitchell with 306 votes. Fletcher Vick, also a newcomer, was elected to council with a 288 total. He will serve out the one - year term left vacant by the successful contender.

Other councillors who have one - year terms left to serve are Joseph Reynolds and Delmer Wannamaker.

A seat on the Public Utilities Commission comes vacant each year. Elected this year to a two - year term was Adrian McGowan, who defeated incumbent commissioner Frank Topping with a 390 vote total over 97.

The office of Reeve of Deseronto also came up for grabs this year, but on Nov. 25, George Loyens was returned to office by acclamation for another two-year term.

Returning officer for the election, Sam Knapp, village clerk, reported a total of 1,656 eligible voters. Of . . . or 57.1 per cent, turned out at the polls last night.

In the 1970 election, only 43 per cent voted.

Intersection Revision Discussed

Proposals for a revised intersection at the junction of Wallbridge - Loyalist Road and the Sidney Township Fourth Concession were discussed Monday afternoon at a meeting of Sidney township council.

The plan, incorporating the extension and reconstruction of Wallbridge - Loyalist Road north to Highway H, calls for a rapid flow of north-south traffic with a provision for off-lane for motorists en route to Wallbridge.

Representing the Belleville and Suburban Roads Commission at the meeting were chairman Harry Morrow and engineer Larry Langlois.

Chronic Runaways A Continuing Problem for Social Workers

Runaway children and youths who can't or won't live at home had a group of helping agency personnel stymied last night.

The habitual runaway winds up in a training school and the homeless youth can go on welfare. But there is insufficient personnel to follow up and guide troubled youngsters to adjust to society.

"One way or another, society is going to step in," summed up Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie concerning the child who can't live at home. The question is: what is the right way?"

A group of well - being, health, education and recreation employees, known as Where, met last night at the Four Seasons Hotel to discuss the subject, but came to no firm conclusions.

Chief Crosbie deplored the route from home to Children's Aid Society care, to training school then reform story and penitentiary.

"They eventually come out of training school to the home that caused their problem in the first place," he said. "Only two after-care workers responsible for follow-ups on children discharged from training schools-have a case load of 60 to 70 each and can't give adequate care."

The chief called for a centre to send children to a different environment on their return from training school.

"Send them to some sort of co-operative living centre in a city of comparable size. For instance, Chatham could take ours, and we could take Chatham's children. That way, they wouldn't be running with the same gang, wouldn't have a reputation to live up to."

But Children's Aid employees said children placed in a different environment would eventually find their way back to their original homes.

Isidore Cooperman, director of United Community Services, questioned the value of training schools for the child who meets all life's frustrations by running away.

"A training school can physically restrain these kids when they are upset and running," replied Bruce Kerr, director of the Family and Children's Services for Hastings county.

"I have a better staff than any training school in the province. The training schools have only one thing I don't have — bolts on the doors and locks on the windows."

"So many of these kids are so screwed up before they come to our attention that there is very, very little we can do for them," said Mr. Kerr.

He told the group that about 50 per cent of the children in care of Belleville's 51 Children's Aid Societies are teenagers.

"Child welfare on this continent is less than 100 years old," he said. "We are still learning about the best placement of children. At first, all went to orphanages. Then the pendulum swung to the other extreme and all children had to go into foster homes. Now we are realizing that not all kids adjust to the same situation and some need group home care, some need institutional care and some need foster care."

Consensus was reached that the helping agencies must contact parents to aid them in rearing their children.

A listener asked if problem parents should be forced to relinquish their children at an early age, as soon as it becomes apparent to the parents were inadequate.

"I hope it never happens in this country," said Mr. Kerr. "But if it does, I hope we will be fighting with the people who live in the houses at the top of the hill as well as those at the bottom. Because the people at the top of the hill have as many problems with their kids as those in the slums."

Music Festival Grant Approved

The city of Belleville will again make a financial contribution toward the provision of top musical talent for the March 1972 Rotary Music Festival.

The grant to the service club is for $300.

But Alderman Ben Carlo felt that now that the Rotary Festival had gotten off the ground in its first three years of operation there might not be a need for the grant.

He said that just because the city had contributed in the past was not enough to justify the grant.

Alderman Enos David, however, said the requested grant might go a long way to assist arene young musician.

Winter Works Project Approved

NAPANEE (Staff) — The first Quinte district winter works project, under the federal government's Local Incentive Programs has been officially approved.

The project, organized by this town's Lions Club involves installation of a green-belt area on the north shore of the Napanee River.

Approval of a grant of $20,033 for the project was received late last week, G. O. Heskett, Lions Club Manpower manager revealed here today.

He described it as a "general beautifying and anti-pollution move," by the Lions Club" and will employ nine men throughout the winter.

Old limestone buildings on the site, owned by the city club, will be demolished and the stone will provide retaining walls and shoring down to the river.

One of the buildings was a former woodworking mill.

Limestone is indigenous to the area and its use will be based primarily on the surrounding greenbelt.

The site could become a tourist attraction and the club hopes to have much of the project completed by the summer.

Total cost of the entire project, aimed at lifting the esthetic affect of the river shore, was not known by the Manpower manager.

"I don't know just what the Lion's Club are putting forth themselves," he said, they've put quite a bit into it, now. It was a fair amount I understand."

Thus the LIP grant permits work this winter the club would have faced next year besides providing some jobs in the area, he said.

Work permitted by the LIP grant will continue until May, when a sizeable amount of the project will be finished said Mr. Nesbitt.

Tribute Is Paid Teacher

Miss Madeline Young died last week. Her going has left a void in many hearts.

Miss Young was a brilliant woman, the holder of three university degree, arts from McMaster, education from Chicago, and a master's degree from Columbia.

Her career in teaching began at Albert College, followed by a period as head of the English Department at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School. Her longest tenure of teaching was as a Master of English at the Toronto Teachers' College. Throughout her career, Miss Young was an inspiration and a friend to her colleagues and her colleagues.

For many years, she was active in the University Women's Club, both in Belleville and in Toronto.

Memories of Miss Young are lovely, happy ones. Her knowledge and love of books, music, drama, art, travel, brought much happiness to her, a happiness she shared with others.

Her cheerful courage in the last years of her life when her sight failed endeared her specially to her countless friends.

Miss Madeline Young was deeply loyal to her family, her church, her friends, her ideals. It was a joy and a privilege to be counted as one of her friends.

A Friend

Thirty Youths On Welfare

Thirty Hastings county young people aged 16 through 18 are living away from home on welfare today.

Eighteen of them are going to school, two are attending local post - secondary school institutions and 10 are "looking diligently for work."

Reginald Tucker, director of Hastings County Department of Social Services released the latest statistics on young people living on welfare to a meeting of helping agency personnel at the Four Seasons Hotel last night.

The county has a further 22 people aged 19 to 21 on welfare and looking for work, he said.

Among the 52 aged 18 through 21 who are receiving assistance, only seven to 10 per cent don't want a job, Mr. Tucker said.

"You are looking at a very small number of people who say 'just give me a line brother, and don't ask questions'", he told his listeners.

When a youth refuses to live at home, the county welfare department checks out the case to determine if the home "is not conducive to the physical or moral welfare" of the youth.

"Refusal to accept the family's discipline is not a legitimate reason for welfare assistance," said Mr. Tucker.

"But if the parents tell us the home is not available to the child, welfare is available to him."

"The policy here is to provide room and board for the young person who cannot live at home.

"Whether room and board because the youth is assured of a warm place to sleep and one hot meal a day. And we are protected, in the unlikely case the parents have an interest, against any charges."

The county welfare department pays $83 a month for room and board for a young person. Total amount the young person can collect is $92.50 a month. The difference between the board money and the $92.50 is issued for necessities of life and pocket money.

Library Extension OK If Funds Available

Belleville city council yesterday gave tentative approval to the construction of the proposed addition to the downtown library, but the okay is conditional on the availability of funds.

Council voted that immediate application be made for approval of the project under the special development loan program and if this is okayed, an early construction of start will be made to take advantage of winter works money.

Alderman Ben Corke expressed where the capital works money for the $230,000 library addition would come from in view of other commitments in the city's capital works program.

But city manager J. R. Reynolds said that with next year's increase in assessment he didn't expect much difficulty in obtaining Ontario Municipal Board approval for an increased capital works quota in 1972 to take care of the library addition.

Alderman Gerald Joyce questioned how much construction work on the library could be done by May of next year — in order to take advantage of possible winter works program grants.

He said it just wasn't reasonable to expect the detailed plans could be drawn and tenders called in time.

Alderman Enos David urged that the library addition go ahead.

Barbed Wire May Win Out

Barbed wire fencing erected as security for industrial and commercial properties is still under discussion at city council and now it appears that the fences could win out.

At least council has tabled fence erection requests from two industrial firms until it is determined just how regulatory measures should be handled.

Council some months ago voted to rigidly enforce its "permissive bylaw regarding barbed wire fences" and it was pointed out that the city itself had many installations of this type of fencing.

Since then a survey of other municipalities has indicated that barbed wire fencing is generally allowed.

Yesterday council discussed requesting of its bylaw but City Manager J. R. Reynolds told council it is necessary as the fences were allowed with council okay.

Alderman Works rep Mred Johnson was denied its request to erect barbed wire fencing. Last night it renewed its request with a similar request in from Consolidated Canada.

Simpsons Sears had erected barbed wire around an outdoor facility at the Quinte Mall, but later removed it on direction from council.

Alderman Gerald Joyce noted the reason for barbed wire fencing was for protection of property and said the city had a responsibility to industry.

He said he would like to see even more barbed wire fencing.

David Bar-Illan's Virtuosity Evident

By EUGENE LANG

A truly miserable rainy night proved no deterrent to hundreds of local and district members of the Belleville Community Concert Association who endeared all BCI Auditorium last evening to hear the second appearance here in two years of the young Israeli pianist David Bar-Illan. This highly-gifted keyboard wizard who has been heard with the leading orchestras of Europe and America and has travelled widely as solo performer on three continents once more made a lasting impression on the audience with his stunning pianism. Seldom do Belleville listeners reward a musician with a standing ovation, but this was the case with this whole-hearted appraisal of Mr. Bar-Illan's marvelous artistry at the piano.

At the request of the soloist, all programme notes possessed of the audience were peremptorily filed in laps as said folded pages were for 1975 concerts, thus the pianist became also conductor, a task which he handled adroitly.

The opener was a Gavotte with six variations by Jean Philippe Rameau, dean of 18th century French keyboard composers. A tender theme was given added evocative appeal by passage work of clean articulation and crystal clarity.

Schubert's largest canvas for the piano is his Wanderer Fantasia, composed in 1822 using as its theme the melody he had written for a song Das Wanderer. It is a demanding piece throughout and represents the pinnacle of Schubert's pianistic style for difficulty. Mr. Himself could not play it, once stopping abruptly and saying "Let the devil himself play this piece." It was a demonstrable performance that Mr. Bar-Illan projected for us, here piano pairing with powerful persuasion in the outer movements and etching with warmhearted personal in the slow movement. The first movement broke somewhat at the seams owing to fluctuations of tempo when the more melodic episodes were interwoven. The final section thundered with increasing impetus as Mr. Bar-Illan chased headlong to a brilliant climax, touching up third last measure with Lisztian tricks that Schubert did not write into score. Over-all an exciting rendition.

Two works by living composers took our attention into present times, first The Masque segment from The Age of Anxiety of Leonard Bernstein. Here we had clever jazz rhythms teased about with careful abandon and forceful syncopation supporting keyboard. The Suite by fellow countryman Paul Ben-Haim turned out to be most interesting from the wistful opening Pastorale, through the frenetic Capriccio, then on the the closing Con Grazioso, finally arriving at the brittle glassy glare of the closing Toccata with its reiterated finger gymnastics. A rewarding account of this Op. 5 from the soloist. The work itself being an added asset to the recital.

Schubert and Liszt held sway following intermission with the listeners in complete approval at all times. Two etudes, the Aeolian Harp Op. 25 No. 11, and the Black Key (Op. 10 No. 5) started the Chopin group off at a modulating tempo with over rubatos, the second with crisp attack on the contrasting speed. One of the loveliest nocturnes, that in D Flat Major Op. 27 No. 2 was handled with soulful searching as Mr. Bar-Illan set in motion the ever broken arpeggios flowingly under the long lingering melody with its elaborate ornamentation. The scherzo in C Sharp Minor Op. 39 reached dramatic agitation in its masculine approach, yet was exteralingly soft loud at the chorale interjection with walled filigree of gossamer touch. Tremendous build up in coda brought the work to roaring conclusion of oceans of sonority. A short note re Mr. Bar-Illan's Chopin: In all pieces he probed for inner melodies from the surrounding ment, bringing out calculated thematic references and counter melodies where possible. Perhaps a personal preference and a clear innovation, but Chopin didn't always call for it in the score.

The piano was finally put through the limit of its resistance in the Liszt works that concluded the recital. First, an exception to treasure the angelic En Reve, a late nocturne played with misty poetry — a lovely piece indeed heard. The Danse Sonata, of stormy and tempestuous character is one of the most remarkable of all Liszt's piano compositions. Though the execution envelops it, this bring forcefully realized by our soloist in a blazing performance that left no doubts to his technical accomplishments and his recreation of this intense pianistic tour de force. Mr. Bar-Illan exhausted both himself and Steinway with this final scheduled selection, then offered to receive a standing ovation. He replied with a dramatic first the 26th Prelude of Debussy (Fireworks) delivered with shimmering arpeggios and ethereal glissandos and finally being forth with ever renewed energy to dazzle all with a thrilling performance of that old war horse, the Rakoczy March, otherwise known as the 15th Hungarian Rhapsody. No quarter was given as piano responded wizardly and vehemence of its attacker. Who was this? Both Barilland and three legged companion — in a dream. A sure fire conclusion to an excellent recital. We know that everyone was pleased to the utmost.

The Parade

It is over for another year — But what a parade, surely one of Belleville's very best Christmas season efforts. If its overall excellence lacked anything it may have been that there were fewer bands and fewer majorette groups than in the past.

All in all it was a heart-warming experience on a day that was chillier than had been anticipated. It takes a lot of spunk to get out there and march on a cold December day. At least the marchers have some added protection as they move, but for those on floats it is not such a comfortable experience and at least one small participant was reduced to tears.

Miss Dominion of Canada, Norma Hickey, was there, and hadn't we seen her not so long ago at the Quinte Mall? So too was Nancy Dillon of OSD, in the role of Miss Santa Claus Parade, along with many another pretty lass. A red-outfitted Indian teen led one majorette group and there was a bunch of her young Mohawk friends to greet her from the sidewalk outside this office.

And what Christmas parade would be without Santa Claus, not to mention music man Bobby Gimby and his magic horn, horsemen and their mounts and shaggy ponies . . . and well it was a great day wasn't it. Congratulations to the organizers and appreciation to all who took part.

Maybe one parade a year is enough, but as a footnote we have often thought it would also do much for the community if we were to have an Easter parade. What form it would take would be a matter for discussion, but there is much to be learned from the traditional format of such parades in say New York. It would also help to dispel those winter blues and put us on the road to summer. And just think, in Sweden they have celebrations in mid-summer, for that season if anything is shorter there than it is here.

India-Pakistan Conflict

How long the stepped-up India-Pakistan confrontation lasts we don't know but who would have believed an old-fashioned conventional war, including even naval engagements.

It would seem both fair and logical that East Pakistan be permitted to become an independent nation. That was the will of the people at least in the election some months ago but the Pakistan government has been busy trying to maintain the status quo and imposing a reign of terror on the populace ever since.

And speaking of conventional war this one even has overtones of empire and gunboat psychology. Remembering that India and Pakistan before partition were very much in the British empirical orbit this is not so surprising. Many of the officers of both countries have received military training in Britain with the result that some sound more British than the British.

Thus we have the Indian military commander, Lt.-Gen. Jagti Singh Aurora saying this sort of thing: "There has been good fighting. The Paks have fought well and my chaps have fought well." Informed that his country was officially at war, Aurora, a Sikh, was quoted as saying: A soldier is always pleased to get the chance to exercise his professional skill."

We would hope that whatever the result the lack of conflict over Kashmir was relatively short-lived — it will not involve the direct intervention of Russia or China whose favors are on the side of India and Pakistan respectively. Somehow we doubt it; last time around Soviet Premier Kosygin was instrumental in achieving a peace settlement, and with China now a member of the United Nations there will be more pressure on the latter to behave. Militarily; the objective for India at least is to end the uncertainty on its border with East Pakistan, where the influx of refugees has resulted in an intolerable situation. Whether it remains as simple an issue as that remains to be seen.

Diefenbaker Backers Say He Could Regain West

Twenty-Six Prairie Seats Could Swing Next Election

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So the Conservatives are Going-So for the oncoming election.

With all systems go.

Almost.

Four provincial election victories, the big one their smashing Ontario triumph, Public opinion polls flashing green for the Conservatives, red for Liberals and yellow for the New Democrats.

Strength in the Atlantic provinces federally.

Prospects looking up in Quebec with Real Caouette's Social-Creditistes undercutting the traditional Liberal power-base, and astronomically improving the Conservative position.

The promise of good gains to come in Ontario with Premier Bill Davis' provincial Conservatives ready to roll out their Big Blue Machine for the federal party for the first time since former Premier Leslie Frost was at his Queen's Park controls.

Soldiers so solid in Alberta where with the help of Premier Peter Lougheed's provincial administration, the federal party is talking about liquidating the last big Liberal pockets of strength including Agriculture Minister Bud Olson's Medicine Hat constituency.

British Columbia? Who knows. Not even the worried Liberals pretend to.

So that leaves Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Thirteen seats in each of the two for a total of 26.

Small campaign potatoes compared to Ontario's 88 or Quebec's 74.

But 26 could be make or break in a tight, near-majority race.

And there sits the man in the House of Commons who could — if he were used to advantage harvest most of what might be those crucial 26 votes.

He is Conservative Conservative Prime Minister John Gregory Diefenbaker, of course.

And he is not being used.

Was not used in the last federal election, polled out, at the very last minute, strictly on his own, across Saskatchewan to try to stem into a slipping Conservative cause.

But wait, you say . . . he did be not go out to Assiniboia for that record Saskatchewan federal by-election . . . and did the Conservatives not lose to the NDP?

Yes they did.

But the Old Chief did not venture into always NDP-inclined Assiniboia because he thought he could transform threatened defeat into victory for the Conservatives.

He went into Assiniboia simply because he knew that if he did not, his detractors would say he did not care enough to try for a win and blame him for the defeat.

The other day in an interview, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield kept up to the problem, the promise and the potential of John Diefenbaker.

Sure, the Liberals have kicked him about being a shadow leader with their slogan "The Chief."

And Mr. Stanfield has had the good sense to launch it off.

He is aware of the still lingering resentment among Prairie Diefenbaker loyalists that he allowed himself to be used in the leadership race as the instrument for cutting down the old chief.

He knows, too, that the Prairie Conservatives are far to the right of the party's centre and are suspicious that he pays over-attention to those on the left.

Rightly or wrongly that is the way the Conservative cake cuts out West.

Stanfield says he knows in what high respect the ultra-popular Dief is held on the Prairies. He says he knows Dief worries about the "direction" on the right. A centre must maybe a bit left — his leadership is taking Conservatives. He concedes Dief's loyalty during his own absence from the Commons.

Like most of all breeding blue as the Senior Statesman and Old Warrior he is.

Like all being blue and who has still tremendous vote potential.

NEVER SAY GOOD-BYE TO "JOEY" WHILE HE'S STILL IN HIS SEAT.

Drugs: And What About Those Pushers?

Kingston Whig-Standard

There are a few basic propositions which should be faced each time the adult community — in Kingston or anywhere else — is forced to contemplate the "drug problem" in schools.

In the first place the school children who are hooked on drugs are victims and not instigators — it is adults who operate the most lucrative racket in North America. Answers to questions addressed by Whig-Standard reporters to the Frontenac County Board of Education, Loyalist Collegiate and Vocational Institute and the RCMP concerning drugs in the schools indicate that punitive action is directed at students. Very little attention seems to be paid to the adult criminals who run the drug operation in Kingston.

It is common knowledge that there is no difficulty attached to getting drugs — soft or hard — in some city schools. The pushers are students. Now, where do the student-pushers get their supplies of drugs? Obviously from the underworld suppliers. If they have this easy access how is it that the police profess such inability to identify the prime suppliers?

As for the Frontenac County School Board, it has done the same thing as the school board has recently in Sudbury — deprived school students of some of their basic civil rights. The Board has given local principals the discretionary power to suspend students who use alcohol or drugs on school property. There is no question, apparently, of honoring that basic requirement of our system of justice: a man is innocent until proven guilty. Recently a student of LCVI was suspended in this way even though he had only been charged with possession by the RCMP. Being charged and being convicted are different things.

It is obviously a part of the working philosophy of our society that it is much easier to pursue and punish the victims of our present social disease, drug addiction, than to invade the fearsome realm of organized crime where the trouble begins, where the drugs originate, where the profits are made — and where the latest violence exists.

The drug situation as LCVI man is a "wild" as a self-confessed addict stated in a recent interview for this newspaper. That is nothing new in Canada. What the citizens of this city are entitled to is some evidence that the local detachment of the RCMP, with its big establishment (the number of men on the local strength has so far remained undisclosed) and its narcotics "experts", with its access to all the crime-busting machinery in Canada — and because of the fact that it is the only force with the power to deal with drugs — has some clue about how to go about eliminating this area of local drug traffic. The public would like to know that the drug scene is not so "wild" that it defies solution.

Abortion Issue

State Need Not Approve

Quebec Le Soleil: We have just gone through a small virtual war which recently appeared in Montreal entitled Abortion Yesterday and Today. The author . . . presents the thorny question of abortion, discussing . . . the future of civilization, medical research, civil legislation, and the outlook of the church.

It is a book everybody ought to read . . . especially those who believe in women's liberation a la Pize Payette, who says she wants to be the owner of her own body and wants to be free to demand a stop to pregnancy as she would be free to demand the removal of a tooth, not to mention her tongue. . . .

In what concerns us and especially those who maintain that abortion is a part of women's liberation, we know to what excess the humanitarian aborter has gone since the passage of the federal omnibus bill. One also forgets that hundreds of "nice" Quebec girls cross the American border every week for the "miniconception" at New York's bargain prices.

Behind the parade to the border and the doubtful confessions under which the operations are carried out have rapidly incited the apostles of total abortion to demand the intervention of Canadian legislators to allow poor women to be aborted under better conditions. And others who take the step in the name of all imaginable principles, which by chance, exclude the most important, that of murder.

Abortion legislation appears all the more unjustified since it comes into conflict with the universal civil rights recognized for the human fetus. . . .

We know that the omnibus bill of 1968 adopted legal modifications to allow the interruption of pregnancy under certain conditions, in certain cases. . . . Further modifications to the bill will never justify in any way a women aborting herself.

What we must understand in the modifications is that the state shall no intention to substitute itself for the individual conscience, as if every one of us must develop a private and moral responsibility. Though there be 500 or 5,000 "nice" Quebec girls who feel their life threatened by pregnancy every week, it is not up to the state to pay the price for their turpitude.

Laws are made for all citizens to apply according to their principles and convictions. . . . Although the governments does not want to be the director of anybody's conscience, it does have justified in legalizing immorality in any form. To do so would mean opening the door to a nation's decadence.

India And Pakistan Embark on Full-scale War

It is very difficult to be a dissenter in the Soviet Union—to disagree with the Government, that is, and make it plain that one is of such a mind. People do make such a stand there however, like the 25-year-old typist who recently was jailed for five years for scattering leaflets on a Moscow square in June demanding freedom for political prisoners. Her name is Nadezhda Yemelkina, and her fate (her trial was in secret) would not have been disclosed were it not for what are described as "dissident sources." Miss Yemelkina is that rare person in the Soviet Union — a campaigner for civil rights.

LONDON (CP) — All the grim ritual that usually precedes total war has now unfolded in the case of India and Pakistan.

The world currently is bracing for the great effort that must go into finding some means of restoring a semblance of permanent peace between these giant-sized members of the Commonwealth.

Indira Gandhi, India's prime minister, already has expressed her skepticism about the idea of stationing United Nations observers in East Pakistan, the borders of which with India are a flashpoint for trouble on the subcontinent.

Foreigners had been there before and their report, about what Mrs. Gandhi calls "the reign of terror released by the Pakistan army" were of little practical effect in stopping alleged atrocities against the civilian population, the Indian leader says.

Since her initial words on this thorny topic, the Indian-Pakistani hostilities have spread from the East to the western dividing line between the two countries.

Moreover, the crisis is immeasurably magnified not only by the extension of the fighting but also by the likely involvement of China and the Soviet Union as friends of either side.

The Russians have expressed support for the Indians, bolstering this degree of backing with substantial supplies of weapons.

Peking has been consistently identified with the Pakistani cause, despite what for the British would be a logical invitation to back East Pakistan guerrillas in their fight against the central government based hundreds of miles to the West.

But added world powers besides the Russians and Chinese are anxiously watching the Indo-Pakistani feud.

In Britain, for instance, government leaders have been stressing Prime Minister Heath's attempts at urging both Mrs. Gandhi and Pakistan President Yahya Khan to refrain from flinging India into a full-scale war.

Yahya Khan too has had harsh words for what he contends are efforts by others to influence the domestic affairs of Pakistan under the guise of compassion for the helpless inhabitants of his country's Eastern region.

Marmora Legionnaires Open New Headquarters Building

By RUBY McCOY
Special Correspondent

MARMORA — A history-making event took place in Marmora last Saturday as Marmora Branch 237 of the Royal Canadian Legion held its official opening ceremonies at the new Legion Hall.

The chairman of the committee delegated to organize and conduct the ceremonies, Mr. Gordon Bennett DFD, CD whose efforts on behalf of the branch resulted in an excellent day of activities concluded with a dance attended by an overflow crowd.

The day's program commenced with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at which past president, Percy Gray gave a short talk on the history of the branch going back to 1926 and gived the high points of the branch up to the present.

This was followed by the dedication carried out by vice-president William MacDonald who stressed the fact that through the people of Marmora, their support in many ways and their generosity to the branch is this important undertaking, it was possible for the branch to move ahead. He pointed out that the facilities of the branch would always be available to them.

After the dedication, the ribbon was cut by the guest of honor, Don Wilson president of the Royal Canadian Legion, Ontario Command.

Thanks was then tendered by the branch president Wilbert (Pete) Empey.

Following the ribbon-cutting ceremony, the guest of honor and out-of-town guests were taken on a short visit to the Marmoraton Mining Co. which had been arranged by Mr. Empey.

A reception was held between 5 and 6 p.m. in the afternoon to accommodate visitors and townspeople who had not viewed the new Legion Hall. A large attendance was on hand for this and many people commented on the attractive new quarters and the advantages it will offer for meetings, banquet and dances.

The evening festivities commenced with a banquet at 6:30 p.m. for 185 people. The dinner was preceded by the marching on of the colors by a color party comprising Sgt. - at - Arms Jim Rothwell, followed by the marching on of the head table guests. The chairman introduced the many visiting dignitaries from the many Legion Branches who had sent representatives to the official opening in Marmora.

Grace was pronounced by Rev. J. Kemp, padre for the evening and was followed by a toast to the Queen proposed by chairman Gordon Bennett.

A fine dinner of barbecued chicken and deep fried spare ribs was enjoyed and was followed by some pleasant but brief speeches.

Mrs. Pete Empey, president of the Marmora Legion Women's Auxiliary, spoke on behalf of the Auxiliary members: welcoming the many visitors and thanking everyone for their interest in the branch.

Greetings were brought to the branch by Earl Brant, District Commander, who complimented the branch on its achievements to date and extended his best wishes for continuing success.

President Empey then introduced the guest speaker, Don Wilson, Ontario Command President, who said it was a great privilege to attend a function such as this. He pointed out the importance of reaching the milestone and was sure it was of equal importance to the people of Marmora. He commented that his position as president of Ontario Command was made very rewarding by the accomplishments of branches such as Marmora's.

Tom Shannon, vice-president thanked the speaker for his interest and fine speech.

After the dinner, the hall was cleared for dancing to Jack McCann's Western Rhythmers-completing a long and rewarding day.

The donation of large portraits of the two World War II commanders, Field Marshall Bernard Montgomery and General Dwight D. Eisenhower by Junior Wilson was gratefully accepted and they will be given a prominent place in the new hall.

Marmora Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion had its beginning from the members of the Great War Veterans' Association which was formed here about 1920 and had their meetings in a room over what is presently the Toronto - Dominion Bank.

The Canadian Legion was formed in 1925 at Winnipeg with veterans' organizations as the leadership of Field Marshal Earl Haig. Marmora GWVA did not join until September 2, 1932 with 18 charter members — Exen Arnold, A. Bartlett, C. A. Bleaker, W. Cotterill, F. Grant, P. Gray, W. Hickey, N. Kilpatrick, J. Laird, T. McQuaig, C. Jones, M. Mumby, H. Osborne, L. Ruddle, C. Tandy, H. Wright, A. V. Yates, and J. Nokes. Percy Gray was the first president.

In 1928-29 the Memorial Building was erected on land partly owned by the GWVA and they were granted a room in it to be theirs as long as the building existed. The building also housed the library and post office. Plaques were placed at the front entrance honoring 1914-18 veterans who gave their lives and later plaques were also placed for those of World War II.

In 1945, expecting an influx of members, the old vets (45-29 years old then) purchased the building, recently vacated from Judge Parker of Toronto and Marmora. The old Legion room was kept but was put to use by the Ladies Auxiliary who received their charter Feb. 18, 1947. The first president was Myrtle Potts who was succeeded after two months by Alfreda Leal.

In the new building, the first bar licence under LCBO was obtained with the requirement of 50 members. Since it was the only branch with one for some distance Marmora signed up over 300 members — a fair number from outside the Marmora area.

Wilbert Mumby was the president during this transaction and was the first to be sent to a Dominion Convention (Quebec City 1946) and to an Ontario Convention (Windsor - 1947). He was also Marmora's first zone commander and was followed as such by Percy Gray.

Other older presidents were L. Ruddle, T. Pritchard, W. Bedore, T. Conniss, A. V. Yates and successive ones since 1947 have been H. Higgins, W. Regen, C. Bedore, S. Kerr, W. Rothwell, Percy Gray Jr., Robert Gray, S. Desmond, H. Wright, J. Lowery, William MacDonald, P. Gray and W. Empey.

In 1962 all living charter members were granted life membership with the exception of P. Gray Sr. and A. Bartlett who had been given theirs previously, as had W. Mumby. These members were: G. Grant, W. Hickey, W. Cotterill, N. Mumby, H. Osborne, C. Tandy, and H. Wright.

In 1970 like dissembership was granted five more 1914-18 vets who had been faithful to the Legion over the years: Lorne Gray, H. Naylor, G. Wellman, William Bakker, F. Leal. Five more were proposed and granted last year and will shortly be presented.

First move to obtain the present building began in spring of 1970 when it was put up for tender by Hastings County School Board and a tender was put in by the branch with small hope of getting it. William MacDonald, past president and Percy Gray, president, contacted practically all members of the board, council revees, and anyone who might influence the procurement. The branch submitted the only tender so were sold the building and 2.3 acres of land.

With all the legal work done, ownership was obtained in Sept. 1970 and visit necessary renovations were able to move into the licensed sections — ladies' room and men's room — for July 1, 1971.

Bill Will State Right To Religious Dissent

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government will introduce minor amendments dealing with the right of religious dissent in an effort to ensure the constitutionality of its bill to reorganize education in Montreal, Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said Monday.

A recent study done for the education department by three lawyers shows Bill 28 to be fully constitutional if the Canadian constitution is interpreted liberally but a restricted interpretation of article 93 of the British North America Act could cause legal argument.

The article guarantees the right of religious dissent to minorities in Canada.

Mr. Saint-Pierre said he would announce the government decision to mitigate "what could be a restrictive interpretation of the constitution" today.

The minister was speaking in the national assembly during debate on a motion by Creditiste members that study of Bill 28 be postponed for six months. This motion was defeated.

Bill 28 is designed to reduce the 33 Protestant and Roman Catholic school boards on Montreal Island to 11 "neutral" boards.

During the two-hour debate on the Creditiste motion, William Tetley, minister of financial institutions, criticized both French and English "extremist" opponents of the bill and called for harmony in support of its adoption.

"If we don't believe in a separate Quebec, then nor can we believe in separation of French and English communities at the school board level," he said.

Bill 28 would not infringe on anyone's rights, said Mr. Tetley as he asked that French Quebecers "lend an understanding ear" to English anxiety about the "political and linguistic" climate surrounding the bill.

Later in the debate, Jean-Noel Tremblay Drummond-Arthabaska-Drummond) called on the government to repeal a law—Bill 63, which gives parents the right to choose the language of instruction of their children. He said the government should draw up "an over-all language policy which will meet the objective of making French the working language in Quebec."

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM D. BELNAP

Belnap — King

Rev. Nathan Bowering officiated at the recent double-ring ceremony in Bloomfield United Church when Marilyn Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur King became the bride of William Belnap, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Belnap, Mrs. G. Fox provided organ music for the occasion while Miss Janice Istead sang the solos.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of imported crystal peau with a Victorian neckline and long lace sleeves. The bodices and sleeves were enhanced with Swiss lace. The flowing train extending from the shoulders was also trimmed with lace. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a tiara of pearls and her bouquet was of pink roses, ivy, fern and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by Nelda McDonald, maid of honor wearing a pink crushed velvet, floor-length, empire waisted gown with long sleeves and silver trim. She wore matching flowers in her hair. The bridesmaids were Kathy McDonald and Lorraine King, the bride's sister who wore floor-length gowns of blue crushed velvet and flowers in their hair. They carried nosegays of pink and white carnations.

Little Miss Debbie Rabble, the bridegroom's cousin was flower girl in a white floor-length gown of crushed velvet with pink bow and flowers in her hair. She carried a basket of pink and blue flowers.

The best man was James King while Ronald Baldwin and Glen Foster, cousins of the bridegroom were ushers.

A reception followed at the Northport community hall where guests were received by the bride's mother wearing a turquoise crimplene dress with a full-length lace matching coat and beige accessories. Her corsage was, a yellow orchid.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a two-piece cost dress of brocaded forbrid in sand and beige with brown accessories and an orange orchid corsage.

For the wedding trip to North Bay and points north, the bride donned a beige and brown suit suit with matching accessories and a green and white orchid corsage.

Upon return the couple will reside at Northport.

Queen's Daughter Anne Is Swinging Pop Fan

LONDON (CP) — Princess Anne has a "shooting-pistol temper" and when she is in an imperious mood, the Buckingham Palace staff refer to her among themselves as "Madam."

But the Queen's 21-year-old daughter is also a swinging pop fan who "baths to pop, eats to pop and goes to bed to pop." Among friends, her favorite expressions are "bloody," "fab" and "gretty", and she is far less snobbish about her social life than many debs from less eminent homes.

A country doctor's son who met her at a party was astounded when she suggested that he call her up sometime at the palace. He did so with some trepidation, was immediately put through to Princess Anne's suite and she promptly invited him to a family dinner party at Windsor Castle.

These and many other glimpses of the Royal Family off duty are given in a new book called Royal Sporting Lives, by journalist Owen Hughes, published by Hamish Hamilton.

Despite its title, the book—held text, half photographs—ranges beyond the Royal Family's sporting activities to cover the whole home life of the Queen and her immediate circle, the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret, the Kents and the Gloucesters.

The Queen Mother is still extremely Scottish in her personality, says Owen Hughes, even after 40 years of living mainly in the south of England. Unlike her granddaughter Anne, who cannot bear watching and takes her bicycle even for a short trip to the stables, the elder Queen Elizabeth loves walking alone to recharge her energies.

Author Hughes says Princess Margaret is "undoubtedly the best-read of all the members of the Royal Family," keeping up with contemporary biographies. The Queen prefers to relax with television while the Queen Mother favors thrillers and magazines like Country Life, The Field and The Connoisseur.

If You Must Grab That Phone--Learn How

By DORIS CLARK

A good friend of mine has a gripe about children answering the telephone.

When the telephone rings, one type of response in the caller's mind is to speak to Mrs. J. is: "She isn't in. Who is it?" Or, "She's in. Who is it?" or merely, "Who is it?"

Next type merely shouts, "Hey Mew, it's for you!" — It's your next-door neighbor on the full blast!

Most jarring of all is the pre-

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD

The November - December meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Guild was held at the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon, President, Mrs. S. Fraser extended a welcome to all and opened the meeting.

Mrs. A. Stalker led in devotions. Mrs. R. Thompson gave the secretary's report and read correspondence. Mrs. R. Muckleston gave a report on the bazaar's report and bazaar results which were most gratifying. Mrs. R. Jones, convener of bazaar thanked all who worked, and donated items to the bazaar and helped to make it a success. Donations for mental health association are to be left at the church office.

The meeting was turned over to Miss Frede Matthews for election of officers and Mrs. V. Weir presented the slate of officers for 1972.

Rev. A. L. Sutherland commended the group on the work being done by the Women's Guild and the fellowship they enjoy together.

He installed the officers as follows: honorary presidents, Mrs. A. L. Sutherland, Mrs. W. H. V. Walker; past president, Mrs. R. Jones; president, Mrs. S. Fraser; 1st vice-president, Mrs. C. Hiiner; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. M. Fairbairn; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. R. Kingston; secretary, Mrs. H. Kingston; treasurer, Mrs. R. Nicholl; flower conveners, Mrs. A. Cleary and Mrs. C. If I confront my parents, they say they have every right to. Do you think it would help if I locked the door? — Sick and Tired

Dear Sick and Tired: Of course you are entitled to some privacy, I think, though, that locking the door is the answer. This is where communication is so important.

There's no point in ranting and raving. But you could point out that it's hard for anyone to function where there is a complete lack of privacy. You are a distinct and unique person, and deserves to be treat ed as such.

The much prying has been called "malpractice of parenthood."

Dear Doris: I'm not coming to give you a headache with my problems.

Voila! To close an argument I'd like to know in what year the Titanic ship parish and what month and date. — An Old Plodder

Dear Plodder: A French Canadian pioneer, no?

Here it is: The Titanic was a tremendous "unsinkable" luxury vessel on his maiden voyage to Canada (from Great Britain. As it saw the iceberg ahead it worried not at all: It had been made so well. Had a double hull. Could not sink.

On April 14, 1912, it did collide with the iceberg, and it did go down — just two and a half hours after the crash. Of the 2,207 passengers aboard, only 705 survivors were picked up.

Dramatic stories are told of the courageous and doomed mass of humanity on that ship who wheel down singing to the heavens, "Nearer My God to Thee!"

Ann Landers

There Are Also Nagging Husbands

Dear Ann Landers: You are 100 per cent right in your answer to "Ohio Screamer." Nagging wives are horrible. If there is anything worse than a nagging wife—it's a nagging husband. But, strangely enough, we hear very little about them. The way is almost always assumed to be a woman.

I married a nagger and I can tell you what it's like. It's like having a buzzing fly in your ear at all times. The nagger's pattern is the same. He looks for something that need to be done—or aren't done to his liking—and then he nags, picks, repeats, goes on and on: "Why didn't you? Why don't you? Why haven't you? When will you?" This nags up until everyone in the family wishes he'd get lockjaw.

Several months ago I figured a way to escape. I bought a small transistor radio and now when he starts nagging I turn it on and carry it with me. It's a lifesaver. Incidentally, I enjoy your radio program. Best of luck.—Omaha W.H. Reader

Dear Omaha: Thanks for the suggestion and the good wishes. I appreciate both.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to Preston to "take the diamond ring back to the jeweller and get a refund or credit" was terrible. No jeweller of decent reputation would sell used merchandise. Do you know of any jeweller who would accept an item purchased four years ago? A better answer would have been to take the diamond back to the jeweller and have it remounted for himself or his mother. Consider this letter—A Blast From Billings

Dear Blast: Ouch! Here's another one from Omaha:

Dear Ann: So the girl got a rash from the ring and decided she was allergic to Preston? Well, isn't that a shame? I'm sorry about the broken romance, but why did you tell him to return the ring to the jeweller? We are in the retail business (I am merchandise manager for two jewelers. You made it tough on my jewelers. You don't help with the kind of advice I read in the Omaha World Herald.—Ben Gundery

Dear Ben: You win. How about 19 lashes with a double strand of cultured pearls?

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to Preston to "take the diamond ring back to the jeweller and get a refund or credit" was terrible. No jeweller of decent reputation would sell used merchandise. Do you know of any jeweller who would accept an item purchased four years ago? A better answer would have been to take the diamond back to the jeweller and have it remounted for himself or his mother. Consider this letter—A Blast From Billings

Dear Blast: Ouch! Here's another one from Omaha:

Dear Ann: So the girl got a rash from the ring and decided she was allergic to Preston? Well, isn't that a shame? Dear Ben: You win. How about 19 lashes with a double strand of cultured pearls?

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice is fourteen carat — about 18 pounds heavier than it ought to be and it's a battle to stay away from foods I like to eat. I'm beginning to think it's my father's fault. Is this possible? My comments on every forkful that goes into my mouth. If we are in a restaurant he calls my attention to the diet special. Once he slapped my hand (half jokingly) when I reached for a piece of cake. I didn't take it because I was embarrassed, but after dinner I sneaked into the kitchen and ate two huge pieces—to get even.

I realize this is childish and silly of I am only hurting myself, but what can I do about it? Should I tell him?—Big Bertha

Dear Bert: No, I'll tell him. All you need to do is hand him this column.

Dear Ann: In your effort to help your daughter lose weight you are driving her to eat more. I hope you and thousands of other parents who are concerned about overweight children will get it through your heads that nagging never took an ounce off anybody. Policing, warning, scolding, shaming, threatening and ridiculing are totally ineffective. The most helpful thing you can do is keep quiet—except to praise your daughter when signs of weight loss are evident.

RIVER VALLEY WI

Mrs. Jack Donohoe was hostess on thursday for the Christmas meeting of the River Valley WI with 21 members and two visitors in attendance. Christmas decorations and a lighted tree added to the festive atmosphere.

Mrs. George Grills presided and the various reports were given by the secretary and treasurer. Mrs. Percy Maw led the friendship link secretary distributed the individual gifts to the River Valley members from the Abbotts Leigh WI in England.

Mrs. Roy Tucker brought a message from the triennial conference of ACWW in Oslo, Norway. The new president is Mrs. Olive Farquharson and her home is in Essex, England.

Mrs. Ernest Carr gave a synopsis of the last session of the recent Trent Valley convention. A committee was appointed to arrange parcels for the shut-ins of the community.

Mrs. Jack Donohoe and Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh were in charge of the Christmas program. They read articles on that theme and each conducted a quiz with prizes. Several carols were sung.

Mrs. Percy MacIntyre read a poem written in 1933 by the late Helen B. Anderson of Wellington. The members of her citizenship and education group furnished refreshments at the close of the social hour. They were thanked by Mrs. Philip Conley.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOAN CONNELL

Do people who look alike have the same traits?

NO, although it seems that way to the one who notices a strong resemblance in two persons. Then it becomes a plain case of subjective thinking on the part of the observer. If he likes something about one person, he will try to find that same quality in his "twin." Unfortunately, if he resents the original person for some trait or characteristic, he will feel resentment building up against that person's lookalike.

Are artists generally egotists?

Yes, at least not the really great ones. Yet many artists—even those who truly should be labeled artists—act like egotists, mainly to convince themselves that what they have painted, sculptured, written, composed, etc., is worthy of the time and effort devoted to creating it. Then, too, most artists really only pretend to be egotists because they have to wall for posthumous recognition of their contribution to the arts.

Is a 'bad' parent deliberately 'bad'?

NOT VERY OFTEN, even if a parent did deliberately withhold love from a child, "dragging him up" instead of bringing him up. Such a mother or father is obviously in need of some kind of professional help or therapy. Perhaps the parent might have had an emotional or personality problem before the child was born; and now, on the heels of the previous trouble, having to cope with the limitless problems of raising a child may be too much for a parent.

UCW Enjoy Travelogue on Japan

COLLEGE HILL UCW

The highlight of the November meeting of College Hill United Church Women was a most delightful travelogue on Japan, presented by Mrs. Susie Mathews. She and her 11-year-old daughter Teresa had spent several weeks in her homeland this past summer.

Mrs. Mathews was introduced by Mrs. Florence Watson, program convenor. Susie is an active member in the College Hill UCW organization and with her humor and pleasant manner, she took us on an exciting flight with her from Toronto to Vancouver, then on a Japanese plane to Alaska, and on to Tokyo where landing was delayed during a thunderstorm.

With the showing of slides, members viewed Tokyo — its residential area, several schools of present interest to Susie, shrines and temples where there are spacious green areas visible with pines but few flowers. She showed one picture of a rickshaw and noted that they are becoming extinct.

In the countryside there were the rice paddies (and later the paddies damaged by a typhoon); the four changes of a cement plant and a large number of monkeys coming down from the mountains to greet passers-by.

She had taken an interesting picture of a restaurant sign. Samples of the foods available that day are placed on display in a showcase and customers order from sight rather than a menu.

Several slides of Mt. Aso volcano and of hot springs were shown as well as an outdoor pool complete with crocodile.

Many personal pictures of Susie's family and friends were enjoyed as they showed more of the home-life and eating habits. She also showed pictures and explained some of their religious beliefs after death, since she had been bereaved by the passing of her father last April.

Accompanied by her mother, Susie and Teresa made their way home to Belleville via Honolulu and Los Angeles. Many pictures of Waikiki Beach, of old and new craters and of Disneyland were also viewed to conclude a most enjoyable trip. Susie was most grateful to husband, Frank, for making it possible for her and Teresa to spend six weeks away from home. However, in doing so, she has gained a wealth of information on Japan which she is willing to pass on.

On display were several personal articles made by friends and relatives and presented to Susie and Teresa as mementos of their visit. Also there were school books, pictures and many souvenirs of Japan.

President Marilyn McIntosh opened the meeting and conducted a short worship service with her theme being One in body, one in spirit. Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Nina Neal and appropriate hymns sung.

The business meeting followed as a social half-hour with refreshments and viewing the display. The treasurer's report showed the annual tea and bazaar had brought in $400 and catering to two weddings had also been profitable. It was voted to give $400 to the Local Fund of the church. Members and all church women may leave an unwrapped gift for Mental Health Association in the church basement by Dec. 11. It was noted that the Canadian Red Cross approves any used cotton or cotton flannelette sheets.

The slate of officers for 1972 was read by Mrs. Vivian Leeson.

The December meeting will be a potluck supper on Dec. 15 to which all women of the church are invited. This will be a time of fellowship for the Christmas season.

Tourist Village in Himalayas

ATKANDU (AP) — In a valley of the snow-capped Himalaya Mountains, the Royal Women's Organization is building a tourist village designed to capture the dollars of jet-set travellers.

The first section of the village, named Tara Gaon after a Nepalese princess, is due to open this winter. The project will not be completed for four or five years.

The Nepal Women's Organization has been in the business of making money for eight years. It is a kind of women's liberation in this kingdom of 11 million.

Mrs. Angur Baba Joshi, chairman of the organization's Katmandu district committee, says all money raised is used to finance social service programs.

Last year the organization raised enough to make 1,300 women literate and to send 500 poor boys and girls and 100 poor deserted wives and young widows to school.

In addition the organization runs three health centres, operates five stores and has introduced the country's first subsidized health-insurance scheme. It costs about 25 cents a year for each person.

Mrs. Joshi, educated in India and Britain, is principal of Padma Kanya College in Katmandu. The week does so far, she said, is only a dent in the country's need for education, health and economic help.

"So we said, 'What is the best thing that we can do in order to expand these social service activities?' Finally, we got the idea of locally based industry, and the tourist industry is one of the most potential industries in our country."

Now, with an initial contribution of 130,000 rupees, about $13,000, from Princess Tara Rajya Laxmi Raza, the Women's Organization had its foot in the tourist business.

By the time the project is finished, it will cost as much as 6.5 million rupees, about $930,000.

The village is being built in the suburbs of Katmandu.

The section scheduled to open this winter consists of 15 separate bungalows, each with a bed-sitting room, modern kitchenette and bathroom, a larger bungalow with a fireplace, dining room, big living room, kitchen and sun roof, and a small shop.

When the project is finished, Mrs. Joshi said, it will include at least 50 bungalows, a shopping arcade with demonstrations of native crafts, a large auditorium and restaurant, swimming pool, tennis courts and miniature golf layout.

Tax Changes Aid Co-ops, Credit Unions

OTTAWA (CP) — A high-pressure lobby conducted by co-operatives and credit unions paid off Monday when the government announced last-minute concessions to those institutions' tax-free tax law bill.

Spokesmen for credit unions and co-ops have succeeded in recent months in gaining heavy Commons support for their claims that the bill would cause them undue hardship.

Twice during October the government brought in amendments designed to appease them. But members from all parties—including Liberal back-benchers—continued to apply pressure.

Finally on Monday, two days before the House slays considering the bill at committee stage because of a government deadline limiting debate put through last Thursday, the government came through with what the co-ops and credit unions were seeking.

As a result, the co-ops—which originally were going to feel a bigger tax bite under this bill—will not have to pay income tax at all on transactions involving their members.

As groupings of individuals seeking to help each other, co-ops seldom wind up a year with income or profits in the normal sense. If there is anything extra left over, after meeting expenses, it can be paid out to the co-op members as a dividend.

Present tax law uses a standard based on the capital a co-op employs in its operations for the year. At least three per cent of the capital generated in a year is subject to tax now and the original proposal in the new bill was to boost this to five per cent.

The co-op would be forbidden to reduce this minimum amount of taxable income, no matter how much it paid out to members in dividends.

The latest government proposal is to ditch this capital-employed yardstick. Instead, co-ops will be required to withhold 15 per cent of the money they pay out in dividends to a person if this is over $100 in any tax year.

In the hands of the recipient, the dividend could be treated in two ways.

If the dividend related to the recipient's business, it would be counted in his income for tax purposes. If not, it would be tax-free. Anyone not liable to tax on the dividend would be able to get a later refund for the portion withheld.

The system is aimed at distinguishing between those investing in co-ops as a business and the average member who holds only a small share in a co-op organized by a group of people seeking to help themselves.

Allan MacEachen, government House leader who introduced the latest amendments, said the withholding step "will permit the government to administer the system efficiently and yet obtain the appropriate result depending on the character of the patronage dividend in the hands of the recipient."

Credit unions, which now do not pay income tax as institutions, would have been required to pay under the bill's original proposals on a similar sort of capital-employed basis. The latest proposed changes scrapped this.

Mr. MacEachen said the amendments, explained only in general and due to be brought forward in detailed form today, would give credit unions more access to steps available to other businesses to achieve a lower rate of tax on income.

Ordinary businesses can trim net income through use of dividend payments, paying eligible for tax at the rate of about 25 per cent rather than the full rate of about 50 per cent.

Credit unions, however, must meet various provincial requirements on money held in reserve, the same as chartered banks must do under federal law, and such reserves may not be distributed to members.

The new amendments would take this into account and give a credit union a better chance of staying in the 25-per-cent bracket.

Motorist Wins Right To Supreme Court Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — A Stayner, Ont., motorist, convicted of refusing to give Toronto police a sample of his breath upon demand, won the right Monday to appeal the conviction to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Clarence Wayne Brownridge was charged under the section of the Criminal Code which makes it an offence to refuse to take a breath test on demand without a reasonable excuse.

At the police station Brownridge refused to take the test until he was allowed to talk to his lawyer.

Police refused his request and charged him.

About two hours later, after talking to his lawyer, Brownridge asked for an opportunity to take the test. His offer was refused.

The most amusing part of the debate Monday was the attendance pattern.

Conservatives, who last week were raging that more time was needed to acquaint MPs with the intricacies of the big bill, rarely had more than five members in the House. The party has its annual convention going on nearby.

Liberals, who usually send in only enough members to make sure they aren't defeated on a crap vote, had more than 80 members in most of the time, including 12 cabinet ministers.

The government lost a quick vote on a procedural matter in committee stage last week. Conservative finance critic Marcel Lambert said it was evident Monday that the lash seems to have been imposed with some effect.

A provision in the bill that drew close attention would allow the government to bring in retroactive regulations.

Conservative speakers agreed this should be allowed.

But they maintained that as written, the bill would let the government take a taxpayer to court for breaching a regulation even if it hadn't been in force when he broke it.

Mr. Lambert proposed an amendment to prevent such legal action and Pat Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, said the government would consider it.

The committee approved a few minor provisions of the bill but will be a long way from completing approval of its 232 clauses when the guillotine rule ends the committee stage Wednesday.

Lawyers Must Pay For Lack Of Action

TORONTO (CP) — An Orillia man, shot through the stomach by a Bracebridge policeman, has been awarded damages of $5,676.89 against William L. Moore and George Clegg, who were Orillia law partners.

Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson found Monday that Gary Ferrier, 24, had instructed the firm to sue John Robert Matin, who shot him in August, 1969, while a member of the Bracebridge police force, but that Mr. Moore and Mr. Clegg did not take appropriate action.

Evidence showed that the policeman was following the car in which Mr. Ferrier and a friend were riding and that the policeman thought it might have some connection with a man for whom he was looking.

"The officer said the plaintiff was behind him and that he had a dirty look on his face," the judge said in his ruling. "He drew the conclusion the plaintiff had some kind of weapon behind his back. He said he discharged his gun, pointing at the ground, and apparently did not realize that he had shot (Ferrier) through the stomach."

"I can come to no other conclusion than that the officer was negligent in assaulting the plaintiff as he did," the judge said.

Bulla Air Sac Outside Lung Seldom Requiring Treatment

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A recent x-ray showed that I have a small bulla in the left lower lobe on the lung.

Just what is this and what can be done to cure it?—R.L.R.

A bulla is a distended sac of air which can form on the outer surface of the lung.

If it ruptures and air escapes into the pleural space outside the lung, the lung collapses, and a situation known as pneumothorax results. It is not, I assure you, as serious as it may sound. The rupture, usually small, ordinarily heals fairly promptly. The air in the pleural space is either absorbed by nature or withdrawn by a hollow needle, and the lung returns to normal. (You may, perhaps, remember that years ago, before we had the treatments that now exist, the lung of a tuberculosis patient often was caused to collapse deliberately, to give it time to rest and heal.)

However, saying that you might have a pneumothorax is not by any means saying that you will. It is entirely unpredictable. In most cases, a bulla causes no discomfort or symptoms of any kind. It requires no treatment if it is small.

If the bulla is large, it can compress a normal lung to some degree, and in that case the bulla is removed surgically, after which the compressed portion of the lung promptly expands to normal.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss "tennis elbow," which I and several friends have developed, actually from playing tennis.

What is it, and does it ever cure itself with rest, or does it continually get worse (when playing is continued) until surgery is necessary?—G.W.F.

It's a form of bursitis, the bursa, or fluid sac, in the joint becoming inflamed from too much strain or pres cure. The twisting of the elbow while swinging the racket seems to be the factor in tennis that causes the trouble.

Bursitis can, of course, occur elsewhere: chauffeurs and truck drivers sometimes get "chauffeur's elbow" from the arm resting in a position that puts pressure in the wrong place; traveling can cause "housemaid's knee"; pressure can cause bunions which are a form of bursitis.

Rest, relief from pressure and strain, is necessary to let the inflammation subside. Don't try to force yourself to keep playing until surgery is necessary, because that means damage has become pretty severe.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My parents won't let me shave my legs. They say shaving is bad for the skin. My father says I am too young, but the hairs are very noticeable. Is shaving bad for the skin? Is almost 13 too young?—J.T.

Millions of women shave their legs without any harm.

Three Churches Are Urged To Accept Intercommunion

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Commissioners from the Anglican, United and Christian (Disciples of Christ) churches Monday unanimously approved a resolution recommending that their churches recognize one another's ministers and authorize intercommunion.

At the same time, the General Commission on Church Union decided to continue working toward organic or formal union of the three churches before winding up their ninth meeting a day early.

Final approval by the membership of the three churches could not be obtained before 1973, a commission spokesman said.

Neither intercommunion nor recognition of ministers had, in the commission's original union convocation, been expected to take place until final organic union.

But the commission decided that The Principles of Union, approved by the Anglicans and United Churches in 1965-66 and unanimously approved in 1968, is "sufficient common statement on matters of Faith and Order" for immediate procedure towards implementation.

A proposal made Friday by Rev. D. R. G. Owen, an Anglican commissioner, that organic union take place before intercommunion, and organizational unless plans be abandoned provided a good part of the impetus behind the drafting of the resolution.

Dr. Owen, who is proctor of Trinity College, Toronto, had suggested recognition of ministries and intercommunion as an alternative to continuing negotiations towards organic union.

The commission decided that the two courses of action could both be followed.

The resolution was first put forward in a suggested "resource paper" by Dr. Owen, prepared for Archdeacon J. G. Marden, principal of Huron College at the University of Western Ontario, London.

The recommendation cannot be made final until 1973 when the General Synod of the Anglican Church next meets.

Most Rev. E. W. Scott, Anglican primate, said that in the meantime the recommendation will be presented to the various Anglican dioceses for their individual approval. The General Synod cannot make a major union decision on its own.

It will first be sent to the Anglican House of Bishops and Medical Executive Council, scheduled to meet in February, as well as to the executive of the General Council of the United Church, meeting the same month.

It must also be received by the All-Canada Committee of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

Neither the United nor Christian churches have opposed recognition of ministers or intercommunion, however.

Judge Decides Where Midgets May Play

TORONTO (CP) — An injunction, issued here Monday by Mr. Justice Patrick Galligan, will allow two 16-year-olds to play for a midget team in Sudbury, at least until Jan. 1.

The injunction, against the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, was an interim order restraining the NOHA from suspending either the players or the team.

The players, Tony Rennett and Mickey Hansen, live in Lively, 15 miles west of Sudbury, and want to play midget hockey in Sudbury for a team sponsored by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

The NOHA had ruled they must play for a midget team in Copper Cliff, the nearest community to their homes with a team in their age group. Copper Cliff is five miles west of Sudbury.

Toronto lawyer Elliott Posen argued the case Monday based on affidavits obtained by Aubrey Golden, another Toronto lawyer.

The two boys played bantam hockey in Sudbury for two years after failing to make the Copper Cliff team. They played midget hockey in Sudbury last year when Copper Cliff did not sponsor a team.

This year, Midget hockey returned to Copper Cliff and that community's athletic association claimed the two players.

The NOHA ruled that Rennett and Hansen would have to play at Copper Cliff unless the athletic association voluntarily gave them their release. The association granted the release last Friday, after the players announced they were seeking the injunction.

"I'm opposed to this charter approach to hockey," said John Heffern of Sudbury, manager of the Mine-Mill team. "The NOHA constitution is 51 years old and it is outdated.

"The rules also state that a boy cannot be transferred from one club to another without his consent; so the rules conflict on that point alone. The NOHA can't make the, boys switch teams."

Despite His 20 Goals Espo Only Shares Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — While centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins has become the first player to score 20 goals in the National Hockey League this season, he isn't having it all his own way in the individual scoring race.

Another centre Jean Ratelle of New York Rangers, after spending most of the last month shuffling between third and fourth place in the points race, made his move last week and pulled into a first-place tie with Esposito with 44 points, including 16 goals.

Esposito's 20 goals mark the eighth season in a row he has scored at least that number.

Ratelle, meanwhile, led all NHL scorers last week as he picked up two goals and seven assists in New York's three games. His nine-point week enabled Ratelle to move past team-mate Vic Hadfield and Bobby Orr of Boston, who share third place with 42 points each.

Orr, the Bruins' all-star defenceman, leads the league in assists with 30.

Ratelle, who has never won the scoring championship, came closest to doing so in 1967-68 when he had 78 points and finished fourth behind Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks, Esposito, and now-retired Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Rod Gilbert, the right winger on the Ratelle-Hadfield line for New York, is in fifth position with 41 points, a comfortable seven points ahead of Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres.

Perreault, last season's rookie-of-the-year, had an 18-game point-scoring streak snapped Sunday when he failed to gain a goal or an assist as the Sabres defeated Minnesota North Stars 3-1 in Buffalo.

Perreault's streak began Oct. 24 and ran until Dec. 4, during which time he collected 19 goals and 21 assists in 18 games.

That tied the longest such streak any player has had in the last 11 seasons.

Howe went 18 straight games and 19 goals and 17 assists in the 1960-61 season, while Orr equalled the feat last year by scoring goals and assisting on 26 others in 18 games.

The record is held by Bronco Horvath, who scored at least one point in 22 consecutive games for Boston during the 1959-60 campaign. The records in this department reach back only to 1946-47 when the league began keeping game-by-game statistics.

Minnesota's goaltending tandem of Lorne Worsley and Cesare Maniago increased its lead slightly over the Chicago pair of Gary Smith and Tony Esposito

Chiefs At Best On Tube

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Len Dawson and Otis Taylor have upstaged the guys in the television booth again on the National Football League's Monday night television series.

The Kansas City Chiefs' passing combination pulled out all the stops in a 26-17 victory over San Francisco 49ers in their latest prime time show.

With a victory over Oakland Raiders next Sunday, coach Hank Stram's Chiefs would clinch a division and an invitation to the playoffs, which they missed last year when they were defending Super Bowl champions.

Nothing seems to sharpen the Chiefs' passing attack like the Monday night time slot.

Dawson completed 16 of 29 passes for 263 yards against the 49ers. One of the passes went to Taylor on the sixth and a touchdown, and the big wide receiver scored another touchdown on a 25-yard run off an end-around play.

Earlier this year, the Chiefs beat Pittsburgh 38-16 on a Monday night as Dawson threw for 280 yards and three touchdowns, including two to Taylor, and last year Dawson fired four scoring passes in a 44-34 Monday night rout of Baltimore.

Some of the fans who came early to Candlestick Park to beat the rush-hour traffic hung out signs greeting the American Broadcasting Company's announcing team:

But Dawson and Taylor stole the show.

Quarterback John Brodie of the 49ers passed for 228 yards and threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Ted Kwalick. But he also threw the only interception of the night, which led to one of Jan Stenerud's four field goals for the Chiefs.

Kansas City, now 8-5-1, moved ahead of Oakland Raiders (7-5-2) in the American Football Conference West. The Chiefs are alone on top now for the first time this year.

The 49ers (7-8), fell behind Los Angeles Rams (7-4-1) with two weeks left in the season.

The San Francisco team will have to beat another NFC West contender, the Atlanta Falcons who stand 6-5-1, and then hope that Washington can upset the Rams in the last Monday night game of the NFL season.

Or the division race could go down to the final weekend, when the 49ers play Detroit, Los Angeles takes on Pittsburgh and Atlanta is at New Orleans.

Dawson racked up 198 yards passing in the first half. The touchdown pass to Taylor, on a first down play, put the Chiefs ahead to stay, 10-3.

The 49ers' secondary ran into more bad luck in the last period, on a 30-yard pass play that set up Stenerud's final field goal after a Vic Washington touchdown run for the 49ers made the score 23-17.

Hockey Briefs

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins have sent forward Don Marcotte to Boston Braves of the American Hockey League to play himself into shape after back surgery. Marcotte, 21, had been sidelined since the opening game of the season. He was given permission last Tuesday to begin scrimmaging. As a protected player, Marcotte had to consent to being sent down to the Braves. Under AHL rules, however, he must remain with the team at least 14 days.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers announced Monday acquisition of left winger Mike Partizeau from St. Louis Blues. The National Hockey League club said Parizeau, 23, will be in the lineup Thursday when the Flyers play host to New York Rangers. In 23 games with the Blues, Parizeau had one goal and two assists.

Senior Hockey Has Two Sides

by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

Kids say the darndest things all right, but they've got nothing on adults most of the time.

Take the city's senior hockey situation, for example, which I find upon returning from holidays is only slightly better preserved than some Ronsan ruins I saw.

Ever since I've been a resident of this fair city I've heard people give forth with a line that goes: "This is a great sports town — the people will support any team that is at least trying out there."

I suppose that explains why only 704 persons paid to watch the new Co-ops play Kingston in the Memorial Arena Saturday night. Only 24 hours before, the Belleville seniors had won 6-3 on Oakville ice despite the pressures of having their sponsorship pulled out right out from under them earlier in the week.

One would be foolish to imply that the outcome of, Saturday night's 3-3 tuss to Kingston would have been altered if more than 704 seats were sold.

But anyone who doesn't think hometown support is a factor in win-loss columns just doesn't know anything about sport.

If you really don't want senior hockey in Belleville, do the players a favor; take five minutes of your valuable time and write them a letter or make a phone call informing them so.

Don't lay back in the lounges hoping to hear a ten-game winning streak materialize on the radio or in the sport pages of this newspaper.

Those who want to keep senior hockey alive have just as great an obligation to attend the games as do the players. It's a two-way street.

In the six seasons that senior hockey has been revived in Belleville, I've heard every excuse in the book for poor attendance at Memorial Arena games. First it was the dirty old benches and the cold, then it was the cramped new seats and the heat.

Yet somehow all these obstacles were braved whenever the team had put a couple of wins together.

Nobody likes a loser, but Woodstock Royals have proven to their fans' satisfaction that being is largely a state of mind. Remember Woodstock? They went from an Allan Cup in the early Sixties to a four-win season last winter, playing one game before a disgraceful gathering of 50 persons, presumably paid customers.

There are a lot of unknown quantities in the existing senior hockey picture in Belleville, but one thing is certain. If the team is allowed to fail — as it will unless more arena seats are filled than have been — it will be a long time before senior hockey is seen again in this city.

Wouldn't it be sad to hear all those boos turn to boohoos?

Atom Explodes Upwards

COLDWATER, Ont. (CP) — At the age of eight, Chris Kontos has played his last game of minor hockey in the Coldwater and District Community Centre.

As a third-year player in the atom division, ages 4 to 8, Chris was the scoring leader last summer. But he returned for one more year.

In a weekend game he finally got the message across. The Flyers defeated the Sabres 16-1 with Chris doing all the scoring for the winners.

As of now, Chris moves up to the Squirts, aged 8 to 12.

Trevino Loses Title

"He deserves to win it," Trevino said Monday after Nicklaus had moved past him with a $38,000 victory in the Walt Disney World Open, final event of 1971 for both players.

"He's a better player. Just look at the record. He hasn't played in half as many tournaments as I have. Winning that kind of money in what, 18 or 19 tournaments? That's strong, meh, strong."

Nicklaus, in front all the way, shot a final round four-under-par 68 for a 273 total and a three-stroke victory over Deane Beman in the rain-delayed tournament.

Trevino, who established himself as the game's new folk hero with his lightning sweep of the American, British and Canadian Opens this summer, held a lead of some $15,000 going into the tournament.

He complained of being "punchy, mentally tired, just beat" and could finish no better than tied for 21st. He won $1,425 for a $231,201.97 total, still far better than Nicklaus's 1967 record of $211,566.66.

George Knudson was the lone Canadian in the championship round. The touring Toronto pro, who soared to a 74 Sunday, recovered with a 71 and finished at 284, worth $1,944.

Arnold Palmer, who had his best money year ever at the age of 42, had a tie for third in the Disney event, a portion of money total of $209,653.77—more than Ben Hogan won in a career but third on the list this season.

"Not a bad year's work," said the 31-year-old Nicklaus, grinning after pushing his earnings for the season to almost one-quarter of a million dollars.

Beman had a final 69 for 278. Palmer and rookie Lanny Watkins were next at 278. Palmer with a closing 70 and Watkins with a 71.

Distinguished Service

You might say Corporal Al Greter of Regina is accepting a distinguished service award here as skip of the winning rink in November's Johnnie Walker German International Gold Plate at Oberstdorf, West Germany.

Curlers serving in West Germany with Canada's NATO forces are compiling an enviable record, with three major European titles to their credit with the season barely underway.

Forces' Curlers Good PR Men

By MAURICE SWITZER

Sports Editor

Publicity liason officers for Canada's NATO forces in West Germany are getting plenty of help from a non-military source — curling bonspiels.

Scant weeks after they had begun the 1971-72 season, Canadian Forces curlers had grabbed three major European titles, leaving a wake of respect and goodwill behind them.

A rink skipped by Corporal Russ Ward of Lower Sackville, N.S. beat most-reigning European champion foursomes as well as Danny Fisk's world-rated Canadians in the World Tournament of Champions in Basel, Switzerland in October.

Then Sergeant Bill Barter of Winnipeg skipped a Canadian Forces foursome to the Zahringen Trophy in Berne, and Regina skip Al Greter won the Johnnie Walker German International Gold Plate at Oberstdorf.

The three new trophies join an impressive collection of international silverware won last season by Canadian Forces curlers in tournaments from Scotland to Paris.

"In a way, some of our curlers are winning bonspiels tougher than the Silver Broom," points out Major Bill Rae, stationed at Lahr, West Germany with the Canadian Forces Europe information services.

"In the World Championships, a Canadian rink only plays one top team from each of the countries represented," Major Rae explained. "But some of our curlers are beating all the top European rinks to win these trophies," he added, his arm indicating a glass-enclosed case in the foyer of the Rhine Valley Curling Club in Lahr.

Major Rae estimates the Lahr base club and the Schwarzwald Canadian Forces ice lines at nearby Baden - Soellingen will be host to more than 200 international curling teams before the current season ends.

The German national championships were held at the Lahr club this month, and in March the Rhine Valley curlers will entertain a 96-rink Men's international 'spiel, an event considered Europe's top curling attraction of the season next to the World Championships being held at Garmisch, West Germany.

In addition to being sites of international - calibre competitions and almost weekly bonspiels, the Lahr and Baden clubs are booked solid to accommodate some 250 league teams and the Canadian Forces schools system, which incorporates curling into its recreation program.

Samli wonder that the area's populace bears more roaring from curling rocks these days than from the Baden-based CF-104 Starfighters.

Wilson's Old Hat Fits Just Fine

Ties are getting to be old hat for the Gas House Hockey League's Wilson Concrete entry.

Monday, Wilson's played their third draw in six league outings, a 1-1 stalemate with the Hospital, but the lone point was enough to boost the Concreters into a first - place tie with idle Jim's Pizzeria.

Dirk Komiak scored the Wilson's goal while Mathieson accounted for the lone Hospital score.

In another league game, Wannemaker's Esso and Rollins' Lumber played to a 2-2 save-off.

Kitchener's Old Farmers' Market Voted Out of Existence

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener's colorful old farmers' market, where odd-customed Mennonite farmers descended from their ancient buggies and horse-drawn wagons to rub elbows with vendors and customers, was voted out Monday. It will reappear in a modern setting.

Opposition to the razing of the old market in a $15,000,000 downtown facelift had been heavy. The market was its old world Mennonite and German atmosphere was a major tourist attraction.

The urban renewal plan, which would also wipe out city hall, erect a department store and a shopping mall, was approved in a plebiscite at the city elections 15,079 in favor to 11,225 against.

However, the final ruling will be made Thursday when J. A. Kennedy, chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board, comes here. He had ordered the plebiscite after an earlier hearing.

Incumbent mayor Sidney McLennan and eight of his 10 aldermen who had supported the project were re-elected Monday. One supporter, Mrs. Grace Storer, lost out.

Another alderman re-elected was the lone opponent, Morley Rosenberg, a 36-year-old fire brand politician who lists attacked council for not involving citizens in the decisions.

The mayor won a landslide victory with 30,817 votes compared with 5,864 for rival John Ranisav.

"The voice of the people has confirmed what council has done," said Mayor McLennan. "The OMB should not stand in the way of council."

However, Ald. Rosenberg said the vote was taken too late and the OMB should not approve the project as the result showed that more than 42 per cent of the public were opposed.

"I am going to ask the municipal board on Thursday to turn down the proposal and ask the council to come up with a new one."

The redevelopment was supported by all municipal officials, the Chamber of Commerce and the district labor council. They said the market would not disappear and pointed to plans for a new permanent home under a six-level garage to be built near the present market.

The idea of relocating the market, staged partly in the open air and partly indoors, was so new that supporters had waged an intensive campaign to persuade people to vote for it in the referendum, which was ordered in October.

Mr. Kennedy, after a public hearing of only a few hours, had rejected council's argument that the scheme was really decided by last summer's almost unanimous vote by council.

Council earlier had been briefed on a year of secret negotiations with the developers, Oxley Investments Ltd. of Edmonton. Members considered the scheme a major step in reversing downtown deterioration.

Most area merchants supported it as a defence against suburban shopping centres.

City property to be conveyed by the development would be sold to Oxley for $1 million. In addition, Oxley would build and finance the garage and market building at cost plus 1.5 per cent profit normally for 30 years.

The city also agreed to a 15-year office lease costing $300,000 a year. But planners said that with extra tax assessment, parking fees and market fees, the city would benefit by $200,000 annually.

Supporters of the old market circulated a petition which collected 6,000 signatures, including 2,700 from Kitchener wo-

Britain Took Over Nazi Spy Network

NEW YORK (Reuter) — British intelligence penetrated and took over the German spy network in Britain during the Second World War and for four years used it against the Germans by feeding them a steady stream of false information, says a book to be published early in 1972.

The crowning achievement of this intelligence coup was to make the Germans believe the Allied invasion of Europe in June, 1944 would take place in the Calais area of northern France instead of in Normandy, where it actually occurred.

Also as a result of this system of double agents, Britain and the United States in August, 1941 received a clear indication that Pearl Harbor would be the first target attacked in the event of American involvement in the war. The significance of the information was not grasped, however and the U.S. was unprepared when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor less than four months later.

The story of these and other exploits is described in The Double-Cross System in the War of 1939 to 1945, by Sir John Curtard, who played a major role in running the double-agent network.

The book was written in 1945, in the form of a top-secret report by Sir John, now 80 years old, on completion of his wartime intelligence work.

Only last month the British government gave permission to Yale University Press to publish the 198-page account. It is scheduled to appear simultaneously in the U.S. and Britain Feb. 16, 1972.

Sir John wrote in an introductory chapter: "By virtue of this system, for the greater part of the war we did much more than practise a large-scale deception through double agents; by means of the double-agent system we actively ran and controlled the German espionage system in this country.

"This is at first blush a staggering claim and one which in the nature of things could not be advanced until late in the history of the war . . . nevertheless it is true, and was true for the greater part of the war."

Stanfield Promises He'll Create New Climate of Confidence

OTTAWA (CP) — Before voting on such touchy topics as the right of self-determination for Quebec and the legalization of marijuana, Conservative delegates received a call to arms Monday from Party Leader Robert Stanfield, who pledged to create a new climate of confidence in Canada.

"That" he told 1,000 cheering supporters, "will be the issue in the coming campaign."

The delegates, who spent the day plodding through resolutions in various workshops, gathered in the ballroom of a downtown hotel during the evening to give Mr. Stanfield a ripsnorting welcome as he began laying foundations for the next election, expected next year.

On 28 occasions the delegates interrupted Mr. Stanfield with bursts of applause—two of them standing ovations—and when he said that, if everyone works, he will be the first prime minister in Canada, the roar was deafening.

With pledges of support from provincial party leaders, who shared his platform, it was Mr. Stanfield's night. There wasn't a dissenting voice in the ballroom.

But there were many dissenting delegate voices during the day as, in the various work shops, they whittled down the resolutions to face the convention today. There was a bitter workshop debate over the question of legalizing marijuana, as young Tories obviously packed the room for the quickly-sprung discussion.

The resolution was given the necessary approval for a full-convention vote today.

There were also strong arguments over the issue of foreign investment and what should be done about it. And, in the middle of many, another workshop agreed to have a convention vote on whether Quebec, or any province, should have the right to self-determination.

This resolution, pushed forward by Martial Asselin, MP for Charlevoix, says that if a provincial population decides democratically to alter its political orientation, the federal government will not use force to fight the decision.

But generally, the workshops were low-key and often poorly attended as the delegates processed the resolutions which would have any immediate effect on party policy.

The results won't be known for some time, and although they are meant to guide the parliamentary caucus, Mr. Stanfield will not be forced to accept the results.

It was the party leader's speech that snapped the convention to life Monday, and the delegates appeared ready to unleash their enthusiasm even before he entered the ballroom.

Some of the audience had waited for 30 minutes because not everyone was informed that former party leader John Diefenbaker had declined an invitation to be the lead-off speaker.

Mr. Stanfield had not completed his first sentence—in which he said the Trudeau government had little worthwhile to offer Canadians—when the first burst of applause broke out. And it came in waves s'ter that, tapering off slightly when the speaker said that continued applause would result in everyone being late for the post-speech party.

Mr. Stanfield tore into the Liberal government with delight, concentrating on economic policies and referring to the tax legislation as a switch's brew. Finance Minister E. J. Benson was the man riding the broomstick.

The government was guilty of confusion, complacency and incompetence.

What Canada needed was a new climate of confidence. There must be a new co-operation, not confrontation, with the provinces. There must be freedom for individuals to make their own decisions. There must be compassion for those unable to share in the economy.

The delegates applauded when Mr. Stanfield said that welfare, if not abused, is not a dirty word. They roared their approval when he said that, on the same terms, profit is not a dirty word either.

It has become increasingly clear that the convention, while officially dedicated to matters of policy, is looking more and more to the forthcoming election campaign.

Delegates talk about the encouraging public opinion polls, there are rumors of bigger donations to party coffers, and the support being pledged by provincial leaders is being tailed about in all hospitality suites.

In the meantime, a smaller drama is in progress as five candidates seek the party presidency.

There are persistent reports that some party members, not known as enthusiastic supporters of Mr. Stanfield, are throwing their support behind John Pallett, a former MP for Peel who was party whip in Mr. Diefenbaker's regime. Sources say this group is hoping to elect a complete slate of national officers under Mr. Pallett.

But there is no indication of the strength of the forces involved. No one admits to being part of any organized bloc.

Candidate Royal Depell, now party treasurer, is said to have the support of most present executive members.

Other candidates are James Rankin, former MP for Renfrew South, businessman Don Matthews of London, Ont., and Dr. S. F. Moonstime, mayor of Matawa, Ont.

With none of the candidates indulging in opinion polls, and with most delegates working every candidate bottom they can collect, there is no way of picking the eventual winner

PCs Reject Move to Place Cable TV Under Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative policy committee rejected Monday a proposal to let delegates at the party's convention vote to give the provinces regulatory power over cable television.

Terry Giles of Manicouagan, Que., asked the committee on Canadian identity to add such a resolution to the several hundred the policy convention will vote on today.

The committee did not give the necessary one-third approval.

Jurisdiction over expanding cable systems has become an issue of hot dispute between the provinces—especially Quebec—and Ottawa. Eddie Goodman of Toronto, lawyer and Conservative organizer, opposed acceptance of the resolution, saying the convention was not the place to decide such legal problems.

He also opposed the resolution itself.

With broadcasting under federal jurisdiction, putting cable under provincial control would ultimately destroy the whole Canadian broadcasting system, he said.

The committee on identity-studying a sheaf of resolutions written by party headquarters dealing with broadcasting, education and economic independence—was one of three committees screening resolutions that will come to a vote today.

Support for Guaranteed Income Evident

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs battled among themselves for nearly two hours Monday about whether a heavily-veiled guaranteed annual income scheme should become a party commitment.

A shift to acceptance of the idea, which was soundly rejected at a 1969 policy convention in Niagara Falls, was noticeable although a solid group opposed it.

The plan was presented in 1969 as a guaranteed minimum income plan and denounced then as a guaranteed annual income plan that would snuff out the national desire to work.

This time the plan, which will come before the general assembly today, is called an income development program, but a national income floor—which is unspecified—is still the dominant feature.

Jack Horner, MP for Crowfoot, led the attack in 1969 but interjected Monday only to say that the party was "moving in the wrong direction in the mood of the country."

The "national mood" argument also came from Reg Stackhouse, PC candidate for the next federal election in Toronto Scarborough East.

"Somebody has to pay for it and they're tired of paying," he said, adding that taxes had been a main issue in the Ontario general election.

A younger delegate replied that PCs were elected in Ontario because of their concern for social welfare.

"They are poor because they have no incentive, no ability" said Toronto insurance agent Ilmars Andrejsons of those who would benefit from an income floor. "If we support them, they will only multiply."

When chairman Paul Yewchuk, MP for Athabasca, tried to put a reference to the plan as guaranteed annual income, a delegate snorted: "Don't hand us that stuff."

Davis Repeats Pledge To Assist Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Conservatives cheered Monday night as 3½ provincial premiers pledged to support Robert Stanfield in the next general election.

On stage with Mr. Stanfield and a swinging band were William Davis of Ontario, Peter Lougheed of Alberta, Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick and Frank Moores of Newfoundland.

CHARACTER WITNESS

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — When a Durango man was charged with killing a bear, two witnesses appeared to testify as to the bear's "good character." The judge, however, dismissed the charge.

Mr. Davis for the second time since a policy convention began here publicly pledged his "full co-operation and support" to Mr. Stanfield in the next federal election.

Flames Damage Winnipeg Hotel

WINNIPEG (CP) — A two-alarm fire damaged the 218-room Fort Garry Hotel of Canadian National Railways early today, sending one man to hospital and trapping three persons on the upper floors for an hour.

More than 50 guests, including federal Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, were evacuated from the 58-year-old building and taken to other hotels.

The name of the elderly man treated after inhaling smoke was not immediately available.

One of those trapped was a Toronto businessman who climbed out on his eight-floor window ledge in zero weather and shut the window behind him to escape the smoke.

The fire broke out about 1:30 a.m. on the seventh-floor mezzanine which houses dining and convention facilities. It was controlled 90 minutes later by about 50 firemen with 15 units of equipment. Smoke seeped through the hotel and water ran down to the lobby.

Mr. Olson's room was on the third floor.

Labor Heads Applaud Two Proposed Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — General amity prevailed as 27 Canadian labor chieftains met with the cabinet Monday and gave at least two rousing cheers in support of proposed legislation now under attack from business.

The labor leaders emerged from the two-hour meeting expressing various degrees of confidence that the government will stick with the legislation despite criticism.

"I'm satsfied they're not going to back away from the principles embodied in either the consumer protection bill or from the technological change provisions in the labor bill," said Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, meanwhile, described the closed session as "one of the best we've ever had with labor.

Mr. Mackasey said the two sides discussed the proposed government legislation, economic problems and issues raised by United States economic policy, particularly the future of the U.S.-Canada auto pact.

Turn Arrow Not Enough

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — County Judge T. J. Jacob ruled Monday that a sign showing only an arrow is not sufficient indication a traffic lane is to be used exclusively by vehicles making turns.

Judge Jacob overturned the provincial-court conviction of Cam Dani of London, fined $5 for failing to obey an arrow sign in a left-turn-only lane of traffic in London.

Judge Jacob said the signs should have words, such as "left turn only" or "only," in addition to the arrow indication.

Several Mayors Defeated

By JOHN McHUGH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A number of incumbent mayors were defeated Monday as many Ontario towns and cities voted in the "on-year" civic elections.

Among the losers were Herb McClure, mayor of London for 1½ terms; Merle Dickerson, the colorful mayor of North Bay, who was seeking his third consecutive term, and Nick Kaneb, the veteran mayor of Cornwall. Also defeated were Almo Marshall, two-term mayor of Fort Frances, and Ernie Carter, mayor of Kenora since 1967.

Mr. Dickerson, 58, has been mayor of North Bay on and off for 14 years. He was unsuccessful as a Conservative candidate in the Oct. 21 provincial election in Nipissing riding.

Slightly more than 50 per cent of the city's eligible voters went to the polls in bad weather to vote for the mayoralty and a record slate of 33 aldermanic candidates.

Opening lead—ten of hearts.

Even in the best of circles, there is nothing extraordinary about landing in a contract where — after dummy appears — the chances of making it appear very slim.

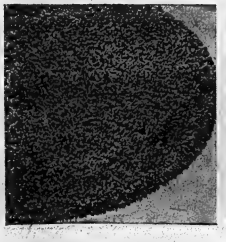
But many such contracts come home safe and sound if you keep your cool and give them the old college try. Sometimes you make these hands because of a lucky lie of the cards, and sometimes you make them by considering the proper amount of luck with the proper amount of skill.

Here is a case in point. Let's assume East cashes the A-K of hearts and shifts to a club, which you win with the queen. It looks as though you will lose a spade and a diamond to go down one. In fact, after you cash the A-K of trumps, this outcome seems certain.

But when you give the matter additional thought — because you're conditionally opposed to ever losing a contract it's possible to make — you come to the conclusion that the situation may not be as desperate as it seems. All you need is a moderate amount of luck to make the hand.

Accordingly, you proceed to cash the queen of hearts, the A-K of clubs and the A-K of diamonds. Then comes trouble, a silent prayer and lead a trump.

As it happens, West is the player who wins with the queen. Obviously this is his unlucky day, because he finds himself on lead with a heart and a club left in his hand — and nary a diamond.



When he returns one of them, you ruff in one hand and discard from the other, thus making the contract and at the same time proving that battles can sometimes be won by simply fighting on.

Tomorrow: Opening shot.

20 Indian Columns Racing for Dacca

Truce Plea Made By UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The General Assembly called for an immediate ceasefire and troop withdrawal on the Indian subcontinent Tuesday night and asked the Security Council to make a new attempt to find peace in the area.

The assembly gave an overwhelming 104-to-10 vote to a multi-country resolution calling for the ceasefire and withdrawal of Indian and Pakistani troops to their own borders.

The Soviet bloc and India opposed the resolution, which India is expected to ignore, at least for the time being. Resolutions of the assembly are not binding.

The assembly acted after a 12-hour debate. The matter had been referred to it by the 15-country Security Council which had been paralyzed by Soviet vetoes during three nights of debate starting Saturday night.

China, the United States and Canada were among those supporting the resolution calling for withdrawal.

The Soviet bloc, with the exception of Rumania which supported the resolution, Cuba and tiny Bhutan—a country on the

Indian Troops Near East Pakistan City

From REUTER-AP

Indian troops thrust to within 22 miles of Dacca today, an official spokesman reported in New Delhi, as 20 invading columns fought their way across river obstacles in the heart of East Pakistan.

Judging by official Indian reports, the race to get first to Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, is going to the troops driving west from Assam, which have reached the river towns of Daudkandi, Chagpur and Brahmanbaria.

The first is 22 miles from Dacca, the two others each 40 miles from the provincial capital. India also reported capturing the airport at Comilla, 30 miles southeast of Dacca.

The loss of the important military bases of Jessore and Sylhet as well as of Brahmanbaria now is admitted in Dacca, but on the western front the Pakistanis are still deeply entrenched in the Chhamb sector of southern Kashmir, captured from India in a fierce tank battle.

More than 1,000 miles separates East and West Pakistan. India-held Kashmir borders West Pakistan in the west.

An air force spokesman in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, reporting that more than 250 Pakistani civilians had died under Indian air attack, said if the raids continue the Indians will be given "a bit of their own medicine."

The Pakistan spokesman also accused the Indians of dropping napalm on Dacca Tuesday.

An army spokesman declared that the conflict with India was now a Moslem holy war and said "any Pakistani who lays down his life in the conflict lives for ever in glory."

Only a few hours after the "cabinet" of the self-proclaimed government of Bangla Desh (Bengal nation) held a meeting Tuesday on East Pakistani territory captured by Indian troops, President Yahya Khan announced the formation of Pakistan's first civilian government since 1958.

It will be headed by an East Pakistani, 78-year-old Nurul Amin, a veteran politician who will have as his deputy premier and foreign minister the ambitious Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, leader of the People's party and most powerful political figure in West Pakistan.

Bhutto, a former foreign minister who recently led a mission to Peking to seek Chinese support for Pakistan, is reported to have agreed to serve under an East Pakistani in order to give the outside world an image of a united country.

Bhutto left Rawalpindi for New York today where he will represent Pakistan in the UN General Assembly debate on the Indo-Pakistan war.

News of fighting on the Western front is scantier than the battle reports from East Pakistan. But India claimed eight more Pakistani tanks destroyed, bringing Pakistani losses in six days of fighting to 146.

Three Pakistani aircraft shot down during the night brought that total losses to 69 against 25

Indian losses, a spokesman in New Delhi said.

Authoritative sources in Rawalpindi claimed today that Soviet personnel were flying Indian aircraft inside Indian territory and manning Indian missile sites and patrol boats.

Troops Hunting Bedroom Killer

BELFAST (CP) — British troops, supported by police and militia, fanned out along the Northern Ireland border with the Irish Republic today hunting the killers of an Ulster militiaman who was gunned down in his bedroom.

Police and troops in the Irish Republic also were searching for 10 masked men who raided a military drill hall, held up 20 part-time soldiers and stole their weapons.

The Northern Ireland militiaman, 31-year-old bachelor Dennis Wilson, was in bed in his farmhouse at Caledon near the frontier late Tuesday night when three men burst in, police said.

"They ran into the bedroom," said a spokesman. "We don't know if Pte. Wilson had time to get up before he was cold-bloodedly murdered."

The men who shot him — presumed to be Irish Republican Army agents — escaped in a car.

Trenton Plane Off To Tehran

By KEN SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A Canadian Forces Boeing 707 left CFB Trenton last night for Tehran, Iran, where it will wait for approximately 24 hours for evacuation of 270 Canadians, from West Pakistan.

The aircraft carried three pilots, Capt. A. J. Anderson of Trenton, Capt. R. B. Clarke of Carrying Place and Capt. R. A. Last of Belleville.

Another CFB Trenton, a Hercules, is commanded by Major Ed Sisse of Trenton, is still on the ground at Bangkok, Thailand, awaiting a new ceasefire in Dacca, East Pakistan. Two earlier attempts to land there to pick up Canadian and British nationals failed when ceasefires were broken. The Canadian Government has stipulated any new ceasefire must be between dawn and dusk, in part, because the Dacca runway is poorly illuminated.

The Tehran-bound 707 had been scheduled for a flight to Cyprus but at the last moment its destination was changed and Cyprus-bound passengers were disembarked.

CORNWALL (CP) — A 60 year-old Cornwall man, who won $100,000 in a Kinsmen Club draw last Oct. 16, died here today.

A maintenance worker in a local hotel, Mr. Morin couldn't believe his good fortune in winning the lottery.

"I've worked hard all my life and I've never had this much money," he said at that time.

Both he and his wife, a matron at the police station, quit their jobs after winning the money.

Fog and Stuck Bridge Tangle Rush in Seaway

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — The frantic push of ocean-going ships to clear the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence seaway before the close of navigation on Dec. 12 was delayed for many of 43 ships Tuesday night, first by fog and then by a stuck railway bridge.

Traffic in the canal was stalled for about 3½ hours, as well as road traffic across one of the three bridges serving the city when a railway swing bridge across the canal suddenly refused to turn about 8:30 p.m.

The downward-bound Norwegian freighter Thorsun, 538 feet long, had to drop its anchor to keep from hitting the swing bridge. And when it came to a halt it was halfway under the raised road bridge which had to stay in a raised position.

To complicate matters, the anchor snagged a submarine telephone cable carrying many circuits. When the ship lost way it was pushed by the wind against the west bank of the canal. Wood pilings kept the side of the ship from damaging the bridge abutments.

A line was run to the opposite side of the canal but it proved impossible to pull the ship sideways until the canal level was raised a few inches by closing weirs at Thorold, about 16 miles down the canal.

It took several attempts to free the anchor from the telephone cable and the Thorsun was finally on its way by midnight on the eight-hour run through the eight locks of the 25-mile canal.

Ironically, the railway bridge turned within a few minutes after the ship came to a stop. Damage to the telephone cable is still being assessed.

U.S. Declares Pakistan Considered Autonomy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The White House, stung by allegations that President Nixon is anti-India, has revealed diplomatic contacts with Pakistan that gave the impression India turned its back on a peaceful solution for the Bangla Desh crisis.

White House officials said the secret diplomatic contacts encouraged them to believe that virtual autonomy for the Bengali separatists had been in sight before Indian forces attacked across the East Pakistan border Nov. 22.

The officials called an extraordinary briefing for reporters Tuesday night shortly after congressional critics of the administration denounced the president for what they called his unwarranted bias in favor of Pakistan.

The charges from Democratic Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine, among others, echoed allegations levelled against the president by the Indian press and officials and a number of newspapers in the United States.

In New Delhi, Indian officials accused the United States today of a breach of diplomacy in making a record of mouth charges that Indian use of military force had destroyed chances for a peaceful settlement.

The officials rejected as "baseless" allegations by high-level U.S. spokesmen Tuesday that India sent its army into action against Pakistan without any and before U.S.-backed peace initiatives were exhausted.

Talking to reporters on condition that he not be identified, an official said India was angry that U.S. spokesmen made allegations about Indian conduct in pre-war peace discussions to reporters in Washington and not in a direct communication with the Indian government.

The White House officials denied charges that Nixon was anti-India, had accepted the use of force by Pakistan President Yahya Khan against the separatists, and had done nothing to move him towards a peaceful settlement of the Bengali rebellion.

Court Considers Newfoundland Vote

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland Supreme Court will hear an application today from the Progressive Conservative party and virtually any decision could further complicate the province's political situation.

The Conservatives have asked that Ed Maynard, who won St. Barbe South in the Oct. 28 provincial election, be confirmed as the victor pending the outcome of a Liberal petition asking that the seat be declared vacant.

The Liberals under Premier Joseph Smallwood won 20 of the 42 seats in the election but disputed the Conservative win in St. Barbe South on the grounds that a recount could not be completed because 185 ballots were missing.

Conservative Leader Frank Moores said earlier his party should form the government on the basis of its 20 confirmed seats and the support of Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader returned in Labrador West.

If the court approves the Conservative application the party will have a majority, but Mr. Smallwood is not expected to resign until the Liberal petition is dealt with.

If the court upholds the Liberal petition a byelection will be held in the district as soon as possible.

But if the Liberal move is turned down Conservatives will emerge with a confirmed majority.

Legal processes in connection with the Liberal petition may not be completed until after Christmas.

Tenders to Be Called for Post Office Razing

TRENTON (Staff) — Tenders will be called this week for demolition of the town's old post office while the fate of Trenton consulting engineers, Lansing Associates, appears design and cost estimates for a parking garage and new municipal offices to replace the old post office.

Councillors have talked about the possibility of using the controversial m-l-f - town property for a two - tier parking garage during the last few months but are now committed not only to build this but will incorporate a floor of municipal offices as a third level, replacing the old municipal board approved and perhaps another plebiscite among the Trenton electorate.

An administrative board cost estimate for the garage-town hall proposal recently totalled $372,000, or about $22 a square foot, for the entire complex including some circles here now is that the project may be achieved more cheaply.

The new building will provide 8,400 square feet of offices for the town and it is expected council will get the cut stone of which it is made, and supervision of the construction itself.

Tentative target date for completion of the project has been set for August, 1972. No decision has been made on sale of the old east side town offices, but the property has grown considerably in value from the recent announcement of Canadian Tire that it will build a $400,000 two - storey store across Ontario St. from the old municipal office block.

No date has been set for a construction start on this 17,000 square-foot commercial structure.

Canadian Tire established itself this week as a benevolent corporate citizen by, granting a 10 - year lease at $1 per year, a lowance that will permit the opening up of Ontario St. from Dundas East into Centennial Park and the Community Garden — a route deemed advisable by the civic administration but one until now impeded by a CNR siding.

Meanwhile, on the other side of the river, Wastecycle mammoth department store expansion that will double the size of the present Dundas West store got under way as scores of workmen moved in to site for Simpsons-Sears another major addition to the downtown core.

Trenton council has been following a policy of stimulating development in the Dundas area before permitting vast, sacrificial commercial growth in other parts of the community. The public supply is now bearing concrete results.

Council Approves Hillcrest Sewers

Construction of sanitary sewers on four streets in the Hillcrest area of the city has been approved by city council.

Cost of the work is estimated at $115,300 to be paid for under local improvements in 15 annual instalments.

The streets on which the sewer will be constructed include Byron, Clifford, Adam and Centre with 27 service drain connections.

Tenders for the work will be called in the new year. Total length of the sewer is approximately 2,800 feet.

Alderman Arthur Keegan said he was pleased that residents of the Hillcrest area were at last to get sewer service.

The Hillcrest sewer would link up with the Moira River trunk sewer to be constructed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Maskasey Clarifies Controversial Bill

Bryce Mackasey, federal minister of labor speaking to the Belleville Rotary Club last night claimed, "the 70s will be the age of even greater technological advance and labor had better be ready to face it."

But Mackasey came under serious criticism from both labor and management recently after attempting to pass a bill to this effect.

Bill C263 calls for measures to be taken before technological change is implemented in a firm, to meet with labor and discuss not the change but the effects of the change.

"Any labor group who attempts to stop this pattern of technological advance is stupid," said Mr. Mackasey. "What our responsibility is, is to soften the impact of the change."

Mr. Mackasey suggested that by transfers, attrition, and early retirement, changes can be made with few if any adverse effects.

In mild - summer, when the bill became public knowledge, the Chamber of Commerce (from municipal to national level) became angered with the implications of the bill and correspondence from the federal department of labor claiming the bill was an "infringement of the free enterprise system."

Last night during the supper hour, Frank Murray, president of the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors said, "now we have seen and spoken to Mr. Mackasey, the bill becomes more clear and the chamber may have to modify its earlier opinion of it."

Mr. Mackasey claimed the real bargain attached to the bill was the inherent quality that it would incite year-round negotiations rather than waiting for a labor contract to expire.

"The bill asks labor and management to deliberate over minor problems the whole year round, and not to wait for the end of the contract," he said. "There just isn't enough time at the end of the contract to argue over all the fine points without wasting a lot of valuable time."

MACKASEY 12 ma indeed on

"Go out and find the problem before the problem comes and finds you," said Mr. Mackasey. "This young country is one of the greatest in the world and yet we lose more man-days than any other country we trade with because of late bargaining."

While Mr. Mackasey claims his bill will not be a first line portant step towards better relations between labor and management he told Rotary members "no sooner can you legislate for happy labor relations than you can legislate for happy marital relations".

As a local example of heading off a problem before it comes to you, Mr. Mackasey related the story of the Jumbo Jet.

"In both England and the United States as of much as 15 months were wasted because of the introduction of the new plane.-Because of early confrontations in Canada, we lost one minute and 'all seem satisfied," said Mr. Mackasey.

"I have no intention of changing the philosophy of my bill but I will listen to any recommendations to serve as addendum to the principle of the bill," he said. "No matter what happens, that bill is a good one and it's going to go through."

Sidney Reduces Tax Discounts

The township of Sidney has reduced its interest penalty rate for prepayment of property taxes.

Ratepayers making 1972 payments in January will receive a penalty of seven per cent with the figure dropping to three and one half per cent for the period February 1 - June 30.

The corresponding rates for 1971 were eight and four per cent.

Councillor Reg McCurdy said at a council meeting Monday that the cut was necessary "to come more in line with current bank rates."

The seven per cent figure is still one per cent higher than most banks are offering, he added.

Due date for property taxes is September 30, 1972 after which a penalty of four per cent will be imposed.

The township grants interest for prepayment not only to save taxpayers money but also to obtain revenue for payment of its own taxes to Hastings county.

The system works somewhat like an investment policy. If the township is able to meet its 1972 requirements by January 1 as expected, the county will pay interest at a rate of one per cent less than the daily bank borrowing rate.

In other words, $100,000 paid at the beginning of the new year at a rate of five per cent will yield $5,000 in interest to the township, payable at the end of the year.

Fire Protection Proposal Presented by Committee

PICTON (Staff) — Fire protection for Prince Edward Heights will be supplied by the Picton fire department if the Ontario Department of public works approves an agreement drawn up by the council's fire and emergency committee.

Members of the fire committee met earlier this month with public works representatives G. Mounsteven, regional manager, and A. Richardson.

Mr. Mounsteven explained that the public works department intends to organize a 10 - man volunteer fire brigade from employees at

Parking Ban Will Remain

When traffic is flowing freely things should be left as is.

That's the attitude of Picton council, which Monday turned down solution that rush hour restricted parking on the north side of Bridge Street be removed.

The traffic committee at its last meeting passed the resolution to remove the rush hour parking ban on a trial basis.

But Monday Alderman Gerald Joyce said he couldn't buy the resolution.

"When traffic is moving okay, why change things," he asked.

Alderman Ben Corke took much the same attitude, claiming that the proposed trial period — two months and the year end — would not be a fair test.

Prince Edward Heights. These men will be trained in fire fighting and will man a fully equipped fire truck purchased by the public works department and based at Prince Edward Heights.

For at least six months the volunteer fire fighters will require the assistance of Picton fire chief Leonard Tripp or the deputy chief. Help from regular fire fighters also may be needed.

The tentative agreement drafted by the fire committee it was decided the Picton fire department should be paid a standby fee of $1,500 a year with an hourly rate of $25 for the Picton fire truck when it is called to fire emergencies.

Firefighters, under this agreement would receive $5 an hour.

The town of Picton is to be reimbursed in full for any damages to fire department equipment sustained while attending fire emergencies.

A further clause in the proposed agreement states that Picton shall be a regional arrangement to provide for the Ontario department of public works equipment and fire emergencies in Picton is the fire department's duty. The fighting equipment is in use in one of the municipalities now served through fire protection agreements.

The Picton fire department is expected to answer only alarms called in by authorized persons whose names are listed with the fire chief.

Any agreement between the town and the public works department must be compatible with other municipalities now served by fire agreements with the Picton fire department.

Deputy Reeve Ross Cartwright argued that the $1,500 annual standby fee was inadequate and suggested if crew demands are placed on the fire chief and his fellow workers, these men might be expected to demand higher salaries.

The proposal drew a nut was applauded by councillor Harry Abram who suggested that by saying no to it council would in effect, offer fire protection at no cost.

He remarked that if there was a fire emergency at Prince Edward Heights, he would be unable to sleep if Picton refused to assist, in the absence of an agreement.

"I don't know if you're scared to make a decision," he told fire chief Leonard Tripp who was present.

He suggested the Ontario Fire Marshal's office should make a survey of the fire fighting equipment needed by the Prince Edward Heights brigade.

Chief Tripp said he will want to take the responsibility of fire coverage for the government complex at Picton if that since it is a government holding, the fire marshal's office should dictate its needs.

Acting mayor at last night's council session Albert Plewis, reeve of Picton said he had confidence in chief Tripp and added that he should proceed with his own survey for presentation to the Ontario fire marshal.

Councillors voted in favor of adopting the report of the fire committee including the agreement and fire protection agreement.

BREAST CANCER: A MEDICAL DILEMMA
Radical surgery has long been regarded by most cancer specialists as the best treatment for breast cancer. But — as reported in the December issue of Reader's Digest — a growing minority of cancer experts believe that far less mutilating forms of treatment may give breast-cancer patients an equal, or even better, chance of survival. What lies behind this medical controversy? Should women consent to radical mastectomies? Or should they search instead for surgeons willing to perform more conservative and less disfiguring operations? How can breast-cancer patients maximize their chances of survival? For a frank and honest discussion of these and other questions, read CONTROVERSY OVER BREAST CANCER — in December Reader's Digest. Pick up your copy today.

Terms and Amortization — The Two Vital Parts Of a Mortgage

—Be sure you understand the difference since it could have great importance to you at a later date.

The term is the time a mortgage has to run before payment in full is required; amortization is the time required on a given loan mortgage to pay it off.

Sometimes they are identical, where each payment is a blend of principal and interest scheduled to make both be repaid in full at the same time. When the mortgage is up, the mortgage is also fully paid.

But if the term is shorter than the amortization period, and the buyer is not ready with the cash to pay off the balance, he could be in the position of having to remortgage the property. In prime residential property this does not usually present a problem. However, in rural or recreational property or raw land, new mortgages may be difficult to obtain except at very high rates.

A reputable Realtor will alert you to an understanding of your mortgages alternatives. His knowledge and experience and the counsel of your lawyer are vital safeguards you should make use of.

Economist Tells CMA Canada Must Set Objectives for Future

Canada's economic goals and objectives as set down by the Economic Council of Canada in 1963 have a valid role for future development of the country, but to stick to them like glue makes no sense at all.

"These objectives have become the stock-in-trade of politicians, economists and many royal commissions," Dr. S. Sarpkaya, economic consultant to the Canadian Bankers' Association told the Quinte Chamberce branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at the Four Seasons Hotel last night.

He insisted that the objectives have a role to play in economic development, but added, they were set down eight years ago. "Circumstances are no longer the same," he said.

Because they have been stuck to like glue, businessmen and individuals have been faced with "constant uncertainty".

The hue and cry now is for a clearer definition of national, regional and international objectives.

Dr. Sarpkaya raised the following questions:

— "Does Canada want foreign investment or not?

— "Will governments continued whether the inflationary spiral would speed up once controls were removed. If not removed, he predicted an increase might lead to a "police state in economic activity".

The New Economic Philosophy of the U.S. could be more harmful to Canada and others. "If it confines itself on the side of protectionism through super tariff and other trade restrictions."

3—Britain's entry into the European Economic Community would not greatly affect the exports from Canada. It would have had a greater effect in the early 1980s, however, because Canada's exports to Britain have dropped eight per cent. Canada will continue to export hard wheat, regardless of Britain's economic activity. At the same time, membership in the EEC would give the U.K. increased economic growth and more opportunity for Canadian goods and services to be exported.

3—Entry into new markets is of pressing concern to governments, businesses and bankers in Canada.

4—Legislation is gradually being taken over by "conservatives," or those who take the interests of the consumer to heart.

"Businessmen must first be convinced thoroughly on any legislation that might affect them . . . businessmen know their business best," he told the gathering.

"The other way around, causes a waste of time and money for both governments and businesses and creates unnecessary uncertainties."

5 — Is Canada encouraging the growth of Canadian-based multinational corporations. Dr. Sarpkaya expressed grave doubts that such an important move would ever get off the ground.

6 — One of Canada's worst failings is what the native of Turkey described as a "70 per cent complex". In his 11 years in Canada, he said he has become increasingly aware that Canadians look upon themselves as second-class.

"It is time that we have more confidence in the ability of our institutions, our industrialists, our artists, writers . . . simply, in our own work.

"Let us not forget that Canada's. We are sitting on a fortune — why not take advantage of it as much as possible, giving every opportunity to business and economic affairs, without nagging them to do so and so?

But before anyone can get a really firm hold in development, a more enlightened series of statistics must be procured of Canada, Dr. Sarpkaya said "Canada's performance is better than described by the EOC."

"Keeping the present inadequate figures and low-Canada outlook in view, you will no doubt observe the fact that there are some discrepancies between the economic potential of Canada and the potential of the EOC to appraise our economic potential and to advise us accordingly."

Asked by Robert Barrett, Alcan Company of Canada, Kingston, if unemployment levels would remain high, Dr. Sarpkaya said fairly consistent for another three to four years.

The economic expert said businessmen must rely on Canadians for personnel.

He also indicated it would n't be a bad idea if taxes for corporations and individuals to be lowered. This could be supplemented by increased international trade, much along the same lines as action by France, Germany and Japan.

Although there has been much talk about unemployment, little has been said about improved wage conditions in Canada, Dr. Sarpkaya said "incomes have risen at a higher rate than prices in the last 10 years and as a result, consumer spending potential has remained very strong."

Asked by Stephen S. Henshaw, Dontar, Trenton, if Canada would be better off to eliminate double earners in a family and thereby reduce unemployment, the economic advisor to Canadian banking institutions replied, "very few housewives have taken jobs men can do.

"They are taking jobs girls are doing . . . more of a clerical nature I don't think we'd necessarily be using men in these positions."

He jokingly referred to Mr. Hessian as a "negativist."

"The answer," he concluded,. "is to provide more jobs for unemployed men rather than reduce the working force."

Parking Authority To Add 50 Spaces

Additional off - street parking spaces for up to 50 more vehicles is to be provided in the city's downtown area as a result of negotiations being carried out by the city parking authority.

Authority chairman Mrs. Kay Manderville said today that options have been taken on the Pigden property on upper Front Street and also on the O'Connor and Reitman store properties just north of Bridge Street.

Purchase details on the Pigden property are expected to be completed soon and the old garage building will be razed and the land used for extension of the present Don Har parking lot.

This week city council concurred with the request of the parking authority to apply to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval to issue debentures in the amount of $35,000 for purchase and development of the O'Connor and Reitman properties.

These two properties will be used to extend the south parking lot and possibly lead to an entranceway to Bridge Street.

Britain and France, which could see little use in the assembly action, were among the 10 abstentions.

Canada and Pakistan called during the debate for UN supervision of any ceasefire. Canada apparently was laying the groundwork for UN action in getting some kind of presence on the East Pakistan border to make any future ceasefire effective.

G. L. Hearn, deputy Canadian ambassador, also said it was not enough just to call for a ceasefire and withdrawal and that the UN must deal with the political situation that had brought about the war.

Criminal Records Act Does Not Fulfill Purpose—M P

By PARMER TISSINGTON

OTTAWA — According to one MP, the best intentions of Parliament are not always translated into appropriate action by the government.

Robert Coates, a Conservative MP from Nova Scotia, had charged in the Commons a comparatively new piece of federal legislation called the Criminal Records Act is a sham and a farce. Passed in 1968, the legislation is designed to expunge criminal records of people who have been convicted, committed to jail, served their time and have for a number of years and who, in the popular phraseology, "have paid their debt to society."

The member of Parliament who is largely responsible for instigating the legislation and piloting it through the Commons' justice and legal affairs committee is Welland, Ont. lawyer Donald Tolmie. As you may guess, Mr. Tolmie does not agree with Mr. Coates.

Mr. Coates charged that the legislation doesn't do anything significant for the reformed offender and that criminal records are not expunged, but are kept by police files and can be re-opened at any time. He attempted, without success, to get unanimous consent to send the bill back to the justice committee for amendment. He said what many people—like police officials—have been telling him for a number of years and who, in the popular phraseology, "have paid their debt to society."

He cited the case which alerted him to the deficiencies in the act involved a constituent who had been convicted of possession of stolen property eight or nine years ago. Finding employment as a salesman, the man learned that he had to be bonded—and he sought a pardon for this purpose. It took eight months before it came through but even then he realized it would be useless since the bonding company would investigate his past, uncover the old conviction and turn him down.

Mr. Coates first raised the matter through a private member's bill which he took before the committee. Later, the government introduced its own legislation, incorporating many of Mr. Tolmie's suggestions. The Welland MP was chairman of the justice committee when the government bill was examined, and finally adopted by Parliament.

Mr. Tolmie admits the bill is not perfect. In fact, he has since introduced an amendment to it. But he contends it goes a long way toward improving the situation compared to what existed before.

"A legislative act cannot extinguish the fact that a person, once a person was convicted of a criminal act. The purpose of tabling the bill does remove the discrimination in federal government employment, in bonding, and in permitting people with old records to enter the United States," Mr. Tolmie explains.

As an example, the federal government has changed its employment application forms by removing a question which asked whether the applicant had ever been convicted of an offence.

It is true the actual written records of a person's offence are not destroyed. But they are kept sealed and it requires application to a judge before any law enforcement or other agency can gain access to them. A person may, in fact, destroy his own records if he wishes, but only in the most serious circumstances, such as threat to national security.

Mr. Coates and Mr. Tolmie are agreed on one thing. This is that applications under the act are taking far too long to process and that all applications require investigation by the RCMP. Such investigations require detailed and expert questioning, without causing embarrassment, to establish that the applicant has indeed reformed.

But I suspect one of the major problems lies in the fact that while the federal act covers people who are employed under government jurisdiction in their employment, a great many others are not covered. What is required is that such provincial legislation as is necessary to the federal legislation to make all applications with respect records a better break.

In addition, I have been told by the authorities that the department is not "married" to the act and is willing to entertain suggestions for changes to improve it. Between Mr. Coates and Mr. Tolmie informed people with old criminal records may get an even better deal in the future.

P M in Washington

A two-hour meeting can scarcely be expected to solve all of Canada's outstanding differences with the United States and vice versa but Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon are reported in any event to have had a "cordial and good-humored" exchange. They ranged over the controversial economic issues affecting the two countries as well as the international situation with special emphasis on the India-Pakistan conflict.

In one of those carefully guarded, rather abstruse statements — this one attributed to Canadian officials — which customarily follow such parleys Mr. Trudeau is said to have "put a general across-the-board proposal to Mr. Nixon to find out from him the long-term U.S. attitude toward Canada." To this the Prime Minister "received a response which he felt was reassuring."

Mr. Trudeau doubtless will be reporting in more detail to the Commons on his return on what transpired. One thing is sure, the Prime Minister appeared to be very much less in awe of the President than as the shy individual he was when visiting Washington shortly after taking office. There is a revealing picture of the two leaders sitting side by side and Mr. Trudeau is seen raising a forefinger as he makes a point to Mr. Nixon.

Along with the greater assurance Mr. Trudeau also has a new image so far as the Americans are concerned. He wore the familiar trench coat to Washington but there was the long hair, too, and sideburns with which we have become familiar and which are said to have intrigued the Americans. Coincidentally, which the Prime Minister and the President have in common as individuals is their profession. They are both lawyers.

Tax Jungle

To hear it from the Opposition, Canada is one of the most over-governed and over-taxed countries in the world. The proposed new taxation system, moreover is so complex and so riddled with amendments that even the Government does not understand it. To hear it from Finance Minister Benson is a man of monumental patience who nevertheless looks as if he would sometimes like to blow his top, the light at the end of the tunnel is just as far distant. But does Mr. Benson say so . . . does he blow his top? The questions get hot? Of course not. Politicians may be seething underneath but they must always keep their cool.

Nevertheless there is ample cause for dismay as the Government and public level over this mass that is taxation. Some firms are complaining that they will no longer be competitive vis-a-vis their United States counterparts. There is one mining firm for instance which is reported to be moving its headquarters to Holland. The tax climate in that country, an executive of the firm said on a CBC radio program at the weekend, is "hospitable." Hardly an accolade that can be bestowed on our own complicated system and getting more complex with the evolution of each bureaucratic whim.

About the only thing that Mr. Benson has ever said on this score that really has the average Canadian taxpayer knowing where he stands was the remark attributed to him by critics: "If you're going to commit suicide you will kill you." Amid a welter of non-sayings and non-explanations relating to the tax maelstrom that one at least has the merit of being pithy, even memorable and guaranteed to instill as much confidence as did that other one, courtesy of the Prime Minister, about the so-called "Just Society."

Meanwhile we are edging closer to the brink of a capital gains tax. A Toronto firm specializing in this fresh imposition reminds us that January 1 is Valuation Day when we are required to begin keeping a record of everything with a resale potential, including things like land, pictures, works of art generally, jewellery, stamp and coin collections to name but a few.

What bothers us about this capital gains tax is the lack of communication on the subject. It is probably true to say that outside such experts as those in the Toronto the rest of know practically nothing. It is time Ottawa told us something about it — or is it all subject to amendment like so much else in the tax jungle?

Escape

The age of adventure is still with us. An advertisement in the personal column of The Globe and Mail draws attention to a Land Rover expedition to explore the southern Sahara. The expedition is scheduled to leave for Germany I. And the best of luck to them; a little desert sand will be a contrast to the waving palms of Florida which many seek as escape from the Canadian winter.

Telephone Cost Increases Under Fire

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Among the corporations with a penchant for wanting to increase the cost of their service to the general public is Bell Canada. Telephone Company must rate as one of the most persistent.

It seems that "Mother Bell" would have us believe that every increase in subscribers rates are a necessary evil in order to maintain service standards. In fact one is led to the conclusion that dear old Bell is in financial difficulty.

Yet the other day George Thompson, one of Bell's senior executives in this area, calmly announced that the company last year made a net profit of $88,600,000. "Quite a handsome sum — in fact, if such pleasing proportions it is difficult to imagine why the company feels it has to ask for another hike in the phone rates. Mr. Thompson, who was the guest on the CJBQ open line program went on to inform listeners that Bell also had a "rainy day" fund which it was necessary to keep topped up against any emergency that might arise. This little nest egg is in the order of $230,000,000. Mr. Thompson did not indicate what sort of emergency the company was preserving this fortune for. Perhaps the company feels its employees may one day become militant and ask for a bigger slice of the cake than they now get.

Whatever the reason it is hard to justify these increases when the company is doing so well. When asked why, in the light of all the advances in telecommunications, the wealthy Bell system was still unable to provide a callbox caller with emergency service free of charge, Mr. Thompson said it would cost "millions" to do so.

It is easy to find yourself in an emergency, needing a policeman, an ambulance or the fire brigade when resort to a public callbox is the only means at hand. Yet, even if you had $1,000 in your pocket, it you could not come up with a miserable dime to feed the machine, you could conceivably die by the roadside. So much for "Mother Bell's" claim to be one of the most advanced systems in the world.

It has been suggested that this company is the best organized serve the interests of Canadians if it were placed under public ownership. I think the time gets nearer, year by year.

VD Rate Said to Be Of Epidemic Proportions

Brantford Expositor

The venereal disease rate in Ontario is fast approaching epidemic proportions. A total of 9,838 cases of syphilis and gonorrhea were reported in the province in 1970 — an increase of 23 per cent in one year. A further 8,788 cases were reported in the first eight months of this year, compared to 6571 during the corresponding period in 1970.

These figures, moreover do not reflect the full seriousness of the problem. "Because VD is a 'hush-hush' disease," notes a provincial health officer, "probably no more than 10 per cent of gonorrhea and 20 per cent of syphilis cases are officially recorded." If these estimates are accurate, there could be as many as 100,000 VD cases in the province.

But although VD is now the province's most prevalent communicable disease next to the common cold, the consequences of contracting gonorrhea or syphilis are not widely known. If left untreated, the former can cause sterility, arthritis or chronic inflammation of the pelvic organs. Syphilis is more insidious. The victim may appear healthy for a time but eventually is likely to suffer blindness, coma. The victim may appear paralysis or heart disease.

While most Ontario VD cases were reported last year among the 15-24 age group, the incidence was greatest among 20-to-24-year-olds (38 per cent), 25-to-29-year-olds (30 per cent) and teenagers (18 per cent). This indicates that the government is making little headway in its efforts to curb the spread of VD through an educational campaign in the schools. Some despairing health officials are now urging that VD tests and treatment be made compulsory for all high school and college students.

Brightening an otherwise bleak outlook, however is a prediction made this week by the Ontario government's chief venereal disease VD problem. Dr. Ralph Persad told a Toronto symposium that a vaccine against syphilis probably will be developed within 10 to 15 years and a vaccine against gonorrhea even sooner. Dr. Brant County Medical Officer Dr.

William Page observes, this would be an invaluable weapon in the war against these two diseases.

Youth Centre Suggested

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to express my views on the supposed delinquency problem at the Belleville Plaza. It is my opinion that the plaza operators are going to eliminate some of their problems with the new bylaw. But even though this may solve the problem the plaza it is going to move to a different area of the east end.

Most of the teenagers that frequent the Plaza mean no harm, but are just seeking companionship and recreation. There are very few trouble-makers among them. Since there is no form of free recreation in Belleville except "hanging around" these people cannot be blamed for it.

Perhaps something should be done about this. The new bylaw simply transfers the problem. Perhaps Belleville needs an answer to this. What about a youth room? How about it citizens?

East Bengal's Alienation from the Pakistani Nation

M. M. Khilnani in Indian and Foreign Review

Cultural emasculation, political subjugation and economic exploitation practised systematically on 75 million people of East Bengal has created the phenomenon of Bangla Desh. Different ways East Bengal and West Pakistan have never been one country. Even at its strongest, the bond between the two was somewhat tenuous. They are physically more than 1,000 miles apart, the people speak different languages, have different cultures, and different economies.

Since the formation of the state of Pakistan 24 years back, the East Bengalis have derived little benefit from the association. It has become increasingly apparent that the economic and political interests of East Bengal have been systematically subordinated to those of West Pakistan. According to a panel of experts to the Planning Commission of the Government of Pakistan, although the income (per capita) income in the West was 32 per cent higher than in the East in 1959-60, Government's instruments of tariffs, import quotas, industrial licenses i.e. foreign aid budgeting, and investment directives have been so framed to direct investment and to develop high-cost industries in West Pakistan. The private industry is guaranteed by an East Bengali market had captive behind the tariff walls and import quotas.

By 1947, when the two halves of the country, West Pakistan and East Bengal, set out on their hazardous course as a new State, East Bengal was actually better off than the West in a number of important respects. Its jute crop, which to this day provides Pakistan with its biggest single source of foreign exchange, was at that time the only product of any importance the country had to offer to world trade. The jute mills around Dacca and Chittagong in the East controlled virtually the only industry of which Pakistan could boast, and, as far as the future was concerned, it is East Bengal's flat and well-watered plains that have been developed for irrigation for development than relatively arid West. What East Bengal did not have, however, and has never possessed to any significant extent until today, was political power — and it was the exercise of power by the leadership in the West that started the rot.

The first blow to East Bengal's economy was the cutting off for political reasons of the trade between that Bengal and the neighboring Indian state of West Bengal. The cut meant that Pakistan's jute could no longer be shipped for processing to India, and that on both sides of the frontier steps had to be taken to build up self-sufficient industries.

By 1948 time East Bengal had finished developing its jute processing industry in mid-1950 it was starting to notice the loss of its biggest single market—India—for its raw product. At the same time, too, it was feeling the effects of increasing industrialization in the West. This was based on the transfer, unprecedentedly favourable in terms, of Muslim-owned industries from Bombay to Karachi, which soon began to overtake Dacca and other cities of East Bengal as the commercial and economic heart of Pakistan.

Through 50 per cent of all Pakistanis live in East Bengal, its share of Central Government development expenditure has fluctuated between a low of 20 per cent during 1950-55 and a high of 30 per cent in 1965-70. His torically, mainly for this reason, Pakistan's export earnings have been earned by East Bengal's products, mainly jute, hides and skins. East Bengal has received an even smaller share of private investment than the 20 per cent, its share of foreign imports (which are financed by export earnings and foreign aid) has remained between 25 and 30 per cent. This, while it represents a share of imports and investment much larger than provided in successive percentiles for all of Pakistan's people. In fact, it has allowed the development of jute-processing industries, which, ironically, have prospered largely because of tariffs and quotas imposed on East Bengal's behalf.

Although East Bengal's balance of payments surplus has been used to finance the West's deficit on foreign account leading to a net transfer of resources, estimated to be approximately $2.4 billion over the period 1948-49 to 1969-69. The economic plight of the East, which places it among the eight poorest countries in the world, can be partially attributed to the very fact that it is tied to the economy of Pakistan.

The tidal wave of refugees from East Pakistan to India which has recently exceeded 8.5 million, and is still growing by tens of thousands each day, presents humanitarian, political and economic problems of unprecedented proportions for India as well as for the international community.

A titanic tragedy witnessed by the world in the closing days of March this year was only a culmination of the oppressions of unbridled brutishness which the people of East Bengal had been undergoing soon after the partition of the sub-continent in August 1947.

Belleville Said Unique in Health Care

Dr. R. M. Anderson, while speaking to the Belleville Kiwanis Club last night said, "Belleville is one place in Canada where all these services are brought under one roof."

Dr. Anderson was referring to the position he now fills as medical co-ordinator for the Belleville General Hospital. Through his office, the pager work is done for medical cases, extended care, self care and home nursing.

"The Queens Motel, serving as a halfway house between the hospital and the home is only one part of a scheme to make more efficient the business of getting someone well," said Dr. Anderson.

Dr. Anderson said that for too long health services have operated on a non-system and it is surprising that it didn't go bankrupt long ago.

"One of the saddest parts of the situation is that we are not making best possible use of our skilled personnel such as nurses and doctors," he said. "Doctors are wasting as much as 50 per cent of their time doing things that could be done by less qualified staff, especially in their own offices."

The intent of the Queen's Motel is to make available more beds in the hospital that are needed by more urgent cases, and to relieve doctors to these more urgent needs.

"If this system works in Belleville, it will be used across the country," said Dr. Anderson. "That's what we are doing here, trying to prove something like this can work."

On a financial tangent, Dr. Anderson said, "In our given capital budget, we are spending as much as we can on medical care. We have reached the limit."

Dr. Anderson contended that an equally efficient care program can be given to a patient at the Queens as in the hospital if the patient is recuperating.

"If something like this is not done now, more and more we are going to realize that we do not have enough doctors to meet the demands of the public," said Dr. Anderson.

Dr. Anderson claimed the demands are increasing unusually because of a number of factors including increase in population, sophistication of the general public, economic barriers torn down by financial aid and it is simply easier to get to a doctor.

"People are saying it is not a privilege but a right to have top rate medical care," he said. "If we don't make better use of our doctors as they stand, we must almost double our medical school output and that is as likely as me becoming the Pope of Rome tomorrow".

Publicity claim the Queen's Motel is the greatest invention since the wheel, and "let's face it, it has to work, we are coming to the end of the road," said Dr. Anderson.

The Local Initiatives Program is part of the Federal Government's Special Employment Plan. It is designed to encourage groups, organizations and municipalities to start worthwhile projects like building a rink; or providing services for the elderly or handicapped; or improving substandard housing.

Projects must give employment to people who might otherwise be unemployed and must be of a non-profit nature.

If your community hasn't applied for a project, start some action now. Applications are processed as they are received so it's best to move quickly. The deadline for applications is Jan. 31, 1972.

Toward Growing Healthy Personalities

By DORIS CLARK

Healthy personality develop ment in children depends in large measure on the character of the parents' attitudes and the nature of the parent-child relationship.

These important factors, however, are so interrelated with numerous others that parents should be supported and should seek support in their efforts to bring up a healthy generation rather than blaming themselves or being blamed," — For Every child a Healthy Personality, A digest of the fact finding report to the Mideentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, 1050)

What better argument do we need for calling kids play all the knowledge we can find when it comes to explaining Johnny's fist-fights or Mary's petty thefts, and using the professionals in our midst [social workers, or psychologists or teachers or psychiatrists] to work out with us how to handle them?

Dear Doris: I am one of the many women that are going through the change of life. I go to the doctor for shots and pills but still feel I should know more about it. You know how we can all get so depressed and I'm sure my husband isn't the only one who doesn't understand us.

I sometimes wonder if it wouldn't do me good to have a talk with someone who works with women with the same trouble as me. — Not Understood.

Dear Not Understood: Right! You couldn't do better than to let down your hair with someone who has been through it all; or with a woman who spends her entire working life helping with "female troubles".

"There's nothing abnormal about the menopause. But if it so happens that a woman gets a bit irritable, or forgetful, or just plain unreasonable she may seem abnormal, even to the husband who has been briefed on the subject.

You might: (1) Send for my leaflet Facing Forty (stocking 20 cents and self-addressed envelope); (2) find an older woman in the family or around the corner who would gladly chat with you about how she got through it all; (3) ask your doctor for an opportunity to talk with a gynecologist; (4) get a book on the topic from your library (I can supply the name of a good one).

If I were you I'd do all four. Then I'd add a fifth: get thinky to read Facing Forty, too.

Confidential to Anita: Only a doctor can tell you for sure whether your feeling around ended in pregnancy. It only takes one sperm out of millions to find its way up the vaginal tract.

Far better to take courage in hand, turn in at the doctor's office during consulting hours and get his verdict.

From the way you described it to me, there is a good chance you are in the clear. So for me to give you false reassurance would be folly.

Ann Landers

Champagne Served Despite Objections

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are sitting here looking at each other, asking one another if we should have handled the situation differently. Neither of us has an answer. Have you one?

Our daughter wanted a big wedding. We have a large house and agreed to it with the understanding that no liquor would be served since we do not permit alcohol in our home. She tried to persuade us that champagne isn't alcohol and that no wedding is complete without it, but we stood firm.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party, instead of standing in a line to accept congratulations, sat themselves down and proceeded to open bottles of champagne which the groom's parents had brought. I was shocked. So was my husband. Several of our friends were also astonished since our views are well known.

Neither my husband nor I had the courage to say anything for fear our daughter and her in-laws might walk out in a huff. They ignored everybody, including us. When the guests began to leave they didn't even get up to say goodbye.

Was there something we could have done? If so, what? Please tell us since our youngest girl will be getting married next year and she could easily do the same thing.—Salt Lake Parents

Dear S.L.P.: Your daughter and her in-laws behaved in an outrageous manner but I doubt that you could have done anything short of creating a scene. Make it clear to your younger daughter that champagne is alcohol, that there will be none at her wedding, and make sure she agrees.

Dear Ann Landers: May I comment please, on the letter from the woman who observed that frequently, after a couple adopts a baby, the woman becomes pregnant. She said it is downright shattering, she feels, to things people say to a couple who has adopted and then finds out they will have a natural child. Her examples were eye-openers.

I was reminded of a lovely statement attributed to the late Daniel A. Poling of the Christian Herald magazine. He said with a twinkle: "Two of our four children were adopted. I forget which ones they are."—Ohio Mother

Dear O.: That lovely line reflects the sentiments of millions of adoptive parents. Thanks for passing it along.

Dear Ann Landers: For an fair back as I can remember I've never been able to get my parents to give me a straight answer. When I ask mom if I can go somewhere she says: "Talk to your father," and when I ask him he says: "It's up to your mother." I go back to her and she says: "We'll see."

Three days ago I asked for permission to go to a football game 40 miles from here. My folks couldn't decide and now my place in the car is no longer available. I asked my dad straight away why he didn't say yes or no and he said: "If I say yes it looks like I'm too permissive. If I say no it looks like I'm too rigid, so I stay in the middle."

I think it's a rotten shame that I have to be a nervous wreck because my folks don't have the guts to say yes or no. Please express your views. I'll bet there are loads of teen-agers who have the same problem.—Wishy-Washied and Fed Up

Dear W., and F.: I, too, think it's a rotten shame that a teenager has to be a nervous wreck because his parents don't have the guts to say yes or no. Thanks for finding just the right words.

A Current Harvest of Winter Vegetables

By ALICE DENHOFF

Out of the harvest's cornucopia come tempting phone salads, copper-skinned, orange-fleshed sweet potatoes and little Brussels sprouts, which come nested in little cartons. These late fall fresh vegetables bring a bounty of nutrition to your table. Sprouts are especially high in vitamin C; low-calorie squash is vitamin A, as are sweet potatoes, the latter one of the most all-around nutritious foods available anywhere. Do right by these good vegetables with dishes such as:

BRUSSELS SPROUTS AMANDINE

1 basket Brussels Sprouts (1½ pounds)
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons toasted almonds, slivered

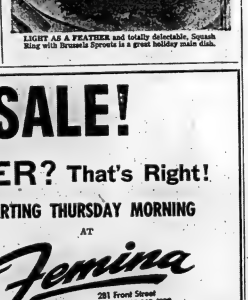
Wash sprouts. Trim off imperfect leaves and bits of stem ends. Soak 30 minutes in cold salted water, using 1 teaspoon salt to one quart water. Place in saucepan with salt and sugar and one inch boiling water. Cover. Cook 10 to 15 minutes or until tender, lifting lid occasionally to help vegetable retain its green color.

Drain off water. Combine butter, lemon juice and almonds. Add to sprouts and stir very gently to mix.

Squash Ring is a good holiday dinner suggestion. To cook squash perfectly, cut in half and scoop out seeds and strings. Cut into two- or three-inch pieces and pare off outside skin. Cook, covered, in small amount of boiling salted water until tender, 25 to 30 minutes. Mash or press through sieve. Squash may be cooked in pressure cooker if desired.

SQUASH RING WITH BRUSSELS SPROUTS

4 cups, beaten
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1-3 cup fine, dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon grated fresh lemon rind
1 teaspoon grated fresh onion
3 cups cooked fresh squash
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
Brussels Sprouts Amandine
Chopped chives

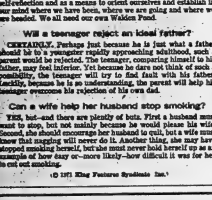


Mix first seven ingredients. Stir in next three ingredients. Turn into well-greased six-cup ring mold. Set in pan of warm water and bake in 350-degree oven for 30 to 60 minutes or until custard is set.

Remove from pan of water and let stand 10 minutes. Unmold on to platter and fill centre with Brussels Sprouts Amandine. Sprinkle squash ring with chopped chives. Serves six to eight.

SWEET POTATO AND ORANGE CASSEROLE

2 pounds fresh sweet potatoes (4 cups mashed)
1-3 cup sugar
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated fresh orange rind
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind (optional)
½ cup fresh orange juice



Cook potatoes in skins in boiling water for 20 minutes; peel and mash while hot; measure four cups. Add remaining ingredients. Beat until fluffy. Turn into a buttered (one-quart) casserole. Bake in 350-degree F. oven 30 minutes or until brown. Serves eight.

LIGHT AS A FEATHER and totally delectable, Squash Ring with Brussels Sprouts is a great holiday main dish.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Is it wrong to relish loneliness?

ONLY if someone would rather be off by himself most of the time. In that case, he would be wise to regard his desire for loneliness as a symptom of potential personality trouble. Other than that, almost all of us enjoy a quiet period which we can use for self-reflection and as a means to orient ourselves and establish in our mind where we have been, where we are going and where we are headed. We all need our own Walden Pond.

Will a teenager reject an ideal father?

CERTAINLY. Perhaps just because he is just what a father should be to a youngster rapidly approaching adulthood, such a parent would be rejected. The teenager, expressing himself to his father, may feel inferior. Yet because he dare not think of such a possibility, the teenager will try to find fault with his father. Luckily, because he is an understanding, the parent will help his teenager overcome his rejection of his own ideal.

Can a wife help her husband stop smoking?

YES, but—and there are plenty of buts. First a husband must want to stop, but not mainly because he would please his wife. Second, she should encourage her husband to quit, but a wife must know that nagging will never do it. Another thing, she may have stopped smoking herself, but she must never hold herself up as an example of how easy—more likely how difficult it was for her to cut out smoking.

Accordion Presentation

BCIVS auditorium was the locale of the fourth annual concert presented by Arden's Accordion Academy on Dec. 4. Accordion students of A. L. Lewis and assistant teacher Miss Ruth Billes and piano students of assistant teacher Miss Carolyn Lewis presented a delightful and varied program. Rashurn Scott acted as MC for the event.

The versatility of the accordion was evidenced in the selections played, ranging from marches and polkas to the classical. The Cad Goes, a quarter composed of guitars, accordion and drums played a medley of dance music and 1 various instrumental solos, duets, trios and band arrangements exhibited the musical abilities of all the students.

The accordion concert orchestra, conducted by Arden Lewis, highlighted the program with their rendition of Aquarius and The Sound of Music.

The recital was well-attended and the presentation was well-received.

Getting Up to Speak Is Problem

CLINY, Alta. (CP) — Getting up in front of the class to speak was the hardest thing to learn for 12 Indian women, representatives of their reserves, who attended a course in teaching household management.

"Taking leadership is our biggest problem," said Connie Rabbit Carrier, smiling a little self-consciously during the session of the five-day course.

"We had trouble at first talking to the group, but there has been a lot of improvement."

The course, a joint project of the Alberta agriculture department and the federal Indian affairs department, was part of a series of week-long courses to prepare the women to help district home economists teach home management classes on the reserves.

Barbara Stroh, home economist from Camrose, co-ordinated the program, which included sewing, cooking, budgeting, nutrition, family life and leaders hip courses.

The women, who came from the reserves south of Edmonton, were mostly chosen from homemaker groups on their own reserves, said Vera Macdonald of Edmonton, provincial home economist.

The women will be mainly responsible for organizing women's courses on their reserves, providing transportation in most cases, a district home aide to assist with the Indian women holding practical work sessions.

"Some of the older ladies don't know how to speak English," said Geraldine Wolf of Cardston. "We'll interpret and explain things."

The Indian affairs department is arranging to pay the women for their work in the communities, Mrs. Macdonald said.

During the course, which was held at a residential school on this reserve 60 miles east of Edmonton, the women made a shopping expedition as part of their budgeting and management course. They set up a bulletin board showing some of the things they learned about comparative shopping and prices.

They found standard grades are cheaper but just as nutritious as fancy grades in canned goods, for example. Skim milk powder for cooking is less than half the price of the unprocessed milk powder.

They also found that co-operative bulk buying would save money.

During the week, the class prepared all its own meals, said Mrs. Stroh. Each woman made a stretch-and-sew garment and knitted a pair of slippers.

The women, most of whom are married with families of up to seven children, expressed satisfaction with the development of their practical skill in sewing and cooking.

Most said they thought the courses on the reserves would greatly help the other women.

One problem the women hope to bring out at the courses on the reserves involves day-care centres. Centres are operating at Saddle Lake and Glendon, but most of the women said they hope to inhale the centres in their own communities.
